Lilies for Easter

NOW READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDER

Randall's Easter crop of Lilies is famous—everybody who ever has tried them knows that there never are any finer and seldom any as good. For years and years Randall's Lilies have been the standard by which all other Lilies have been judged. Some years one grower and some years another will claim to have Lilies "as good as Randall's," but Randall's Lilies always have been acknowledged as the leader. These are true Giganteums—the best bulbs money would buy, forced by the best grower we know. Naturally, we have the best flowers. GENTLEMEN: In looking over our advertising records for the last few years, we find that your publication has made a remarkable record. Since we began to advertise with you in 1907, for every dollar we have spent we have received $8.74 in direct sales. This leaves out, of course, all the indirect influences which our advertising has had, which, no doubt, amounts to a great deal.

We think it only due you to let you know these facts, and we will be glad at any time to testify to the value of your publication as a medium for reaching high-grade florists.

Thanking you for your many favors, we are,

Yours very truly,

Our No. 22 is an entirely new shape, a great seller. For Easter plant combinations. The price includes the liner.

No. 22, 5 inches across bottom, 10 inches across top, 9 inches deep, handle 18 inches high (see cut). Price.....$1.40 each.

And perhaps the best seller of all—Our No. 53. Nest of 4 baskets, for 6-inch, 7-inch, 8-inch and 9-inch pots, one of each size (see cut). Price.....$2.50 per nest.

All the above are in natural color. Any special or fancy color supplied at 15 per cent extra if you mention this adv.—the regular charge for special colors is 50 per cent extra.

GENTLEMEN: In looking over our advertising records for the last few years, we find that your publication has made a remarkable record. Since we began to advertise with you in 1907, for every dollar we have spent we have received $8.74 in direct sales. This leaves out, of course, all the indirect influences which our advertising has had, which, no doubt, amounts to a great deal.

We think it only due you to let you know these facts, and we will be glad at any time to testify to the value of your publication as a medium for reaching high-grade florists.

Thanking you for your many favors, we are,

FLORIST.....

A NEGATIVE SUGGESTION.

The Review has received a page from the Public Ledger marked "From the Philadelphia Publicity Bureau. Get the trade busy on this negative suggestion. Charles Henry Fox." The "negative suggestion" is an item headed "Lower the High Cost of Dying," under a Cincinnati date line, and reads as follows:

"A novel way to decrease the 'high cost of dying' has been devised by the board of managers of St. Xavier's church, one of the largest Catholic parishes in southern Ohio. An announcement has been made that in the future no funerals to which flowers are permitted to be sent will be permitted held in the church. It also was announced that in the place of flowers the parish, at its own expense, will issue memorial cards to all the friends of the deceased, announcing the death and a brief biography of the deceased. One of the managers stated that it was the beginning of a nation-wide movement that has been started in the last month."

Every once in a while an item like this finds its way into print, and almost always The Review receives several copies, from florists who fear the worst is about to happen. It is, as Mr. Fox says, a "negative suggestion," and one not to be advertised by opposition, but The Review has several times stated its opinion that no great amount of harm can come of such efforts to do away with flowers at funerals. The Review told the trade not to get excited about the fad of wearing artificial corsage flowers; that it would soon die out; and it did. Don't be alarmed at "Please omit flowers" in funeral notices—they won't help, but so long as flowers are recognized as "messengers of sentiment" their use will not be curtailed to any appreciable extent by the acts of those whose only idea is to cut the cost.

EASTER PLANTS.

Question: Will the early Easter reduce the number of good blooming plants that will be ready?

Answer: It will not. The plants will be finer and there will be more of them than ever before.

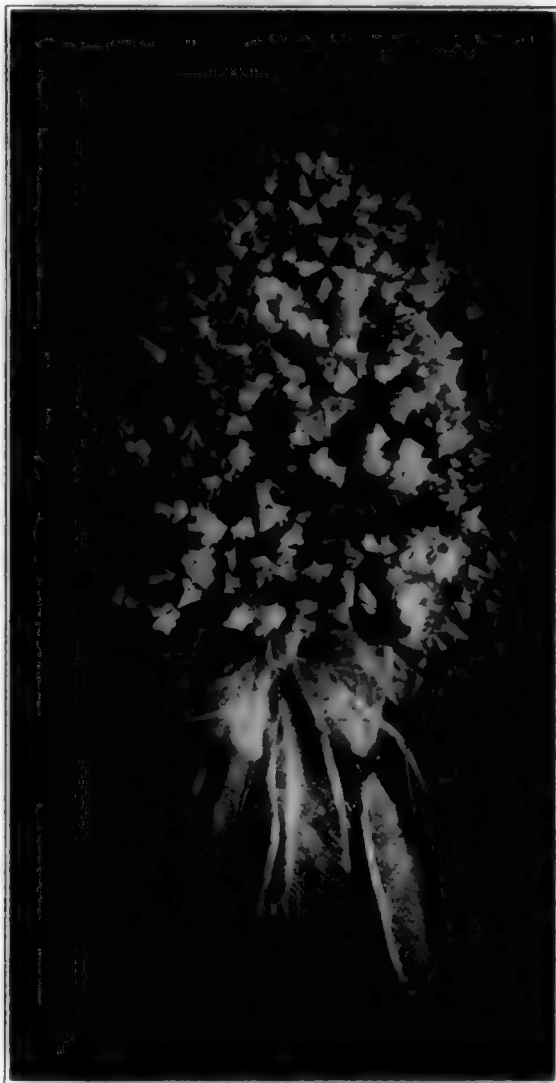

These are facts that foreshadow an immense business this month, for with the stock assured our retailers all over the country have the energy and brains to meet the unusual conditions of this extraordinarily early Easter. The stock, aided by cultural skill and excellent weather, is in wonderfully fine condition. There has actually been no forcing; the stock has been brought on naturally. The idea that a plant must be hard enough to stand shipping, to stand well in the store and then to stand well in home or church has put an end to high temperatures in flowering most high grade plants.

The lily is first among Easter plants today, as it was when it was first brought into general notice. There are practically no diseased lilies on the benches today. Giganteums form the bulk of the stock, but there are a good many multiflorums and a good many Formosas. These three types give a range of heights as comprehensive as the different sizes afford variety in the number of buds to each plant.

The azalea once came next to the lily in order of popularity as an Easter plant. It does so no longer, through no fault of its own. It has gone down several places because it is less satisfactory than formerly, both from a cultural and from a monetary standpoint.

The rose stands next to the lily today. Its advance is due mainly to the progress made in developing the Wichuraiana type. Crimson Rambler still stands at the head of the varieties suitable for Easter forcing. Next come the pink rambles, then the baby class—Phyllis, Orleans, Mrs. Taft, and Mrs. Cutbush are all coming forward as fine sorts. The hybrid roses, led by Magna Charta, Frau Karl Druschki and Soleil d'Or, are also good. The hybrid teas include Richmond, Killarney and a few others.

The hydrangea shows an advance equal to that of the rose. The new French varieties, seen in small numbers last season, have taken their place side by side with Otaksa. There are eight or nine of these varieties. All can be had in quantity. The flowers are not quite so large as on Otaksa, but the colors are simply exquisite in their soft clearness. The plants are, as a rule, exceedingly well budded, making them showy. The bulk of the hydrangeas, both standard and novel, are in salable medium sizes.

Astilbe Japonica Gladstone, commonly called spiraea, has crowded out nearly all other varieties. They are so fine this year that there is little left to desire. A few of the pink spiraea, Queen Alexandra, are seen.

Genistas in the larger sizes are superior to anything offered last season. The best are remarkably fine, the result of culture and a cool temperature steadily maintained.

Rhododendrons show the result of skill on both sides of the water. The plants were good when they came, and they have had good treatment since, with no need of fire heat to bring them on and spoil them now.

These are the principal Easter plants grown in great quantity for wholesaling. Daisies, deutzias, hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, valley, lilacs, etc., are grown in smaller quantities and are less seen in the big markets, although often grown by the retailers on their own places.

The stock for Easter is so fine that a good Easter is in sight, the battle half won, for with good stock it is less difficult to command success. Phil.

SWEET PEAS IN SPRAYS.

Since the introduction of the winter-flowering sweet peas, and the long-stemmed varieties, retail florists have come to use the flower for practically every purpose, even for funeral sprays. There are those who think the use of sweet peas for funeral purposes will detract from the popularity of the flower for corsage and other finer uses, but this seems an exaggerated view. At any rate, the modern sweet pea makes a handsome funeral spray, as is shown by the accompanying illustration, prepared from a photograph supplied by J. L. Raske, a Chicago retailer.

HER TWENTY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY.

A recent issue of a newspaper published in Muskogee, Okla., tells a story—presumably a true story—about a florist in that city who unintentionally entered into conflict with Cupid and almost upset the little love-god's plans. The florist in the case was Oscar Werner, proprietor of the Hyde Park Greenhouses. Another leading character in the tale was a young man who had frequently purchased flowers from Mr. Werner. Still another character of consequence was the young lady to whom many of the roses had been sent.

On the occasion referred to in the story, the young lady had attained her twenty-fourth birthday. Of course, there was nothing peculiar or remarkable about that; twenty-fourth birthdays are common enough, since every person of mature years must have had one. Still, it is important, in this instance, to remember the lady's age, for the young man resolved to send her just two dozen roses, one for each year of her life.

So he sent the order for the two dozen roses, with the address to which they were to be delivered, and he sent his card, to be enclosed with the flowers as usual. But Mr. Werner, the florist, knew nothing about the aforementioned birthday, and he did not know that the lover had written on the card, "Here's a rose for every year of your age." And Mr. Werner should not be blamed for not discovering that inscription, since it was written on the back of the card, where no one expects anything to be written. He did know, however, that he had an abundant supply of roses. So he decided to be generous in filling the order and to give the young couple a pleasant surprise.

Here the newspaper narrator goes on to tell, seemingly just for the purpose of keeping the reader in suspense a while, that on the night of the birthday the lover took unusual care in preparing his toilet. He tried to imagine how happy she would be, just what she would say and how beautiful she would appear. Her picture on the wall seemed to smile at him as he stood and gazed at it for a minute or so just before leaving the room.

He could hardly wait for the front door to open, and he was ready for a hearty greeting from Her. After an unusually long period of waiting, the door finally did open, but no smiling, love-lit face was upturned to his. The young woman merely stared at her startled lover and said icily, "Come in. You have some explaining to do. I want to know where you acquired such a crude sense of humor."

But it is useless to attempt to describe the tragedy and pathos of that conference; none but a poet could do justice to the scene—and, alas, there is no poet on the staff of The Review. The brief but bitter truth is that the young man, after long and painful bewilderment, discovered that the lady had received three dozen roses instead of two dozen. Then he spent the rest of the miserable evening trying to explain matters, with only partial success.

He hurried to the greenhouse before going to work next morning and asked Mr. Werner how in the world he had happened to put an extra dozen roses in the order. Mr. Werner stated what his motives had been, and then asked, "Didn't your friend like them?"

"Oh, she was simply crazy about them," said the young man rather ambiguously, as he walked away.

A COMPLETE RECORD.

A few weeks ago we saw in The Review the reproduction of an order blank used by a retail florist in handling his telephone trade. We send herewith for reproduction a blank we use for all our retail orders. We think it covers the ground and gives a complete description of every transaction. Each person who has a hand in the transaction fills in the blanks describing that part and we keep these blanks on file for at least sixty days after each transaction, so that we can trace every move made in filling the order, in putting it up, and in delivery. If any mishap occurs we can tell upon whom the responsibility lies.

The exchange of ideas between those engaged in the same line of work is, in our mind, of the greatest possible benefit to everyone in the business. We always are much interested in anything The Review prints regarding retail store management and if this order blank idea, which was original with us, is of value to others it is only returning what we have received.

NEED LAW TO CLOSE SUNDAYS.

"No, I can't get home to dinner and I don't know when I can leave here. Goodbye," said Charles Millang, the New York wholesale florist, as he hung up the telephone receiver Sunday morning at 11:30. "Yes, sir," said he, turning to The Review man, "you heard what I said to my family. I don't know when I can get home. It's a dog's life, and there is no reason for it except greed. A man who can not make a living by working six days a week is no man at all, or else he is in a mighty poor business. You see, the people who came over here and established themselves fifty years ago had worked in the greenhouses on Sundays, so they kept the market open also; we have simply followed in the rut, and it will take another generation, probably, for us to grow out of it. There is no real reason why either the wholesale or the retail florist should open on Sunday. The greenhouses must, of course, be watched, the houses ventilated, the stock watered, and the fires kept up, for the laws of nature know no holiday. But that is no excuse for opening our wholesale and retail stores on Sunday. Every man, even a florist, is entitled to one day's rest out of the seven. We can not close up by mutual agreement, for there is always someone who will not cooperate with the balance of the trade, and so the only way out of the dilemma is to have a state law passed making it illegal for florists to keep open on Sundays. It will not decrease the quantity of flowers sold. People will soon adjust themselves to the need of providing flowers during the week days, and such a law will put the florists on a plane with the other merchants who have one day out of seven for rest and recreation. The florist is human and entitled to human consideration."

PARCEL POST CHANGES.

The amplification of the parcel post service has begun.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, parcels may now be sent special delivery, the same as letters. All one has to do is to affix a special delivery stamp, or 10 cents in ordinary postage stamps, indicating that the latter are for the special delivery, and the package gets the same treatment as a special delivery letter.

Parcel post packages may now be sent C. O. D. The postage must be fully prepaid. A fee of 10 cents in parcel post stamps, which must be affixed to the package, is the charge for collection. The amount to be collected must not exceed $100. Such parcels are insured without extra charge to the amount of actual value, not exceeding $50.

Special delivery parcels may be sent through all offices having special delivery service and C. O. D. packages will be accepted at money order offices when addressed to money order offices.

FREY TURNS PUBLISHER.

C. H. Frey, the well known florist at Lincoln, Neb., has turned publisher. He calls his monthly magazine The Posey. It consists of four pages of jokes bound in a neat cover. The front is decorative, the fourth cover carries Mr. Frey's ad, while the second and third covers, of the first issue, carry a story of the rise of the Frey establishment, as follows:

"In May, 1887, I purchased two lots at Twentieth and L streets, and began the erection of two greenhouses, and a small cottage (previous to this I had made the acquaintance of a lady who had consented to cook for me). The two greenhouses were completed by fall and stocked with plants common in that day as pot plants and for the production of cut flowers.

"The lady friend having become my wife, we opened our two houses for business October 1. Not being blessed with a surplus of cash (or credit), we could not afford to hire help, so had to do all the work about the place ourselves. But having started out with a determination to make the venture a success (having had previous to this five years of schooling in this my chosen profession), I knew how to grow flowers, so all we needed now was customers. These came at once, and continued to come, and brought others, so that the business soon had to be expanded. At the close of the second year we had to seek more land. Not being able to buy more adjoining our plant, we moved the plant to Twenty-second and G streets, where my father had five acres, and added a few more houses.

"While this venture proved a profitable one, it was not a satisfactory one for me, but we continued to do business here for four years, then turned this plant over to my father.

"After looking around a short time we purchased five acres southeast of Lincoln, situated on Thirty-fifth street, four blocks south of South street, where we built seven large houses, a residence, barns and such other buildings as were necessary to the successful operation of the plant.

"This plant being completed by the fall of 1894, we were again ready to do business. Being situated, as we were, out in the country, we had to open a store in the city, so we located at 1133 O street, opening for business September 1, 1894, and from the first day our trade was satisfactory, and continued to increase, so that we had to buy more land and build more houses to meet this increased demand, until today we own forty-four acres of land adjoining the five acres bought in 1894, have a greenhouse plant consisting of twenty-nine large houses, many of these being 28x200 feet in size, the plant containing over 150,000 square feet of glass, devoted exclusively to the growing of cut flowers and potted plants. This plant requires five large steam boilers to furnish steam for heating same, three windmills and a large electric motor to furnish water, large packing sheds, pot sheds, building for wagons, tools, etc. Close to the plant we have our residence, also eight cottages for the men.

"To make a long story short, we will briefly state that from the two small houses erected in 1887 we have grown to our mammoth plant of today, requiring an investment of close to $100,000, thirty men the year around as growers, packers and salesmen, 2,500 tons of coal to furnish heat, thousands of boxes and cases for the shipment of flowers and plants.

"Where do all these flowers go? We are often asked this question, and will say here that, besides a large retail trade in Lincoln and the western states, we do a large wholesale business over the whole country, shipping to hundreds of other greenhouses in almost every state of the Union."

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

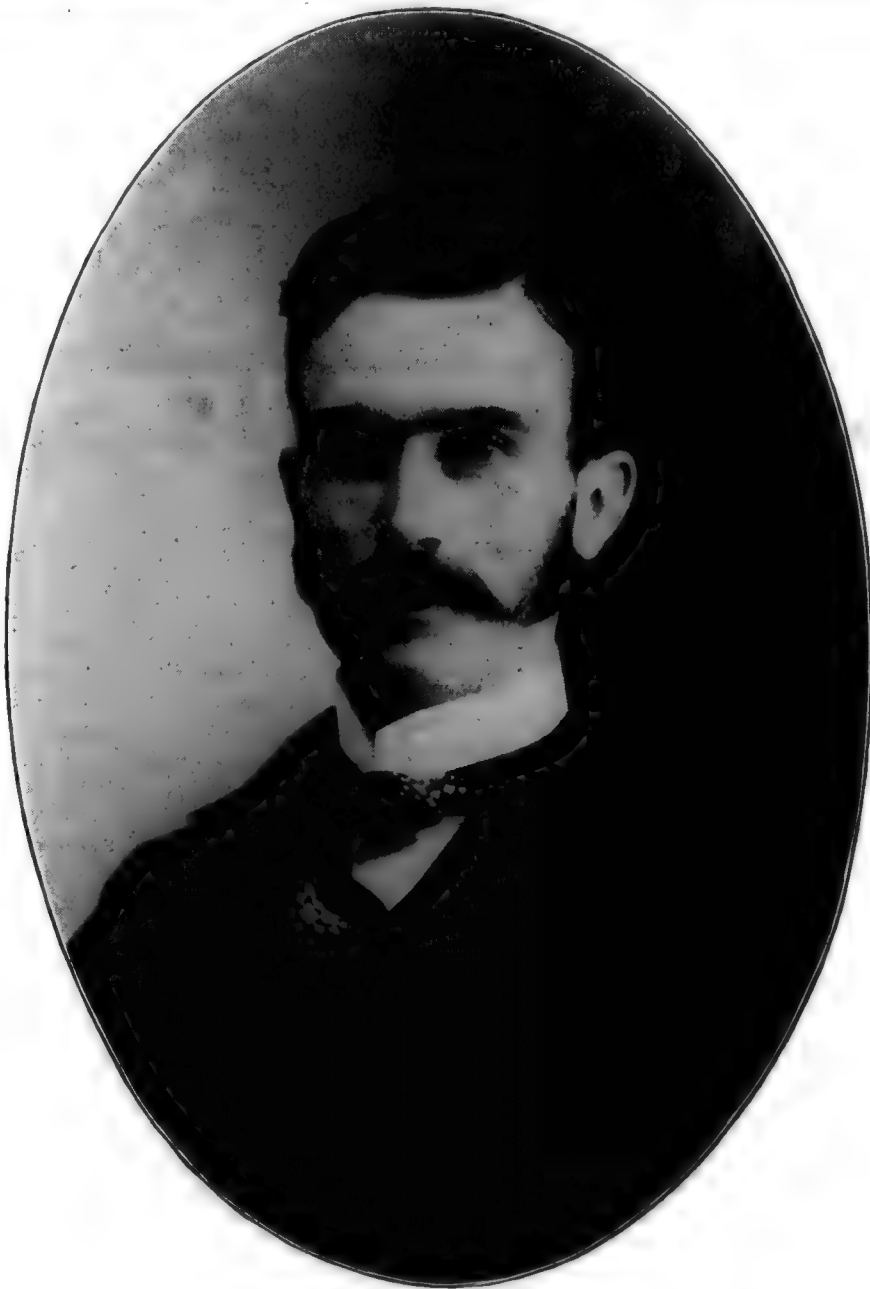

With the opening of the International Flower Show only one month away, the management and the various committees are, naturally, most active in their work of preparation for the big event.

Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J., has been appointed manager of the competitive section of the show, and his appointment meets with the hearty approval of the trade.

Some changes have been made in the dates of staging exhibits in certain sections of the show. Exhibits in Division F, which cover retail florists' rose displays, will be staged Saturday, April 5, instead of Monday, April 7. Division G, covering collections of roses and open to private gardeners and amateurs only, will also be staged April 5, instead of April 7. Division B, covering cut roses, will be staged April 7, instead of April 5. These divisions form part of the section allotted to the American Rose Society. A supplementary schedule has been published and sent out, in which these changes are noted, as well as many new prize offers.

The judging of all the exhibits staged on the opening day will be completed prior to the formal opening of the show. Seventy judges will pass on the exhibits during the afternoon, the judging to commence promptly at 3 o'clock, and by 6 o'clock, when the doors open, cards will be found on all the exhibits. The corps of judges will include representative men from all sections of this country, and twelve or more from England and Holland.

An enormous attendance is expected on the opening night, and it can be relied upon that the exhibition will be entirely in order and in readiness for the public.

Those in the trade who intend making exhibits in the trade exhibition, a feature of the show, should lose no time in arranging for space. Secretary John Young can still provide some excellent locations and will be pleased to furnish any information regarding accommodation on application to him at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

A meeting of the bowling committee of the National Association of Gardeners was held at the Murray Hill hotel, New York city, February 25. The following members were present: John Dodds, Wyncote, Pa.; William Robertson, Jenkintown, Pa.; James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; John Everett, Glen Cove, N. Y.; A. Bauer, Deal, N. J. President W. H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y., and Secretary M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., also were present.

All arrangements were completed to hold the bowling tournament on Thumm's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street, Wednesday, April 9. One entire floor, consisting of twelve alleys, has been engaged and additional alleys reserved on the next floor if they are required. The entire day will be given over to the tournament. As has already been reported, the bowling will be open to members of the Society of American Florists and members of the National Association of Gardeners. Teams of three men, members of any local florists' or gardeners' society or club, and members either of the N. A. G. or S. A. F., will be eligible in the team tournament.

Some of the members of the committee reported that they have had advice from several southern and western cities that local club teams are practicing to enter, and it is the hope of the association that every local society, or club, will be represented by a team.

President Waite offers a piece of silver, value of $50, as a sweepstake prize, to be competed for by the three members of the S. A. F. and three members of the N. A. G. making the highest scores of the tournament.

Ex-President Logan offers a silver cup for the greatest number of strikes made in the tournament in three games, the sweepstake contest excluded.

Secretary Ebel offers a silver cup for the highest score made in the tournament, the sweepstake contest excluded.

Treasurer James Stuart offers three prizes of the value of $30 for the winning team of three men members from a local gardening or florists' club, and members of either the N. A. G. or S. A. F.

A silver cup is offered for the highest number of spares in the tournament in three games, the sweepstake contest excluded.

A long list of prizes is offered for the individual tournament, to which the committee expects to add considerably before the event.

Everything indicates that the tournament, which will occur during the week of the International Flower Show, will be an interesting affair. It will probably bring together a greater number of the bowlers among the gardeners and florists than were ever before gathered in a bowling tournament.

Further information, if desired, can be obtained by addressing M. C. Ebel, secretary of the N. A. G., Madison, N. J.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS MEET

Officers Re-elected.

President—Charles Loveridge, Peoria.
Vice-president—C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park.
Treasurer—F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.
Secretary—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.

A Successful Convention.

Favored with an unusually large attendance, the eighth annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association opened at Peoria, March 4, and was pronounced without question one of the most successful conventions of the organization. In Peoria the visitors found not only a warm welcome, as voiced individually by Mayor E. N. Woodruff in behalf of the city, but the Jefferson hotel, where the meetings and headquarters were located, offered a most excellent means of displaying the exhibits to advantage. Outside of offering the best of meeting rooms, the Gold room afforded exhibition possibilities such as have never been available at any previous meeting, and the rooms were thronged during the session with public visitors, who were better able to appreciate the splendid displays. As to the flowers exhibited, the entries were more than worthy of the occasion, and not only local but out-of-town exhibitors made the best of the facilities offered.

The business session of the first day occupied the best part of the afternoon, and after the re-election of the officers installed last year only one matter of importance was taken up. It was the florists' experiment station at Urbana that furnished the topic. On complaint of George B. Franks, of Champaign, who addressed a letter to the association, the members entered into a debate on whether or not the station should enter into the Champaign market by selling its surplus flowers to a Champaign retailer. It was claimed by Mr. Franks and others that the flowers when cut by the experiment station had matured beyond their best, and the sale of the same in Champaign was a detriment to the cut flower business, inasmuch as they were below the standard sold by other florists and lowered the public opinion as to the keeping qualities of carnations, the principal flower in question. After a heated argument the matter was tabled without action, although J. E. Yates offered a resolution that these flowers be shipped to open markets rather than offered in any one local market.

President's Address.

President Loveridge addressed the association in part as follows: "While we have not grown in numbers as fast as most of us would like, for I believe every florist in Illinois should be a member, yet we have had the eyes of other states on us in our progress in experimental lines. But much as has been accomplished in the past, there are greater things for the future, for wonderful as has been the progress of the florists' business during the last quarter of a century, yet I consider it today only in its infancy, and it is up to us, as members of this association and as individuals, to do our part in bringing this healthy infant to maturity.

"There are a few things I would recommend for the association to do. First, we are all vitally interested in fertilizers, and there should be a state law enacted compelling every manufacturer or dealer in fertilizers to have an analysis made and printed on the bags or packages, so the purchaser may know just what he is getting for his money. And whenever the contents do not come up to the standard, the state should prosecute.

"Second, I would recommend to our advisory board to work with the faculty at the university to have a portion of our appropriation set aside to defray the expenses of sending a competent man to any part of the state where a florist is troubled with any unusual insect pest or plant disease, to study the local conditions and find out the cause of same and recommend a remedy, thereby saving the florists of the state hundreds and sometimes thousands of dollars.

"Then I would recommend that a standing committee of three be appointed by this association to appraise any loss a member of our association may have through any cause where an impartial appraisal is wanted. This matter was brought forcibly to my attention about a year ago while trying to settle a loss I had through gas, with the superintendent of the gas company, when he told me the trouble he had in getting competent and impartial advice in the matter."

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer Washburn reported on the finances as follows:

Balance March 1, 1912.....	$234.01
Received from secretary.....	147.00
Total	$381.01
Disbursements	182.95
Balance March 1, 1913.....	$198.06

Secretary's Report.

Secretary J. F. Ammann reported having added forty-nine new members to the annual membership, and having enrolled six life members. Much of this is due to the work of the booth committee during the S. A. F. meeting at Chicago. "More credit is due C. F. McCormick, of Chicago, than to any other man for securing new members," said Mr. Ammann, "yet we are indebted to several other members for much active work along this line. Our membership now stands 220 annual members and forty-eight life members. We lost one highly respected member in the death of that grand old pioneer florist, Joseph Heinl, of Jacksonville."

The Annual Banquet.

The annual banquet was held Tuesday evening, March 4, at the Jefferson hotel, and was largely attended. It was a most successful affair in every respect—excellent repast and excellent talks following the feast.

Wednesday's Session.

Wednesday one session was held, devoted principally to the consideration of the work done at the florists' experiment station at the University of Illinois. Reports were presented by H. B. Dorner, F. W. Muncie and G. L. Peltier, which are given in this issue in as much detail as their considerable length will permit.

W. N. Rudd presented a short paper on landscape gardening as a means of increasing a florist's business and profits, which is presented in full in this issue.

The place of next meeting came up at this session. Both Peoria and Danville wanted the 1914 convention, with Danville the likely choice of the executive committee, as a resolution was adopted asking the Indiana State Florists' Association to meet at Danville in joint session.

During the afternoon of Wednesday luncheon was served at the greenhouses of President Loveridge, and the members spent the hours inspecting this and other establishments.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition was more than usually interesting. While possibly not much larger than at some of the earlier meetings, the stock was more attractively staged, amid better surroundings, and attracted large crowds during the hours the show was open to the public. The exhibitors were:

Peterson Floral Co., of Gibson City, Ill., staged a handsome vase of Enchantress carnations.

Fred M. Hanson & Co., of Peoria, showed five varieties of good sweet peas and a number of well grown cyclamens.

G. Swenson, of Elmhurst, Ill., exhibited 100 flowers of a winter-blooming Spencer sweet pea which caused much comment, the type being true and the flowers and stems excellent.

A. Washburn & Sons, of Bloomington, exhibited six vases of Princess of Wales violets, long one of their specialties, and, as usual, of excellent quality.

M. & S. L. Dysinger, of Albion, Mich., sent a vase of a pink seedling carnation, a cross between Enchantress and Lawson, that was well liked.

Henry Baer, of Peoria, showed six varieties of carnations, Benora, St. Nicholas, Rose-pink Enchantress, Washington, Enchantress and White Enchantress, all in good shape.

Frank B. Smith's Sons, of Danville, Ill., staged an exceedingly fine exhibit of blooming plants, including cyclamens, pansies, violets, begonias, etc. As was the case last year, a violet, a sport of Gov. Herrick, was shown in attractive shape. Smith's Sons also were represented on the carnation tables by a crimson seedling, No. 108-81; by a variegated seedling, by Benora and by Victory.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill., were represented by an interesting display of Easter blooming plants, cyclamen, American Beauty rose plants, Roosevelt ferns, Easter lilies, etc.

The Rue Floral Co., of Peoria, put up a handsome table decoration of Killarney roses and sweet peas, probably as much admired by the public as any other exhibit in the room.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, made an excellent showing of roses and carnations. In roses, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Mrs. Taft were on display and were of the usual high quality staged at so many flower shows by this exhibitor. The carnations included all the leading varieties grown at Morton Grove and were in equally good shape.

A. C. Brown, of Springfield, showed a number of vases of well grown carnations, including Gloriosa, White Wonder, Sangamo and Mrs. C. W. Ward.

Chas. Loveridge, of Peoria, had the largest exhibit of roses, carnations, bulbous stock, etc., in the hall. His narcissi were especially good. Killarney, White Killarney and a number of carnations were shown. Cut flowers arranged in baskets for effect were also on display, as well as orchid plants.

Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, showed a vase of red seedlings and were the only ones to display the Sunburst and Lady Hillingdon roses. Rhea Reid was also shown in good shape.

Wendland & Keimel Co., of Elmhurst, Ill., displayed a splendid lot of roses, notable for the length of bud and excellence of color. The varieties were Killarney, White Killarney, Rhea Reid and Mrs. Taft.

E. C. Amling Co., of Chicago, staged a number of vases of winter-blooming Spencer sweet peas, fine flowers on long stems, showing the true Butterfly character.

H. N. Bruns, of Chicago, had a display of his well known Chicago Market valley of excellent quality.

Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., had one of the largest exhibits of blooming plants, large both in number of plants and in varieties shown, including hydrangeas, spiraeas, lilies, cinerarias, bulbous plants in variety, roses, etc. From his Peoria retail store were baskets of cut flowers, well arranged, while a dinner table display was effectively executed with jonquils and attracted the eyes of the city people.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, of Morgan Park, Ill., had carnations on exhibition. Two seedlings were shown, 7510 A and 6909 A, as well as a vase of Gloriosa and one of Rosette. They were in fine shape.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., sent an exhibit of the new rose, Milady, which proved a great attraction.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., was well represented by the new carnation, The Herald, which was especially fine, being long-stemmed and of bright color. Vases of well grown blooms of the standard varieties also were shown.

The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., staged a handsome vase of 100 blooms of the new Commodore carnation. The stem, color and calyx all spoke well for the variety, and the growers were much interested in it.

The Hill Floral Co., of Streator, Ill., had on exhibition two vases of carnations, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Beacon, of excellent quality.

A. Henderson & Co., of Chicago, staged Carnation Philadelphia, the new pink of Geo. W. Browne, Detroit, the blooms coming from the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, one of the disseminators. The blooms were fine and the variety was well received.

Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, N. Y., sent specimens of Carnation Matchless, a new white.

The Travis Grate Co., of Henry, Ill., showed its now well-known rocker grate, which is being quite largely used in greenhouses.

The Raedlein Basket Co., of Chicago, showed a large line of baskets, but at another location.

The judges were A. T. Hey, E. H. Mann and F. W. Plummer. They awarded certificates of merit to Carnation Commodore, from E. G. Hill Co.; Rose Milady, from A. N. Pierson; Carnation Philadelphia, from A. Henderson & Co.; winter-blooming sweet pea, from G. Swenson; Carnation The Herald, from Chicago Carnation Co., and Carnation Matchless, from Cottage Gardens Co.

LANDSCAPING BY FLORISTS.

[A paper by W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., read before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Peoria, March 5, 1913.]

Many of us fail to realize the possibilities of increasing our business, and of making it more profitable, by adding landscape gardening to our regular lines. It seems strange that this is so, because, if one stops to think, the customers for our bedding plants and perennials are the very people who need such work, and we shall not have the difficulty met with in taking up most new lines; that is, the getting of new customers and building up an entirely new business. Our customers are ready to hand. Their names are on our books as buyers of plants and all there is to be done is to equip ourselves to supply their wants properly, and to let them know we are so equipped. Of course the downtown store man in the large cities, and the strictly wholesale grower, will probably not find it advisable to take up this work, but those florists who both grow and retail their product, and who are located in the smaller cities and towns, or in the residence districts, will find much and profitable demand for good service of this kind.

The Desire for Change.

There is a great and growing desire among the middle class of home owners, for better and more beautiful outdoor surroundings. They are being taught by precept and example that the round bed of geraniums or cannas planted in the middle of the lawn is often a very unlovely thing, that it dwarfs the place and gives no lasting satisfaction. They feel that there are better and more artistic ways of decorating their grounds. They are tired of the everlasting sameness of the red patch of S. A. Nutt with a border of Salleroi, which is repeated and repeated on each side of each of our residence streets. If we are to keep these customers and to sell them more, instead of less of our goods, we must arrange to give them something better—something more artistic and more interesting—something which they and their neighbors and the passers-by will delight in looking at again and again.

Who ever, nowadays, stops on the street and looks at any of these prim, commonplace flowerbeds we are planting by the thousand every spring—and why should they?

Flowering plants need a background of green. This means that they must generally be planted in front of taller growing specimens. Of course we can use the taller perennials at times for this purpose, but why do it when there are a wealth of shrubs to hand which are so much better in every way? Shrubs are never unsightly, even in winter, while many of those with ornamental bark or colored berries are beautiful all the desolate winter days and carry us through to the time of green leaves and flowers again. The shrub puts forth its leaves quickly in the spring and arrives at its full beauty in a few days, while we must wait, often, half the summer for our full growth from the other types of tall growing flowers.

Some Simple Rules.

We thus get to Rule No. 1.—Plant shrubs for a background and plant your flowers in front of them. It has been an axiom almost from the first real study which was ever given the subject, which we may state here as daries and keep the center of the lawn open. If the lawn is large, a small specimen tree or shrub or two may be planted, but they must be nearer to one side—never in the center.

The line where the foundation of the house meets the lawn is ugly, so we get Rule No. 3.—Plant shrubs around the foundation of the house and especially around the porch, both to conceal the ugly space underneath and also to afford a feeling of protection.

Rule No. 4.—Frequently conditions in the backyard are unsightly; therefore plant a screen of tall shrubs across from the back of the house to the boundary fence to conceal such things. Of course this screen is to be as far back from the street as possible.

Rule No. 5.—Do not plant in straight lines. Use shrubs of varying sizes and heights and plant so the line is irregular.

Rule No. 6.—Mass your shrubs. That is, do not dot them around, but plant all of one kind together.

Rule No. 7.—Do not plant clipped formal hedges for our climate. It is very difficult to make them do well here. If, after years of work, a plant dies out, the whole thing is ruined and they take an immense amount of care to keep them in proper condition. Finally, even when in perfect condition they are formal and ugly and a good honest wire fence, covered with Virginia creeper and other vines, has the advantage from every point of view.

The Places For Flowers.

We now have the backbone of our work done and the places for planting flowers will suggest themselves. The big, the showy, and the brilliant colored things, we will get well to the back. The cannas and hollyhocks will make a gorgeous show planted in front of the screen at the rear. The little bays in our undulating border will be just the place for geraniums or other plants in long irregular beds. Clumps of the earlier hardy bulbs, as squills, snowdrops and the like, may be planted under the edges of the overhanging shrubbery, to remain permanently. The smaller and more delicate flowers, which must be seen at close range, will naturally be planted near the front. Sweet scented blossoming plants should be near the windows and the porch.

Great care must be taken not to plant discordant or clashing colors together, and a red or brightly colored house requires discrimination in selecting the colors to be planted closely to it.

Time permits here only the crudest and briefest hints, but there are numberless books and magazines dealing with the subject very fully—to be sure, there is an immense lot of rubbishy nonsense being published also. Many publishers appear to think that a flashy literary style is all-important and real knowledge of the subject an entirely secondary matter.

If space available permits, some well grown shrubs, or small trees on the florist's grounds will not only be ornamental, but will make excellent selling samples. Unless conditions are unusual it will probably not be advisable to attempt to propagate or grow on, shrub stock, as it can be bought very cheaply as wanted from the nurseries.

In conclusion, let me earnestly urge every florist in the class mentioned to look into this matter and try it. I am sure that the profit and the pleasure derived will both be great.

FLORICULTURE AT URBANA.

[A synopsis of a paper by H. B. Dorner, read at the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Peoria, March 6, 1913, descriptive of the floricultural work at the University of Illinois.]

During the last year G. L. Peltier succeeded H. W. Anderson as pathologist, and F. W. Muncie was appointed physiological chemist. The staff now numbers five. The equipment was variously added to.

At a meeting of the advisory board, held last spring, it was decided to continue, for another year, the experiments on commercial fertilizers with roses and carnations and on the stem-rot of carnations. The experiments on the growing of roses with chemical fertilizers and the testing of own-root and grafted stock are a continuation of the work of the last two years. The results, up to date, bid fair to verify the conclusions of last year. Without doubt, the results of these experiments will be of great value to all florists growing roses.

The experiments on carnations are a continuation of the comparison of commercial and natural manures and on overfeeding with nitrogen, potassium and phosphorous. This work also promises very gratifying results.

The results on the experiments on commercial fertilizers with carnations, which were completed last year, are now awaiting the verification of this year's work so that they may be published in full.

The first year's work on stem-rot was a study of the life history of the fungus that causes the disease. The work of this year has been a further study of the action of the organism and preliminary experiments on its control.

While the work of the coming year has not, as yet, been decided upon by your committee, the following lines will be presented for their approval:

It is proposed that the work with roses be continued along the lines of soil fertility, on both own-root and grafted plants.

The work on carnations, as planned, contemplates further work on the effects of overfeeding and measures to overcome it, on the study of the limiting element in feeding and on the chemical constituents of the plant and their relation to feeding.

The study of stem-rot of carnations is to be continued and methods for its prevention and control will be worked out. An entire house will be devoted to pathological work.

It is also proposed to carry on some work with chrysanthemums along the line of feeding to determine the kinds and amounts of fertilizer required and when they should be applied.

A study of the effects of overwatering and overfeeding of various pot plants is also proposed. A study of this kind will assist the florist in diagnosing such cases without difficulty.

Two circulars have been issued. A 22-page circular on the experiments on carnations and roses and a 16-page circular on the instructional work were printed in time for distribution at the Chicago meeting of the S. A. F. More complete circulars will be issued as soon as this year's work is completed and the results can be compiled and verified.

Many requests have been received from florists and amateurs concerning plant troubles. These have all been given close attention and the growers have received all the help possible. The results of this work have been gratifying. The reports show that in many cases the help given has been the cause of the saving of thousands of dollars. It is hoped that more florists will avail themselves of the opportunity and allow your workers at the station to be of service to them. All queries and material sent to the Division of Floriculture will receive prompt attention.

Eight students are now registered for the four-year course in floriculture. The completion of the new houses will add greatly to the facilities of the division and make it possible to give the students considerable work along practical lines.

As stated in a previous report, the revision of the campus necessitates the removal of the greenhouses to a new location on the east side of the campus. The new houses that were provided for in the appropriations of two years ago are being built upon the new site and are nearing completion. The plans are to move the old range this coming summer.

The new range consists of two houses, 35x105 and a curvilinear palm house 40 x80 feet. These, with the addition of another house 35x105 feet, to be built this summer, and the old houses to be moved, cover an area of 27,700 square feet. The new houses are all of iron frame construction. The contract has also been let for a new service building, 35x95 feet, two stories high. In this will be located the work rooms, storage rooms, laboratories, class room and offices.

EXPERIMENTS ON STEM-ROT.

[Extracts from a paper by G. L. Peltier, of the University of Illinois, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Peoria, March 6, 1913.]

Following the plan of last year, most of our attention has been confined to one disease, namely, wet stem-rot of carnation. A number of strains of Rhizoctonia from various hosts, potato, clover, corn, bean, carrots, thistle and other vegetables, were obtained from various sources. The object is to determine whether the strain of Rhizoctonia from the carnation host alone, or those from all other hosts, can produce stem-rot of the carnation. If the first statement proves to be the case, then the matter of controlling stem-rot will be simple, for it will be merely a question of eliminating the diseased plants. On the other hand, if other strains of Rhizoctonia are able to attack the carnation it will be a difficult problem to work out a means of control, for one will never know when the plants will be attacked in the field. Further, the soil brought into the greenhouse, if taken from a field on which the hosts named above have been grown, might be infected with Rhizoctonia. This question is of fundamental importance.

Some Conclusions Reached.

From observations in the carnation field last summer the following conclusions, some of them no doubt being well known, but which can probably bear repeating, may be made:

(1) When plants are put out in the field in the spring they are liable to be set too deep, which perhaps may bring about some morphological difference in the stem just at the surface of the ground, causing the plant to become more susceptible to stem-rot. Great care should be exercised in planting the plants just the required depth. This should be done again when the plants are taken into the house in the fall.

(2) From data collected from diseased plants in the field, a plant with a single stem which breaks one to two inches above the surface of the soil is much less liable to stem-rot than a plant breaking just at, or slightly below, the ground. The reason is obvious. The branches of a plant forking at the surface of the ground are easily broken off in different ways. They generally break at the base, so there is exposed a wound, through which fungi can easily enter. The wound is later covered with soil, and so it is an easy matter for the fungus Rhizoctonia to enter the exposed tissue and produce stem-rot. A large number of plants examined show that in the majority of cases the fungus gains entrance through a wound of this kind.

(3) Cultivating too deep and throwing the soil up around the plants also produces a condition more favorable to Rhizoctonia. Great care should be exercised not to injure any of the plants with the cultivator.

(4) If stem-rot is present in a carnation field all dead or wilted plants should be pulled up as soon as noticed and the soil surrounding the plant should be soaked with a fungicide, preferably formalin. It can be applied in the dilution of 1:200. Formalin is desirable in this work, as it will kill the mycelium of the fungus Rhizoctonia in the ground, it is inexpensive, the fumes escape from the soil quickly and it does not injure the soil in any way.

Sterilizing Soil.

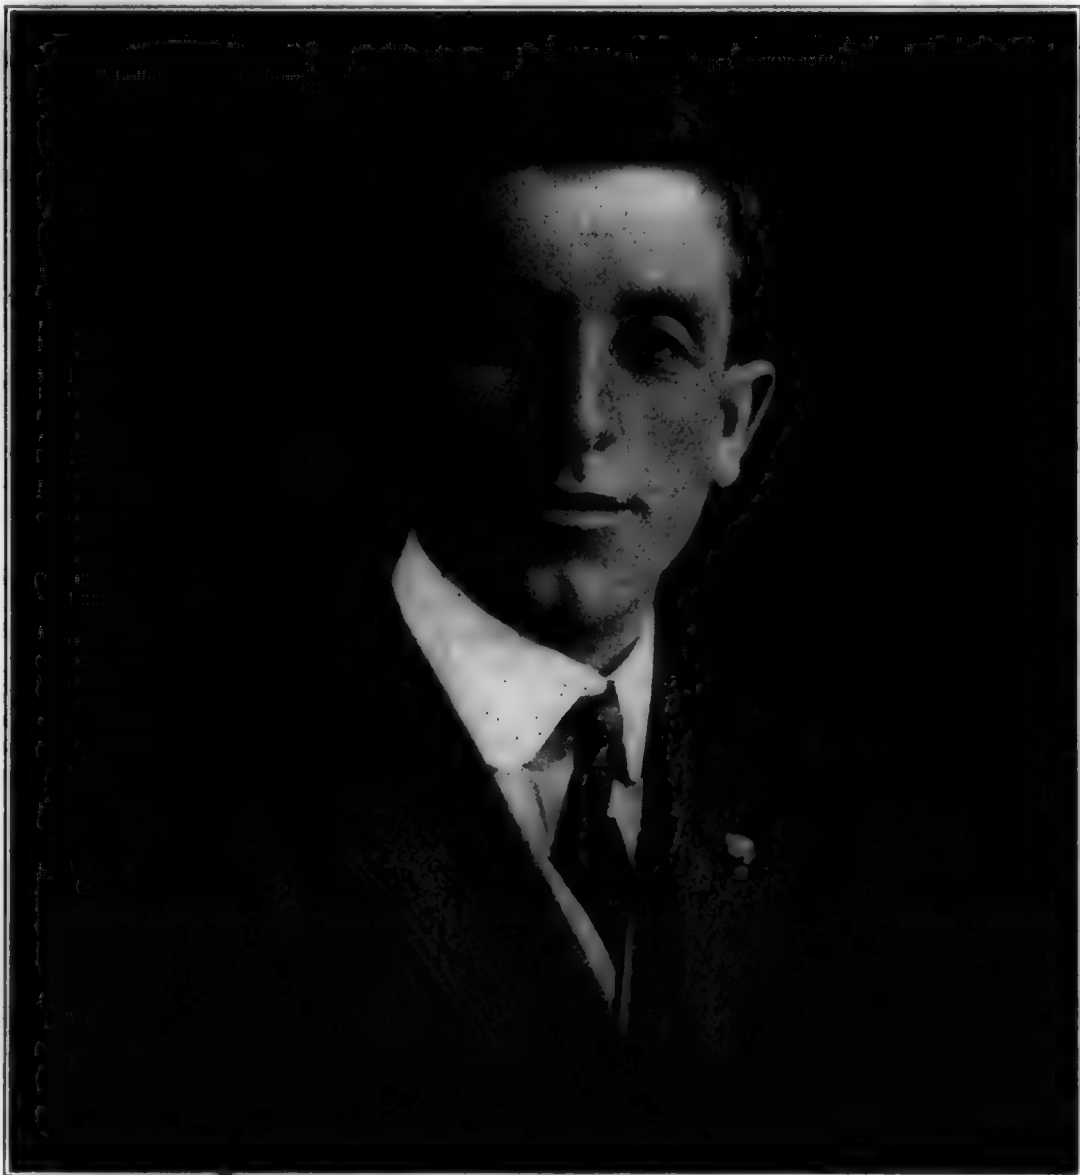

Concerning the work in the greenhouse, only general statements can be made at this time. A number of agents for sterilizing the soil were tried, including steam, and a number of fungicides. The experiments were conducted in the following manner: The soil was first infected with soil cultures of the fungus Rhizoctonia grown in the laboratory, and then half of it was sterilized, the other half being left as a check. In the steam sterilized bench no plants have died, while in the bench infected with Rhizoctonia and not sterilized the loss due to stem-rot is sixty per cent. The fungicides, Bordeaux mixture, copper sulphate and sulphuric acid, all gave poor results. Formalin applied at the rate of 1:200 and the soil allowed to dry for a week has given excellent results, none of the plants being diseased up to this date. The application of limestone also appears to retard the growth of Rhizoctonia. Next year we will confine all our efforts to steam sterilized soil, the formalin treatment, and the application of limestone.

Steam sterilized soil appears to have one serious disadvantage, mainly that the growth of plants is slightly retarded for the first two or three weeks. There seems to be no satisfactory explanation for this phenomenon.

Steam sterilized sand has been used for cuttings in the experimental work and has proven satisfactory. To date no Rhizoctonia has been found in any of the carnation cutting beds at the station and it is doubtful that the disease is carried in this manner. It seems more probable, then, that the plants are first attacked in the field, and as men have stated before, it is of the utmost importance to know whether strains of Rhizoctonia infecting various plants in the field are also able to attack the carnation plants.

One of the most important factors in the control of stem-rot in the greenhouse is the careful selection of carnation plants when brought in from the field. Last fall every plant that showed any

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

HUGH WILL.

WHAT will Hugh? Hugh will see to it that every one who attends the S. A. F. convention next August has just the best time ever. For Hugh Will, smiling Hugh, with the twinkles in the wrinkles 'round his eyes, is chairman of the big, busy committee that has charge of the entertainment features, and already is hard at work. Mr. Will also is a member of the finance committee, the committee on transportation and, as you might guess from the twinkle, of the committee on convention sports. There isn't anything he isn't in. He is president of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and of practically all the trade societies. In business he is one of the three brothers who own the largest range of glass in the Twin Cities, operating it under the corporate name of Will Bros. Co. They are cut-flower growers primarily, although a considerable quantity of other material is grown for the Minneapolis market and for the shipping trade through the northwest.

signs of disease, as well as all unhealthy or damaged plants, was examined. As a result only a few plants have been lost on account of this disease. This matter of selecting plants is, therefore, an important factor in the control of this disease.

If occasionally a plant is killed by Rhizoctonia in the greenhouse it should be pulled up immediately and the soil drenched with a solution of formalin. A fresh plant should not be put in until the soil is dry and it should receive careful treatment. Four plants replaced in the same place have been seen to die, in each case for the simple reason that they received the same treatment as the surrounding plants, which were strong and healthy and had been growing for some time, and that the fungus was still present in the soil. The problem of the control of the wet stem-rot is far from being complete, but experiments give some encouragement so that in the near future a method of control will probably be found for this serious disease.

Dry Stem-Rot.

Another disease which causes more or less loss to growers of carnations is the so-called dry stem-rot, which I suggest be called branch wilt, to distinguish it more sharply from the wet stem-rot, due to Rhizoctonia. This branch wilt is due to a species of the fungus Fusarium.

This fungus has never been seen to attack a healthy growing carnation plant. It gains entrance to the tissue of the part in each case through wounds and cuts on the plant. The spores, which are everywhere in the soil and air of the house are able to germinate in a drop of water, so that if the plants are wet and a flower is cut the spore will germinate on this cut surface and work its way into the branches. When the young shoots arise they grow until the fungus reaches the base of the shoot and in a short time the shoot will wilt suddenly and die. The fungus is rarely able to kill the whole plant. By looking over a carnation house infected with branch wilt the dead branches are conspicuous and characteristic of this disease.

The only control that can be suggested at this time is absolute cleanliness of the house. As this fungus is able to grow on dead leaves of the plants as well as on and under the benches, such conditions should not be tolerated. Overhead watering should be discontinued as much as possible, especially in cloudy weather.

Yellows.

Yellows, as I shall call this disease for the present, to distinguish it from bacteriosis and stigmonose, is widely distributed throughout the state, and from reports seems to be increasing rapidly. The trouble starts in the young leaves and is first noticed as small pale green areas varying in size and shape. On holding an infected leaf up to the light the dots appear translucent. These spots become more distinct and turn yellow, while the tissue beneath collapses. The trouble is confined not only to the leaves, but in badly infected plants the branches and flower stems may be covered with the yellow elongated spots.

Several distinct forms of yellows can be recognized, which differ in general appearance and subsequent behavior. The early stages of the first type consist of small translucent dots, scattered irregularly through the leaf. At first they are a paler green than the surrounding tissue, but distinctly delineated from it. The spots increase more or less rapidly until they reach a diameter of one to eight millimeters. Most of these spots are approximately circular, but may be irregular in outline, rarely elongated. Few of the spots coalesce in this form. This type is especially noticeable on White Enchantress. A single leaf may have from one or two to fifty or more spots, depending on the extent of infection. Another characteristic of this first type is that the spots do not tend to make the leaves brittle.

The development of the second form is similar to the one above, except that while still in the early stages the spots coalesce and become much elongated, so that a single spot may be one to two inches or more in length. On badly infected leaves these elongated areas run parallel to the midrib and have a sort of flaky appearance. The leaves become brittle and are easily snapped off. In the later stage the tissue beneath the areas collapses, the spot becomes sunken and finally turns brown as the leaf dies. This type of yellows is found in the Beacon and Pink Enchantress and is, as a rule, much more destructive than the first type.

A third form may be mentioned here, which is found only on the red-flowered varieties, as Beacon. Here the areas in the late stages take on a purplish color and are slightly raised. It is not known whether this form is the same as the others or not. The red-flowered varieties are also susceptible to the second type, beside this third form.

No explanation as to the cause of this disease can be given at present. However, preliminary experiments have shown that the disease is not transmissible from one plant to another, but that it is carried from season to season by means of infected cuttings. Until the cause has been determined the suggestion is made that no cuttings from plants that show yellows be taken; and if any plants show these spots at any time from the cutting bench stage to the time they are brought into the house in the fall, they should be discarded. In this way the disease to a large extent will be eliminated.

COOL HOUSE FOR HOT CLIMATE.

E. E. Stone, nurseryman, Dickinson, Tex., is the owner of the unique greenhouse shown in the accompanying illustrations. It is like other greenhouses in so far as the frame goes, but it is different from the rest in that it is exactly the opposite of the usual warm house for cool locations—it is a cool house for a hot climate. The house is 30 x 100, of the well known Foley pipe frame construction, with no benches but four lines of purlin supports. The common complaint in Mr. Stone's location, which is in Galveston county, close to the Gulf coast, is that the ordinary form of greenhouse gets too hot in summer. After thinking the matter out, Mr. Stone had the Foley Mfg. Co. build a special roof on the regular, standard frame. Shade was what Mr. Stone wanted. This is how he got it: At the end of the house were three sashbars to carry glass in the ordinary way; then a bar was omitted and a frame set in two panes wide, not glazed, but filled with roofing felt; then three more runs of glass; then a frame of felt, and so on to the other end of the house. The side walls have glass below the glazed bars and hinged vents filled with felt below the felted frames. The frames are fastened to the eave plate and to the ventilator header, the ventilator also being filled with felt. Mr. Stone says he has had a number of inquiries from other southerners who are watching his experiment and that its success will mean the erection of a number of similar houses in the Gulf section.

The trees shown in the picture are camphor trees, a small-leaved evergreen, fast growing and capable of withstanding 10 to 12 degrees of frost, that Mr. Stone considers ideal for the coast country.

FERTILIZERS FOR CARNATIONS.

[A summary of a paper by F. W. Muncie, of the University of Illinois, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Peoria, March 6, 1913.]

The experimental work during 1912-13 includes a combination of the experiments carried on during the previous year and described in our pamphlet published in July, 1912, in regard to the relative efficiency of commercial fertilizers and natural manures for growing carnations. The data from October 1 to December 17, 1912, bear out the conclusions drawn from the results of last year, that the number and quality of flowers produced by either method are practically the same.

It seems well here to repeat the amount of fertilizers used and to describe the method of application. When the soil is put into the benches in the latter part of July, two pounds of dried blood, two pounds of acid phosphate and two pounds of potassium sulphate are mixed with the soil for each 100 square feet of bench space and thoroughly worked in with trowels; and, after a thorough watering, the soil is allowed to stand over night before setting the plants. At three other times during the year, at about November 1, January 1 and February 15, additional applications of two pounds of dried blood worked into the top inch of soil with weeders are made, making a total application per 100 square feet of bench space of: Dried blood, eight pounds; acid phosphate, two pounds; potassium sulphate, two pounds.

Splitting and Stem Strength.

The results indicate no danger of causing splitting by treatment with commercial fertilizers. In the variety White Enchantress, 97.1 per cent of the flowers in each case were those with perfect calyces; in the variety White Perfection 87 per cent of the flowers had perfect calyces when grown with natural manures and 94.7 per cent when grown with commercial fertilizers. We may safely conclude from these data that the use of commercial fertilizers will not lead to an abnormal percentage of splits.

In order to determine the effects of commercial fertilizers upon the strength of stems, flowers were gauged as first, second or third, according to their stem strength, first indicating the normal condition and third an excessive weakness. With White Enchantress, treatment with natural manures produced flowers, 78 per cent of which were classed as first; with commercial fertilizers, 76.8 per cent, while in the variety White Perfection the percentages are 89.7 per cent and 98 per cent respectively. Clearly then, the use of commercial fertilizers will not lead to weakness in stems.

Keeping Quality of Flowers.

Records were kept in 1909-10 and 1911-12, as well as during the present year, to determine whether raising flowers with commercial fertilizers injures their keeping quality. Records were taken upon some hundreds of them, in a room at about 50 degrees, the water being changed daily, but without clipping the stems. Without the burden of too many figures, the results may be summarized as follows:

(1) Excessive feeding tends to diminish the keeping qualities of the flowers. The effect is seen most quickly with an excessive application of dried blood, ammonium sulphate or some other nitrogenous fertilizer.

(2) No ill effect follows the use of the amounts of commercial fertilizer as indicated above.

Relative Ease of Application.

In the experiment outlined above, the plants treated with natural manures were fed during the year with three light mulches of sheep manure and in addition with thirteen applications of liquid manure, 13.5 gallons being used each time for each 100 square feet of bench space. Thus the total number of fertilizer applications made was sixteen; on the other hand, after the beginning of the season, only three applications of a fertilizer (dried blood) were made. The latter treatment no doubt would result in a considerable saving of time and labor.

Overfeeding.

As favorable as the results indicate commercial fertilizers to be for the production of a satisfactory number of flowers of good quality, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the care with which they must be used, and the danger of overfeeding in case they are applied in uncertain quantities or too often. The experiment station feels that it ought not to recommend the use of these materials unless the grower uses a balance for weighing out the fertilizers according to the amounts indicated above, and unless they are not applied oftener than indicated. The danger from overfeeding is peculiar in that it does not manifest itself immediately in case the excessive applications are made in the fall of the year; and because no warning is given in the color or shape of the foliage in advance of the deterioration of the flowers.

These points are well illustrated by the following experiment carried out during the present year. Four sections containing forty plants each were used for this experiment, the first to receive a weekly application of one pound of dried blood, the second and third to receive one pound of acid phosphate and potassium sulphate, respectively; while the fourth received the "normal" treatment as outlined in the previous experiment. No signs of overfeeding were noticeable in any of the sections up until about the first part of January. The plants looked healthy and the flowers were normal. During that period the production was as follows: Excess dried blood, 264; excess acid phosphate, 256; excess potassium sulphate, 238; normal, 219.

These figures would lead to the conclusion that the weekly application of dried blood was superior to the treatment called normal, for forty-five additional flowers, more than one per plant, were produced during this time. Of these 89.7 per cent, or 237, had perfect calyces, while under the "normal" treatment only 84 per cent had perfect calyces. The size of flower and length of stem were about the same. Soon after the turn of the year, however, signs of overfeeding became noticeable. The petals became crinkled in appearance, and were easily browned if watered overhead. In a fortnight the flowers in the sections thus heavily fed became affected to such a degree that hardly a salable flower could be found. The first sign was on the petals and when this sign was shown the flowers were ruined.

The injury, for an application of equal weights of dried blood, acid phosphate and potassium sulphate, was greatest on the plants which received the extra applications of potassium sulphate, and on these sections at present growth has practically stopped and the flowers are ruined.

It is possible that the reason underlying this behavior of the plants is that in the fall of the year the sunlight is the limiting factor of plant growth. Then whatever excess of plant food is applied lies unused by the plant in the soil. When the days become longer and the sunlight more intense, after the new year, this material is absorbed by the plant with very harmful results. No injury has been noticed as yet upon the plants fed large amounts of acid phosphate, possibly due to the fact that acid phosphate is only half soluble, possibly to the nature of the chemical.

Composition of fertilizers in pounds per ton:

Name.	Kind.	Nitrogen.	Phosphorus.	Potassium.
Horse Manure.....	Solid	11.2	.3	1.6
	Liquid	30.4	Trace	14.
Cow Manure.....	Solid	8.8	1.	.6
	Liquid	21.	Trace	21.
Sheep Manure.....	Solid	14.4	3.6	..
	Liquid	26.2	.2	..
Dried Blood		280
Sodium Nitrate.....		310
Ammonium Sulphate..		400
Acid Phosphate.....		...	125	...
Potassium Sulphate...		850

From the foregoing experiment and from these data, emphasis once more should be placed upon the necessity of using chemicals accurately weighed and applied not oftener than four times per year, if the weights recommended are used. Experiments have demonstrated that on the soil at Urbana, an application of twice these amounts has not produced harmful results. On another soil, ill effects might have followed such an application, while upon some kinds of soil more might safely be applied. The exact amount for each florist to use is a matter to be settled by careful trial upon a small number of plants, using the amounts given above as a working basis.

Remedies for Overfed Plants.

Various remedies have been suggested for relieving the plants injured by an excess of fertilizer, among them, addition of the other elements on the theory that a balanced excessive application is not so harmful as one in which one element is present in excess; also the planting of oats or some other quick growing crop in the benches to relieve the plants of excess of food. These remedies are being tried at the experiment station and a report upon their value can be made after this season. It is to be hoped that by following the above suggestions the florists will avoid the need of any remedy.

Roses.

The cultivation of roses with chemical fertilizers has been continued during this year. A visit to our greenhouse will demonstrate that good roses can be grown by this treatment. An extended study of the data cannot be given in this paper, but the station unhesitatingly recommends the use of sixteen pounds of dried blood, four pounds of acid phosphate and four pounds of potassium sulphate as a basis if they are applied as directed in our pamphlet.

stead of vertical. Even though it has such undesirable habits, it certainly makes enough flowers; it will make as many during the season as anything in sight. I have seen it growing in Chester county this season and can say it was a fine sight, away ahead of Beacon in the same house. It has as good a stem, better color, is a freer bloomer and not the cropper Beacon is, although the flower looks as though a trip to the laundry would improve it greatly, as Victory looks like a wilted collar, and Delhi the same.

Comfort and Rosette.

Comfort has had the advantage of two years' trial on our place and when you visit us next season you will find 10,000 plants. I know a number of you are afraid of Comfort because it looks sleepy under certain conditions. The grower who thinks Comfort is sleepy and discriminates against it on that score is nearer asleep than the carnation. He had better take a nap and, when he wakes up and feels fit, try Comfort. It will produce more money per square foot of bench surface than any red we now have.

Rosette is the fourth variety of last season's novelties with which we are experimenting and from the ultimate dollar and cents point of view I feel sure the best, first, from what it is showing itself to be and, second, because it is one of Dorner's seedlings, all of which have made good here excepting Scarlet Glow. It differs from their other recent introductions in that its growth is heavier, and that it makes plenty of good cuttings that root easily. When lifted and planted indoors it was ready for business long before Mrs. Ward, White Perfection and some others decided whether they wanted to move or not. The stem is stiff, of good length, the flower larger than either Gloriosa or Pink Delight, deeply serrated, center well filled and of unusual depth. In color it is perfectly clear and nearly a Lawson shade, having none of the streaks or faded edges sometimes found on Mrs. Ward. My commission man pronounces it a desirable shade and an excellent keeper.

STUNTED CARNATION PLANTS.

I am sending a carnation plant and a sample of the soil, so as to get your

JUST A FEW KNOCKS.

[Extracts from a paper by Elmer Weaver, of Bird-in-hand, Pa., read before the Lancaster Florists' Club.]

The constant adding and discarding of new varieties of carnations is expensive for the small grower, but if you do not do it you will soon, very soon, be comparing the market reports in your trade journal with the returns from your commission firm with the result that you will decide that the reporter for the trade journal should be in Teddy's Ananias Club or the commission merchant in jail, while the cause usually is to be attributed to your own lack of business acumen in not keeping up with the times.

Some years ago Mrs. Lawson was given a trial in a small way and in a careless manner, with the result that we discarded it the first season as no good, and you all now know we lost good money by our hasty action. Later on when everybody was doing it well we bought stock again, but we lost several seasons when the flowers were bringing big money.

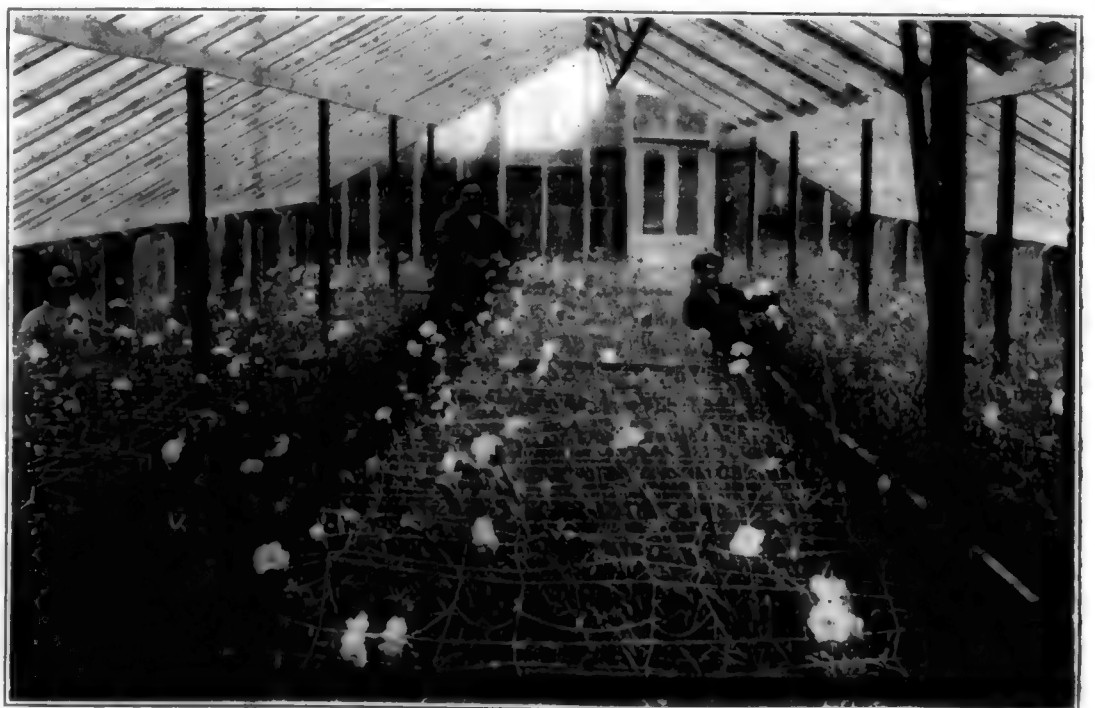

A Boost for Gloriosa.

A present day parallel is Gloriosa, about the grandest variety we have had up to the present time. I have made many inquiries regarding this variety and have never realized before how many people are affected by various degrees of indecision. Several are propagating and buying all they can get of it. Others say frankly they are going to discard it, while others are up in the air and don't know yet what they want to do. The chief objections to this variety are its lack of desire to reproduce itself by a cutting and its lack of growth in the field. These faults should not deter us from experimenting until we overcome them. The tendency to run to a flowering shoot in a short space of time can be partly overcome by topping part of the shoots back when bringing them in from the field.

Benora looks like an ideal varie-gated. It is an exceedingly free bloomer, with a stem of sufficient length and strong enough to hold the flower erect. The color is good, although showing a slight yellow cast. The growth is healthy and vigorous and the cuttings root about as easily as Beacon, which means you may get them rooted if you are careful, very careful, not to allow any chance for them to get too wet, too dry, too hot, or too cold, don't let any wind blow over them, and a few other don'ts. In transplanting from the field, the plants take hold easily and in a few weeks blooming shoots are forming in abundance. On the whole it is a variety worthy of trial, although the color precludes growing it universally in large quantities.

Delhi is an improved Victory and, as I personally never could muster much enthusiasm over Victory, I do not know whether or not I think much of Delhi. With us it has somewhat the habit of a sweet potato vine, the stems showing a tendency to grow horizontal in-opinion as to what is the trouble. The plants are not looking right and some of them have died. We think that perhaps the soil here will not grow carnations, though a gentleman who was testing soil for the government said we could "grow anything in it." However, potatoes seem to be the only sure crop. We used good rotted cow manure.

A. E. N.

There does not seem to be anything seriously wrong with your soil. The specimen plant submitted was undoubtedly a poor plant at planting time. All the original foliage carried by the plant at the time it was benched was dead, which would indicate that the plants did not take hold of the soil readily. This, however, would not necessarily be the fault of the soil.

The specimen is pretty well covered with red spider, which would help to stunt its growth. I would suggest that you syringe these plants every bright day with all the water pressure at your command, until you get rid of the spider. Then give the beds a liberal mulch of half rotted cow manure or of stable manure which is just old enough to have lost its heating properties. You should still be able to get a good spring crop of blooms.

SHORT-STEMMED ENCHANTRESS.

My carnations are blooming with short stems. The stems are but six to eight inches long, but carry fine blooms. I have Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress. They were housed in September and have had one feeding of sheep manure and bone. The plants are healthy, but I am unable to get the stems to lengthen out. My location is northern Ohio. Will you kindly inform me what I can do to lengthen the stems?

W. E. P.

If you were growing the Lawson tribe, instead of the Enchantress, I should not be surprised at the shortness of the stems, but even with your late planting this variety should be making stems at least eighteen inches in length. If the plants look healthy and the blooms develop properly, there is something wrong which your letter does not disclose. Perhaps your plants are affected with a trouble which I saw in a bench of Enchantress on a friend's place two years ago, but which I was unable to diagnose. The whole plant seemed to become stunted after it had taken hold nicely in the fall. The stems refused to lengthen and the foliage took on a light, unnatural color. There seemed to be nothing wrong with the soil or with the culture, and the grower got rid of the trouble by selecting his cuttings from the healthy plants. If this is the nature of your trouble, you can likely get rid of it in the same manner. If all your plants are affected in this way, however, I would advise you to buy new stock from some reliable grower.

STIGMONOSE.

All of my carnation plants show more or less of the disease called stigmonose and I am coming to you for advice. Is there any cure for it? I dread to think of replacing the whole stock, as I have about 20,000 plants in all and it would cost more than I could stand to buy that many new plants. The disease was brought in two years ago with some plants I bought from another greenhouse. If I am careful in selecting the cuttings and then just as careful in looking after them, will there be any chance of the plants outgrowing the disease?

A. G. C.

You can gradually work the stigmonose out of your carnation stock by selecting your cuttings. Select cuttings which do not show any of these light spots. When the cuttings are rooted, select again, as the disease will frequently show at that time, even though the young shoots appeared quite clean when the cuttings were taken. If any of it shows after the plants have become established in the pots, cull them out again. By constant selection you can, after a few seasons, have your stock entirely clean. How many seasons it will take, will depend entirely on how critically you do the selecting.

LAWSON OF YORK.

Jos. W. Lawson started in business at York, Neb., a little over two years ago, making his beginning with one house 25x100. During the last season he added two other houses, one 27x100 and the other 12x90, giving his establishment the appearance shown in the smaller of the two accompanying illustrations. Hot water is used for heating, the apparatus having been installed by Mr. Lawson himself. The boiler house contains two No. 27 Mercer water heaters. The piping is all 2½-inch pipe and he says his home-made system gives him perfect satisfaction. His main crop is carnations, and at the recent exhibition at Lincoln, under the auspices of the Nebraska State Florists' Association, he took first premiums on white and on light pink. He grows roses in small quantities, also sweet peas, mums, violets, smilax and potted plants. One bench is given to lettuce, which proves a profitable crop. Business has been excellent this season. He had a splendid Christmas trade, amounting to several times as much as a year ago, and there has been a good, steady demand for wedding, funeral and society flowers all through the season. He is looking forward to needing still more glass.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The illustration on page 28 will show that carnations can be grown in North Carolina just as successfully as in other climates. This house is 20x80, though the picture shows only half of it. It is one of three houses planted to carnations by Fred Roll, Durham, N. C., a town a good many smokers have heard of. Mr. Roll has something over 2,500 carnation plants and has cut good stock steadily. He complains that this has been the warmest winter in fifteen years, with hyacinths blooming outdoors at the end of January. He thinks a colder climate vastly more favorable for florists.

Carnation House of J. W. Lawson, York, Neb.

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

Plants which are flowering should have a night temperature as near 50 degrees as possible; better have it 48 degrees rather than 52 degrees. The day temperature, when dark and overcast, may advance 8 degrees, and on sunny days 15 degrees, with an abundance of fresh air. Do not allow the houses to become warm and then proceed to rush on a lot of air, nor allow them to get chilly and shut down tight in the same way. Open the ventilators gradually, and close gradually. The surest way to bring on mildew is by careless ventilation.

Plants which now have short stems should be pulled out and their places taken by some other crop. From this time on there will be so many long-stemmed flowers on the market that the grower with short-stemmed stock, unless he can utilize it in funeral work, will have considerable trouble in disposing of it.

Houses which are now coming into crop should give splendid stems, provided the plants are allowed four to six inches apart in the rows and the rows are not too close together. Four to six feet are usual distances, six feet being better where space will permit of it.

Plants in flower, in fact all sweet peas, must be gone over regularly and given proper support. Soft, white twine run lengthwise of the rows, caught here and there to the upright strings supporting the plants, makes the best and neatest support. These supports must be given promptly, for once the stems get bent or twisted, the flower stems from such are unsalable. Then the question of judicious feeding is a most important one. I get constant inquiries from growers asking why their peas come short-stemmed. One cause is too thick sowing; the other, insufficient plant food. Sweet peas must have a deep, rich soil if they are to bloom for a long period and produce strong stems, and they must also have liquid manure or topdressings of pulverized sheep manure, fine bone or cow manure. All these are good, and, after applying them, lightly stir the surface soil prior to watering. It is better not to use chemical stimulants; these may create a strong growth and give long stems, but it is usually found they make growths and flowers soft and that plants soon deteriorate after such stimulants are applied.

In the matter of fumigation also extreme care is necessary. It is easy to scorch the foliage and then blame the damage on some other imaginary cause. When fumigation has to be done, let it be in light doses and do not keep the ventilators closed all night, particularly on warm nights. Where plants are near the heating pipes, there is always danger of red spider getting a foothold. Force of water through a spray nozzle is the best preventive.

For some years we were limited in our range of colors in sweet peas for forcing, but now practically all shades are available, and as the Spencer types have practically driven the grandiflora varieties from the field for outdoor culture, the advent of a large number of new Spencer winter bloomers, with habits and characteristics otherwise resembling such sorts as Mont Blanc and Christmas Pink, makes it probable that in four or five years nothing but Spencer varieties will be seen under glass, for certainly where Spencer flowers are obtainable it is hard work to sell the grandifloras.

SWEET PEA LEAVES DYING.

Can you tell me what is the matter with the enclosed sweet pea leaves? The old leaves become diseased and drop off. What is the cause and the cure, if any? The plants are otherwise healthy and giving good bloom, but the stems are short on the laterals. J. M.

Without knowing anything of the cultural conditions, etc., it is not easy to give the reason for sweet pea foliage dying. If the plants are standing too closely in the rows, stem-rot may develop. Again, if you have hilled them up or given an additional covering of soil, as is often advised for outdoor sweet peas, you are sure to have the same trouble. If the same soil has been previously used for sweet peas, without any change of crops, you may expect diseased plants. Even partial dryness at the root will cause leaves to die off. Sometimes, also, the seeds are saved from plants which, if not actually diseased, have but little vitality, and their offspring or some portion of them will come diseased.

If your plants are in raised benches, you will not get as long and strong stems as in solid beds. The former dry out too quickly, and sweet peas like to have their roots cool and moist. Presuming that you had well enriched soil for them, they would be much benefited now by a top-dressing of sheep manure or old cow manure, while liquid manure once a fortnight would materially improve them. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, 56 to 58 degrees on dull days and 62 to 65 degrees as a maximum on clear days, should be maintained. C. W.

ROOT-KNOT ON POT PLANTS.

What is the cause of root-knot on begonias and petunias? How can it be prevented and cured? S. B.

I have not experienced any of this trouble on begonias and petunias. If you could use sterilized soil when potting, it should disappear. By using lime and soot, especially the latter, the trouble should be minimized. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Mignonette.

The second and third sowings of mignonette are now giving some splendid spikes, and, while hot weather holds off, the quality will hold good. Keep the temperature down at night; 40 to 42 degrees is sufficiently warm, but on many nights this winter the outside temperature has exceeded these figures, so all we can do is to keep them as cool as possible. If you have a really good strain, it will pay to select one or two of the finest spikes for seed, as there is great variation in the seed sold. Even the highest priced will produce many comparatively worthless flowers. Once a fine stem carrying large flowers, light in color, with the flowers closely set on the spikes, is secured, it will pay to hold on to it.

The beds will now dry out much faster and, as mignonette loves to have its roots cool and moist, care should be taken that the soil does not get into a dry condition. A mulch of old manure spread between the rows will keep the surface soil moist and less watering will be needed. Plants just coming into flower should have liquid manure once a week. Do not use chemical fertilizers; cow or sheep manure liquid is the best.

Palms.

Before the real spring rush starts, a few days should be allowed for overhauling palms. Some may need repotting or retubbing, while others will require only a top-dressing. Add some 1/4-inch bone to the soil where retubbing will not be needed again for several years. Bone meal can be added where a couple of years will elapse before plants are to be repotted again. A good fibrous loam, sharp sand and one-fourth of old and well decayed manure makes a suitable soil for kentias, arecas, latanias and phoenix. The weaker growing Cocos Weddelliana, which makes comparatively few roots, does better in loam, with sand and some leaf-mold added where the loam is heavy and retentive.

Any sponging required should now be done. Many plants can be cleaned with cold water alone, but where scale exists, the leaves should be treated with Aphine, fir tree oil, or some other insecticide.

Establishment of B. Lipman, Columbia City, Ind.

LIPMAN'S SUCCESS.

To the general public Indiana is known as the birthplace of poets, just as Ohio is known as the birthplace of presidents, but in the trade the Hoosier State has its renown as the home of successful florists.

Since taking possession of the D. C. Noble place at Columbia City, Ind., B. Lipman has done splendidly. Before removing to Indiana Mr. Lipman was employed at a number of well-known eastern establishments, among them the Floral Exchange, Edgely, Pa.; S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I.; L. A. Noe, Madison, N. J.; J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Philadelphia, and D. B. Edwards, Atlantic City, N. J. When he followed the star of empire on its westward way he located with the South Park Floral Co., at New Castle, Ind. This was in October, 1904. For two years he was a grower of roses there, and then he transferred to the shipping department, where he remained until April 29, 1911. He took possession of the Noble establishment May 1 of that year, having made a lease for ten years. The place at that time was devoted entirely to carnations. Mr. Lipman dropped a part of the carnations to make space for Killarney, White Killarney, Bride and Richmond, with a few Beauties to test the growing qualities of the soil. Let him tell the rest of it:

"I found that this was a good location and that a good paying business could be built up here. I therefore decided to purchase the plant, instead of continuing with my lease. This I did, taking over the Northside Greenhouse April 1, 1912. I have been successful in the rose growing line up to the present. This season I am growing 2,000 Beauties, with which I have had good success, having had a continuous cut and producing some fine flowers. My place consists of six houses 21x150, one house 14x72 and one house 10x50, planted with the following: One house of Beauties, three houses of Killarney and White Killarney; 500 Brides and 4,500 carnations. I have been so successful with the Beauties that I have decided to add two houses this spring, 25x150 each, which I intend to fill with 6,000 Beauty plants. My stock is disposed of by E. G. Gillett, of Cincinnati; H. G. Berning, of St. Louis, and by a contract order with a big firm in Atlanta, Ga., which handles all my carnations. I employ three men, besides myself, to run the plant—night fireman, day fireman and helper—and Paul Kopanka, an experienced rose grower who came with me from the South Park Floral Co.

"The picture represents a part of the stock shipped out for the holiday trade and contains 5,000 blooms; we shipped in all 15,000 blooms for the Christmas trade." The other picture is the exterior view of the plant.

ASTERS FOR INSIDE CULTURE.

If we plant, in benches under glass, Queen of the Market aster plants from 2½-inch pots, April 15, when will they be in crop for cut flowers? Is it better to grow them to a single flower per plant or several to a plant, as in outdoor growing? If grown several flowers to a plant, what will be a safe average number of high-grade flowers per plant? If grown to a single bloom per plant, how closely should the plants be set or spaced?

W. G.

Queen of the Market asters planted in benches about the middle of April should give a few flowers by the middle of June, and will continue flowering for quite a number of weeks. It will not pay you to grow these to a single bloom per plant. They do not come very double, like the Comets, Victorias and Vick's branching varieties. Most of the growers of asters who plant inside allow all the flowers to develop, having use for even the shortest-stemmed ones for funeral work. Queen of the Market is a wonderfully prolific aster, and I would suggest taking out the first terminal flower and then allowing the terminals on all side shoots to develop, rubbing off any side buds which appear. This will give you nice, salable flowers.

I have had good results by setting the plants eight inches apart in the rows and running the rows twelve inches apart. If you should decide to grow, say, only four to six flowers per plant, the rows could be as close as nine inches. If only one flower per plant is desired, six by six inches will be sufficient, but you will find the medium flowers are more desirable. Use a compost such as will grow good carnations or mums, and treat similarly to mums. C. W.

CORNFLOWERS FOR MAY 30.

Will you kindly tell me the best way to grow the double blue cornflowers outdoors, to come in right for Decoration day here, in southern New Jersey? I grew these in pots last year, from seedlings started in the fall, but they damped off in the field. They were cool grown, so I cannot understand it. I thought of sowing the seed outdoors and thinning out. If this is advisable, when is the best time to sow the seed?

H. K.

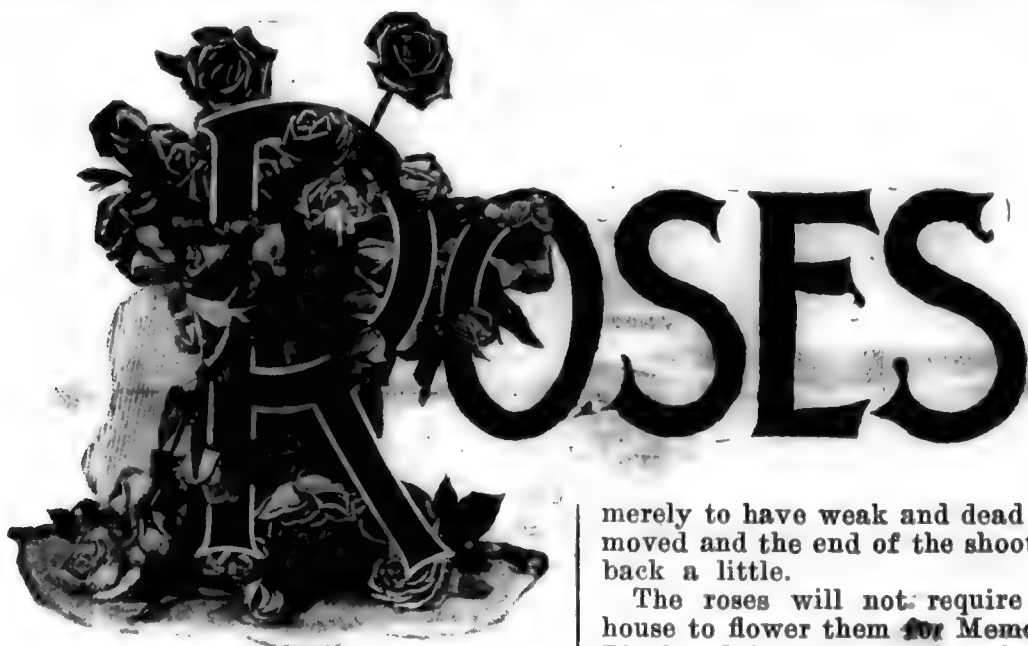

Sow the seeds at once in 3-inch pots. Thin the seedlings out to three in each pot. Start in a moderately cool house, kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night. The little plants should be gradually hardened off and planted out by April 10 in well manured ground, where the cultivator should be frequently plied among them. Whether these cornflowers will give a heavy crop for Memorial day outdoors will depend much, of course, on the season.

The seed can be sown outdoors just as soon as frost has left the ground and the soil has sufficiently dried. With you this should be possible toward the end of March, possibly a little earlier.

B. Lipman's Cut, December 21, 1912.

HARDY EVERBLOOMING ROSES.

I should like to get the names of some roses that are everblooming, that can be cut from summer until frost outside and that will winter in the ground without injury in this Pennsylvania climate. G. R. S.

The hybrid tea class will be the most useful for you. These are not quite so hardy as the hybrid perpetuals, but are more persistent bloomers. A few good varieties to plant are: Gruss an Tep-litz, bright crimson; Radiance, cerise pink; Dark Pink Killarney; White Killarney; Mme. Caroline Testout, satiny rose; Mme. Abel Chatenay, carmine rose, shaded salmon; Mme. Ravary, deep yellow; Viscountess Folkestone, creamy pink; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white, tinted lemon; Konigin Carola, satiny rose.

If your minimum winter temperature falls much below zero, it is safer to lift and bury these roses, replanting them each spring as soon as the ground is open. In less severe weather, if earthed up and protected with straw they will winter safely.

Among the more persistent flowering hybrid perpetuals, Frau Karl Druschki, white; Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, rosy pink, and Mrs. John Laing, satiny pink, are a good trio. One or two other roses you should plant are: Clothilde Soupert, white, shaded pink, and Maman Cochet, both white and pink varieties. These latter are teas and are better heeled in a coldframe over winter. Hermosa, pale pink, is also useful for cutting. C. W.

ROSES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

We are desirous of getting a quantity of pot roses in bloom for Memorial day. Can you inform us how they should be handled in order to get them in? The varieties are baby ramblers, Magna Charta, Mrs. Cutbush, Ulrich Brunner and Frau Karl Druschki. J. C.

None of the roses named will need much forcing to flower them for Memorial day. If not already potted, see that they are got in readiness at once. Of course, if they were potted late in the fall, they will do all the better for it. Keep them in a cold cellar or pit, as near the freezing point as possible. They will start to grow quickly if given any warmth at all. The hybrid perpetuals should be pruned back quite hard. Leave three to four eyes on the strongest shoots and one or two on weaker ones. The baby ramblers need merely to have weak and dead wood removed and the end of the shoots headed back a little.

The roses will not require a warm house to flower them for Memorial day. If placed in a greenhouse, kept at 45 degrees at night the first week in April and 5 degrees warmer when started, they will be on time. If they seem a trifle early, hold them back in a cold house when opening, and any that seem backward can be given a little more heat. C. W.

FOR BOTH INSIDE AND OUTSIDE.

What roses that are used for greenhouse planting can also be satisfactorily grown outside for cut flowers, in this Pennsylvania climate, and how should they be handled? G. R. S.

Such varieties as Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Radiance and My Maryland flower well outdoors, in addition to being good greenhouse roses. Grafted plants, as a rule, are superior to own-root stock outdoors, and field-grown stock is preferable to small plants in pots, although the latter, if in 3-inch to 4-inch pots, do quite well. I have sometimes seen good results obtained by heading back stock which was cleaned out of the houses in April, and planting the same outside.

The hybrid teas and teas prefer a well manured soil, but a lighter soil than the hybrid perpetuals. Plant so that the grafts are covered two to three inches. Be sure the roots are moist, and firm the soil thoroughly about them. A mulch of old manure in summer is beneficial, and if water can be supplied during dry periods the plants will be much benefited. C. W.

PLANTING AND TRAINING SMILAX

Will you give me some instructions with regard to smilax? How many plants should grow from one ounce of seed? How far apart should they be planted in the beds, for best results? How many vines should be allowed to twine on each string, in order to produce the best possible strings? Some strings that one sees are too matted and bunched looking. M. T.

It is not easy to say how many plants of smilax one should get from one ounce of seed, as much would depend on the condition of the seed and also on the way in which it might be treated.

Seeds sown now ought to produce plants of good size for planting next July, when they should be planted in the bed in rows ten inches apart, the plants being spaced eight inches apart in the rows. All the strong shoots these young plants will produce may be trained up one string, and will be none too large for the average market. W. H. T.

DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

Will you kindly tell us what is the disease on the enclosed geranium leaves, and also state what is the remedy for it? J. K. & S.

This is a common disease on geraniums under glass, and also makes its appearance outdoors during spells of hot, moist and sunless weather. If your plants are badly affected I would discard the worst, pick the affected foliage from the others and spread them out so that the foliage of each plant will just clear that of its neighbor. Use care in watering; a common mistake is made in overwatering geraniums. If kept constantly moist they make a soft, sappy growth, which is more susceptible to disease than when the plants are allowed to become fairly dry between the waterings. This latter method hardens the growth, toughens the leaves and makes the plants more disease-proof.

Do not play the hose on your plants. A wetting over may make them look nice and fresh, but helps to breed this leaf disease. Clean the plants frequently, giving them a fresh stand, so that they will not become crowded. Let the night temperature run from 45 to 50 degrees, not over the latter figure. Never use any shade on the glass; the plants want all the sun they can get. Ventilate at every possible opportunity; geraniums love plenty of fresh air. When propagating, do not leave the cuttings in the sand any longer than is absolutely necessary after they are rooted. Weakened constitutions may be often traced to too long a stay in the sand. Do not become discouraged. A little rational treatment will clean out this disease. C. W.

Ansonia, Conn.—Frank L. Hotchkiss, who recently sold his greenhouses on Wakelee avenue to the Ansonia Floral Co., has gone to California, in company with Mrs. Hotchkiss. They expect to remain in California for several months.

Rose Growing Establishment of McAlpine Bros., at Exeter, N. H.

McALPINE BROS.

Among the best known of the more recent additions to the ranks of New England rose growers are McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H. After carefully studying the rose growing situation for some time, as well as the general features and market conditions in and around Boston, W. A. and George F. McAlpine decided to erect one large rose house as a good business investment. Suitable land was procured at Exeter, N. H., where there is a good soil for roses, as well as a pure atmosphere, and a Lord & Burnham house, 60x400, was erected and planted in the summer of 1911.

The brothers, in order to achieve the best results, decided to divide their labors. William A., who had had some years of experience as salesman for William H. Elliott, his uncle, and for the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, R. I., decided that he was best fitted to attend to the firm's interests at the selling end, in the Boston Flower Exchange, while his brother, George F., who had spent some years at W. H. Elliott's big Madbury establishment as foreman and achieved marked success there, took charge of the growing end, at Exeter. The new firm's name, McAlpine Bros., New England Rose Conservatories, Exeter, N. H., soon became known in flower growing circles.

The first year the young firm achieved such success that their roses were eagerly sought after by the most critical buyers, and it was therefore decided to erect another Lord & Burnham house, 60x400, early in 1912. This was planted the same season and the products of the two houses are of such quality that they are already known beyond the confines of New England.

No time or space has been wasted by experimenting on new and untried sorts, only such as the public demands being grown. The varieties raised are: American Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Hillingdon and Richmond. The Richmonds grown at Exeter have caused many a gasp of astonishment this season, both in New York and Boston—stems up to seventy-two inches in length and flowers of marvelous size and substance. Other roses are equally well grown, leaving no doubt that this young and progressive firm has made good and is in the field to stay.

W. N. Craig.

WITH NEAR-BOSTON GROWERS.

The new carnation house of Wm. R. Nicholson, at Framingham, Mass., Lord & Burnham construction, is a grand sight, being a veritable sheet of flowers and buds. All the other carnation houses are in good crop also. Beacon has, of late, burst heavily, the first year it has done so. A small batch of Commodore looked well, and this will be largely planted next season. White Wonder and White Enchantress are fine, with not much choice between them. Benora is splendid. Pocahontas is a big fancy crimson, now giving a great crop. Pink Delight has the field to itself in its particular color, and Gloriosa is doing splendidly. Golden Ray is blooming profusely, but is rather small, and two new yellows will be substituted for it next season. Some promising seedlings were noted in one house. Mignonne as grown here is grand; probably none better is to be found in the country. Several houses are devoted to yellow marguerites, mostly old veterans with gnarled stems. Grown in large pots which were partially plunged, they are giving some fine flowers. Shamrocks in small pans were well grown. Freesias are also grown here in quantity. The Godfrey calla is a wonderful bloomer as grown here, as many as six flowers being open on one 8-inch pot. Mr. Nicholson has plans laid for a big carnation house for 1914, dimensions to be 80x450. This house will accommodate 35,000 plants.

S. J. Goddard, South Framingham,

Interior of One of the Rose Houses of McAlpine Bros., Exeter, N. H.

Mass., has several fine houses of carnations, his most recent house, of King construction, being in particularly good shape. In whites he prefers White Perfection to White Wonder, and will grow less of the latter next season. Rosette was carrying some excellent flowers and St. Nicholas was in fine crop. Beacon has hardly burst at all. Benora here was fine, as, indeed, it is everywhere. Helen Goddard still is grown in quantity; nothing superior of its shade has yet appeared. The old Harry Fenn will have to make way for the larger new varieties, but there have been few greater money-makers than this good old crimson. Pink Delight and Gloriosa both looked well, and are leaders in their respective shades. Lady Northcliffe, an English variety similar to Pink Delight, seems to be a free bloomer. A bright crimson seedling, No. 59, raised by Dorner, looked well and will be more heavily planted next season. Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine is grown in quantity and is equally good as a pot plant or bedder, flowering the whole year. A good assortment of plants for retail trade is grown. The business steadily increasing, a King construction house 10x131 will be built this season, for small pot plants.

Orchids at J. T. Butterworth's, South Framingham, never looked so well. It is not necessary for Mr. Butterworth to be continually importing, as he has the faculty of keeping his cattleyas in good health indefinitely, and increasing them also. Some baskets of Cattleya Trianae, carrying twenty-five flowers each, were fine. All the other cattleyas, such as gigas, Schroederæ, Mossiæ and labiata, were in grand health, and some of the specimen plants were immense. One basket of Lælia anceps carried twenty spikes, and there were others almost equally good. Specimens of Cymbidium Sanderi (insigne) carrying spikes six feet high, with eleven to thirteen flowers each, were the finest I had seen. Dendrobiums, Miltonia vexillaria, cypripediums, vandas and other orchids all looked much at home. Mr. Butterworth does not believe in feeding orchids. He uses fern fiber exclusively in potting or basketing, and is careful to make the compost fine. Dutch bulbs are grown here in quantity. Lily of the valley is well done. In the carnation houses Gloriosa, Winsor, White Wonder, Beacon and Pink Delight are grown.

At Robert Montgomery's, at Natick, roses are the specialty, all the glass being devoted to them except one house, which is occupied by Easter lilies and young rose stock and was earlier planted with chrysanthemums. The roses grown are Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Mrs. Ward, all being the picture of health. All flowers grown here are sold at the Boston Coöperative Market. One new rose house 30x200 will be built here the coming season. As a side issue, Mr. Montgomery has an aviary of considerable size. Pheasants, Golden Silver, Lady Amherst and English, are his special favorites.

James Wheeler is located close to Robert Montgomery in Natick. He is one of the newest but most successful of growers for the Boston market. Carnations are his specialty and they are well grown. Benora, as elsewhere, looked superb. White Wonder, White Enchantress and White Perfection are all grown in quantity and it was hard to say which was best. In production to date White Enchantress is in the lead. Beacon hardly showed a burst flower. Pink Delight and Gloriosa were each good. A large bed of yellow marguerites, propagated last summer and fall, and now over four feet high, were flowering freely and rather knocked the theory that it is necessary to carry over old plants each season. Pink and yellow snapdragons looked first-class. Mignonette, gladioli and Cœlogyne cristata also are grown. Mr. Wheeler has built himself a fine stone bungalow and is comfortably located. His flowers go via electric express on the Boston and Worcester street railroad each day and are sold at the Boston Coöperative Market. W. N. Craig.

VARIEGATED VINCA.

Will you kindly answer the following through the columns of The Review? When is the proper time to lift variegated vinca from the field to put under glass to force for spring sales? Can they be taken from the field and put under glass at once, or is it advisable to put them in a cellar for a while and thus avoid a sudden change? I have a number of plants in the field and would be grateful to you for any light on the subject. W. B.

This popular plant should be lifted not later than October, potted and placed at once in a greenhouse. Along the edges of benches is often found a convenient place for them. If your plants are still alive I would suggest lifting and potting them at once. They will soon make a crop of cuttings suitable for propagating purposes. These, rubbed off with a heel, root quickly, but pieces of mature wood also will root. They do not need a warm house to root in. One such as is used for carnations is all right. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Another week of extreme dullness has been added to Lent. During the last few days the spring-like weather seemed to give a little impetus to business and redeemed the week from making a record for dullness. Beauties suddenly developed a scarcity, which caused an advance in quotations to 75 cents to $1 for specials. It was only in the higher grades that this scarcity was noticeable. Shorts with imperfect flowers were plentiful at 2 cents to 4 cents, although good blooms brought up to 6 cents. Brides, Maids and Killarneys were in full supply at 2 cents to 6 cents, although choice blooms brought as much as 8 cents. The specialties have been quiet, although choice Richmonds have been in somewhat better demand as substitutes for Beauties. The yellow roses have been in better supply. Cattleyas continue in plentiful supply at 12 cents to 30 cents, according to quality. Easter lilies share with Beauties in being the only firm flowers on the market, ranging from 8 cents to 10 cents. Valley is weak, at $1 to $2.50 per hundred, the supply of shorts being excessive. Gardenias are dull and lower at 50 cents to $2 per dozen. Sweet peas have slumped to 10 cents a dozen bunches for shorts, although choice long-stemmed peas bring as much as $1. Violets lead the list in weakness, at 10 cents to 40 cents, with practically no demand at all. Paper Whites are plentiful at 75 cents and up. Callas hold their own at 60 cents to $1.25 per dozen. Lilies have declined to 20 cents to 50 cents, with few buyers at the decline. Tulips are plentiful at 50 cents to $1. Freesias go begging at 5 cents to 15 cents per bunch. Bulb stock generally is in full supply. There is a steady growth in the supplies of old-fashioned flowers, such as wall-flowers, stocks, etc., which are gaining in popular favor. Pansies are coming in freely and fine flowers are offered at 15 cents per dozen bunches. Amaryllis brings 20 cents per flower.

Various Notes.

J. Austin Shaw, manager of the New York office of The Review, has been ill at the Seney hospital, Brooklyn, since February 14. For the first week of his illness Mr. Shaw was delirious and his death was momentarily expected. His fever and delirium have passed, however, leaving him weak but on the road to recovery. In fact, unless some unforeseen complication develops he will probably be able to leave the hospital for his home within a week. During his illness he has been remembered by many of his friends in the trade, his room at the hospital being at times filled with flowers. Communications sent to his residence either by mail or telephone have prompt attention from his assistant.

The eight directors were present at the regular monthly meeting of the New York Cut Flower Exchange, which was held at the Queens Plaza Court, under the presidency of John Donaldson. Only routine business was transacted.

Wm. Elliott & Sons will appropriately celebrate St. Patrick's day by their opening auction of evergreens, rhododendrons, etc.

The New York Flower Auction Co., 146 West Twenty-eighth street, seems to have discontinued business, as the store bears a "To Let" sign. The business opened last fall, with John Cleary as auctioneer.

John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists and of the New York Florists' Club, was taken to Roosevelt hospital February 23 and operated on for carbuncle on the neck. He is doing well and expects to be out again before long. His friends in the trade have been kind in sending flowers, so many being sent that all the patients have been able to share in Mr. Young's enjoyment of them.

George J. Gould has added three large houses to his private range at Castle Gould, Lakewood, N. J.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., like Woodrow Wilson, had an inauguration March 4, when it held the inaugural sale of its extensive new building on Vesey street. The date was two weeks earlier than the usual opening time for auction sales, due to the mild season in Holland, which has justified earlier shipment of stock.

C. C. Trepel has opened another branch, at the store of Simpson, Crawford & Co., on Sixth avenue. He now has stores at Gimbel's and Bloomingdale's in New York and at Lozier's, at the Blossom, opposite Lozier's, and at Gates and Bedford avenues, Brooklyn.

Joseph Trepel has opened his third store on Broadway, Brooklyn, near Buttermans'. With his stores at Lewis avenue and in the Greenpoint section, this makes five stores which he operates. The two brothers between them get rid of large quantities of flowers and their visits to the wholesale market are welcome, as they frequently clear out surplus stock in a most refreshing manner.

At the February meeting of the New York Florists' Club A. S. Burns, Jr., of Spring Valley, N. Y., showed a new seedling carnation named Electra, which was given eighty-six points by the judges. In reporting this fact in the issue of February 13, through a telegrapher's error credit was given to Mr. McKnight, who exhibited some other flowers, for producing Electra. The committee undoubtedly will award Mr. Burns a certificate as soon as they have an opportunity of visiting his greenhouses to see the growing plants.

The seedsmen are all busy and agree in saying that more greenhouses are being built than ever before at this season.

The Henry M. Robinson Co. says sales on the new rose, Mrs. Charles Russell, which is a debutante of this season, have held up remarkably well in a season of dullness. The Miss Helen Taft is another specialty that sells well.

The old Broadway Central hotel has been overrun with Hollanders who are over here selling Dutch bulbs, evergreens, etc.

In response to a call issued by Mrs. F. H. Traendly, a meeting of the Ladies' Committee of the New York Florists' Club was held at the Woodstock hotel February 28. About twenty ladies were present. Charles B. Weathered, chairman of the entertainment committee, also was present to aid in the organization of the committee. Mrs. Traendly was elected chairman, Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Jr., secretary, and Mrs. Joseph Manda treasurer. After a general discussion, subcommittees were appointed to care for different phases of the entertainment in connection with the approaching flower show.

C. A. M.

Wertheimer Bros. report an unprecedented demand for Easter novelties.

Will the bill introduced at Albany, if it becomes a law, regulate the operations of those selling cut flowers and plants on commission as well as those selling vegetables and fruits? It is a question that is interesting some of the wholesalers.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business continues as good as could be expected during Lent. The use of cut flowers and plants increases steadily, and the deterrent influence of the period once given over to sackcloth and ashes decreases year by year. Also, weather conditions have been favorable this winter; we are accustomed to cold weather here, and it does not cut off the demand as it does at some other points, but storms have the same effect here as elsewhere. In the last few weeks the skies have been clear and the weather not severely cold, with storms neither long nor heavy. Stock has been fairly abundant. The local supply increases steadily and has improved in quality, but considerable quantities, especially of long roses, still are shipped here from Chicago and Milwaukee.

Publicity Work.

Minneapolis florists have not made as much noise in the trade as have some others, but the coöperative advertising now being tried in other cities has been in use here for some time. The first attempt was made at Mothers' day in 1912, as the result of an article in The Review that pointed out the way. It was so successful that it has since been repeated, and will be continued. The last effort was for St. Valentine's day, February 14, when a committee of which C. N. Ruedlinger is chairman raised $130 by subscription and published some attractive designed advertisements in the leading papers, also securing some well written news articles on the increasing use of flowers as valentines. No names appeared in the advertisements.

Dinner to S. A. F. Directors.

The directors of the S. A. F. held a two days' meeting here February 25 and 26, in preparation for the convention next August. The work was put through with expedition and the plans of the Convention Association of Minneapolis, recently organized by the florists, were approved. Wednesday evening, February 26, the officials were tendered a dinner by the local members, at the Hotel Radisson. The visitors present were: President J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; Treasurer W. F. Kasting, Buffalo; Ex-president Richard Vincent, White Marsh, Md., and the following directors: A. F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; Thos. Roland, Nahant, Mass.; E. A. Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; H. A. Bunyard, New York; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., and J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; also George Asmus, who was acting as secretary in place of John Young, who was ill in New York, and A. F. Longren and H. Nicholson, of Chicago. The Twin City florists who were present were: Theodore Wirth, Wm. N. Steel, C. N. Ruedlinger, C. A. Bossen, Louis Boeglin, S. D. Dysinger, O. J. Olson, E. P. Holm, L. L. May, Hugh Will, A. S. Rice, Henry Will, O. C. Swanson, G. A. Will, C. F. Rice, Fred Busch, A. Klinkerberry, J. A. Ridgway, T. Commandros, Louis Daneik, L. G. Boughner, L. F. Nordeen, M. Martin, John Rovik, Thomas Hall, Walter Pier, Hans Rosacker, S. A. Jamieson, O. H. Carlson, W. D. Desmond, R. A. Latham, J. G. Taylor, A. Lauritzen, C. E. Schaffer, Max Kaiser, Le Roy Cady, and Wm. H. Bofferdin.

The dinner was a most enjoyable affair in all its features. Most of the visitors were called on for remarks and in addition most of the Twin City leaders had something to say that showed how enthusiastically the approaching convention is regarded here.

H.

South Orange, N. J.—Joseph Manda, recognized as one of our best orchid experts, regrets that the value of space compels him to relinquish the growing of many beautiful varieties and confine himself to commercial or everyday kinds. His fine collection embraces Oncidium splendidum, Cattleya Dowiana and C. Gaskelliana. Among the latter were eleven imported plants, one of which flowered pure white and was sold recently for $150.

OBITUARY.

Henry Rehder.

Henry Rehder, father of Will Rehder, the florist of Wilmington, N. C., died February 22, after a brief illness. He was in his eightieth year. An especially sad circumstance connected with his death was the fact that his wife, who had been his constant companion and helpmate for many years, was also on a bed of illness and was in too serious a condition to be told any of the sad news about her husband.

Though Mr. Rehder had retired from active business, he continued to assist his son until a few days before his death. He was born in the little town of Vegesack, Germany. He came to America when a young man, and located first in New York city, but soon removed to Wilmington. When he arrived the agitation preceding the Civil war was in progress and he took up the cause of the people of his chosen home, serving through the four years of the war as a member of the German Volunteers. During the reconstruction period he returned to Wilmington, where he was married and began to build up business and recover from the losses he had sustained. While never a rich man, he was one of the well-to-do business men of the city. He had four sons, John H., C. F., Will and Carl B. Rehder, all of whom still reside in Wilmington.

Funeral services were held at the home, 819 Red Cross street, and later at St. Paul's Lutheran church, of which Mr. Rehder was the oldest member. Among the numerous floral offerings were designs from Raleigh and Greensboro, N. C., and from Washington, D. C.

William Blacker.

William Blacker, of Clearfield, Pa., died February 21. He was born in Bristol, August 22, 1855, left England in 1880 and came to Houtzdale, where he remained until about fourteen years ago, when he removed to Clearfield. Mr. Blacker was a local preacher in the Primitive Methodist church until a few years ago, when he had to give up the work on account of his health. He then started in the florists' business in Houtzdale. Shortly after he returned to Clearfield and became superintendent of Hillcrest cemetery. He also erected seven greenhouses and was regarded as one of the most successful florists in that part of the state. He is survived by his wife, one son and five daughters.

Peter Morscheiser.

Peter Morscheiser, aged 75 years, for many years a florist in La Salle, Ill., died February 24. He had been ailing only a week and had been seriously ill only for two days. Pneumonia was the cause of death.

Elijah Cottingham.

Elijah Cottingham, of New Castle, Ind., died February 20, aged 41 years. He is survived by a wife and his parents.

James A. Hovey.

From Newton Highlands, Mass., comes word of the death there last week of James A. Hovey, for several years in charge of the seed department of the George A. Weaver Co., Newport, R. I.

other new mark for trade journalism in this field.THE fall show at Cleveland was so sucan exasperating increase in the com-

The cause has not yet been found. The BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Albuquerque, N. M.—The judge of the district court has issued an order for the sale of the property of the Albuquerque Floral Co. A receiver for the company was appointed a short time ago, as reported in The Review of February 20. The property for the most part is plants and shrubs that require constant attention, according to the petition for a sale, and to conduct the business on a paying basis it would be necessary to replenish the stock of flowers and make repairs on the buildings. Sufficient funds for this work are not at hand, so the judge ordered the receiver to sell the property at public or private sale.Fort Wayne, Ind.—J. E. Hauswirth, formerly of Chicago, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, scheduling liabilities of $3,769.85 and assets of $237.

AGAIN THE RECORD.

The classified ads still increase—each week since January 1 there has been a handsome increase in these busy little liners in spite of the fact that a good many stay only a few insertions, like this:Discontinue the geranium advertisement for the present; it has done great work for me.—H. M. Totman, Randolph, Vt., February 23, 1913.Or is it because of such letters as the above that the department grows?At any rate, last week's issue contained thirty-seven columns of classified plant advertisements, practically all sent in unsolicited by advertisers who had tried them before with good results; in fact, a good many florists now grow stock specially to wholesale through the use of these liners. It makes possible a neat increase in a prosperous local business.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has continued to improve during the last week, as it usually does as Lent draws out of the first half.
There has been an abundance of stock of every kind, but it has been possible to clean out most of it at a price, so that the waste has been slight.The special feature of the market has been the small supply of strictly first-class Beauties, the large supply and not too brisk demand for sweet peas, and the overwhelming arrivals of violets, with no possibility of selling them all at any price. Violets never have sold in the last week in February so cheaply as they did this year. There appears to be no explanation except increased supply and decreased popularity. The singles have been blooming prodigiously and the New York growers evidently find the Chicago market one of their best, even if it is lower than ever before at this time of year. There are heavy supplies of sweet peas of all grades. The best bring as much as $2 per hundred, while it is difficult to clear the shortest peas at 30 cents per hundred. In fact, the supply of all grades is so large that the buyer who will take a quantity can get a concession on almost any grade or color.If a buyer needed 100 long-stemmed Beauties, every one perfect, he would have trouble finding them; indeed, to get a dozen perfect flowers of one

ORCHIDS

You will find our Cattleyas the most satisfactory you can use. We pride ourselves on the quality. The supply is so large and steady you can get all you need at any time. Use them in your corsage work.

CARNATIONS

There is an abundance of Carnations in this market, but there are not so very many that are strictly good. It is not what you pay but what you get that determines value—and the more you think about it the more certain you are to order your Carnations of Amling.

LILIES FOR EASTER

length is not easy at present, but the growers say the new crop will alter this unfavorable state of affairs and that good Beauties soon will be abundant again. Other roses are in good supply and of first-class color. Richmond is so fine that many are using it instead of Beauties.

Carnations continue to come in heavily but they are making rather better prices, perhaps because the quality has improved. There still are more splits than usual, just why nobody can tell, but the average quality of the stock is excellent. Lilies are more abundant; evidently some of the crops are early. Callas also are coming in freely. Tulips are not so abundant as they were, although there has been little change in prices. Paper Whites are no longer a burden and few Romans are seen. There are moderate quantities of jonquils and daffodils, but no cumbersome surplus. Freesia is about over. A few stocks, a little mignonette and some good antirrhinum are seen. Valley continues in abundant supply; there are now so many forcers that any shortage is due to unforeseen demand.

The situation in ferns is becoming interesting. Just at a time when the market ordinarily advances, some of the wholesalers are offering ferns below present cost at first hands and there seems to be a disposition to start something that may not be profitably finished.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club meets at the Union restaurant tonight, March 6, and President French is looking for a large attendance.

There is a "For Rent" sign on the floor occupied by Bassett & Washburn and E. H. Hunt. The Hunt business, it is understood, will be concentrated on one of the upper floors of the building previously used. Bassett & Washburn have sublet from Hunt. Mr. Washburn says he does not expect to move, anticipating that he and another tenant in the building will continue to share the second floor.

Peter Reinberg is progressing nicely, but still is in the hospital, as reported in last week's Review.

Singler Bros. are sending Kennicott Bros. Co. some exceptionally good white carnations.

O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says Easter orders already are coming in nicely.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., predicts that the present shortage of Beauties will last only a short time.

C. W. McKellar notes that the proximity of St. Patrick's day and Easter may change the usual situation on white carnations.

George Asmus has been appointed on the executive committee of the Active Club of the Central West Side, which is opposing the city in its plan to get the new Union station built on Twelfth street.

J. E. Hauswirth, who is employed at Fort Wayne, has filed a petition in bankruptcy there. He has scheduled liabilities of $3,769.85 and assets of $237.

Weiland & Risch report that Evans-ton florists have had trouble that they lay to calcium hypochloride put into the city water to prevent the spread of typhoid fever. Several growers will put down wells.

James Leveson, Clark and Huron streets, has broken into the daily papers over family difficulties.

John P. Smith, J. P. Wagner and Charles Hengesch are the incorporators of the Chicago Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association, organized to promote business interests.

There was a quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago at the office of Mt. Greenwood cemetery in the First National Bank building March 1, to inaugurate plans for boosting the spring show now less than a month away.

A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., arranged for a special car on the Alton to carry the Chicago visitors to the Peoria convention March 4.

N. J. Wietor says that this is proving one of the best seasons on record in the carnation cuttings department of Wietor Bros.

Geo. Reinberg now is giving the greater part of his time to the affairs of the Lincoln Supply Co. His son now is associated in the business with him.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., notes as the most remarkable feature of last week's business that their total sales showed one of the best increases made this year, in spite of the low price of violets. He says they are getting better prices for carnations than last year and that the sweet peas return more money because of better quality.

Kyle & Foerster say that Lent is comparing well with last year.

Zech & Mann report satisfaction with present conditions.

John Kruchten says his crops are now pretty well off, but that he expects good cuts for Easter.

The February weather was almost exactly normal, except in the matter of sunshine, of which there was nearly thirty per cent more than usual in the month. The average was seven hours per day, which is sixty-six per cent of the possible, with fifty per cent the usual record for February.

Phil Schupp, manager of J. A. Budlong's, reports that Beauties are showing a tendency to improve with better weather conditions. Valley is more in demand than is usual during Lent, which, according to Mr. Schupp, must be due to increased popularity of corsage bouquets.

If corrugated boxes can be used advantageously for overnight shipments into the Chicago market, from New Castle and Richmond, why can't they be used to advantage on overnight shipments going out? The customers could bundle them and freight them back. Think of the saving, on express and on boxes!

Mr. Bohannon says it has more than paid him to push these and single violets—doubles are not handled.

Bassett & Washburn say that their average daily cut of carnations for the last ten days has been around 15,000.

John Mangel says Lent has not cut down the business as he anticipated and for the last two weeks his staff has found plenty of work. Funeral pieces have been especially numerous and this class of work has helped considerably in holding up the volume of sales.

A. L. Vaughan states that while orders are more numerous than last year at this time, the footings on the individual orders do not figure so high, owing to the advanced prices of last winter, due to the extreme weather that caused prices to hold firm.

Lubliner & Trinz have not yet secured a new location to take the place of their present headquarters on Randolph street. Mr. Trinz announces that their new Chicago theater, on Forty-seventh street, is nearing completion and will be opened soon. A second theater is in process of construction on Central Park avenue, while the site for a third is being considered.

James H. Burdett, whom many florists know as press agent for the flower shows, ex-secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, is now a member of the state civil service commission. His was the first appointment made by the new governor.

Paul Blome, 1361 North Clark street, has found considerable business in the way of table decorations and reports trade has held up beyond expectations for Lent. An order has been placed with Buchbinder Bros. for one of the new model Buchbinder refrigerators, which, it is hoped, will be ready in time for Easter.

Frank Oechslin has been forced to discontinue all shipping business on Easter stock, on account of the heavy local demand. A walk through his establishment explains why business is so rushing, as everything is in apple-pie order and the stock in the best of condition.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has put a new Autocar into commission. It has a carrying capacity of one and one-half tons and will be used for light delivery purposes in the city.

J. W. Davis, of Davenport, Ia., was in town February 28, with Mrs. Davis, on their way home from a three weeks' outing in Florida. Mr. Davis is the controlling factor in the model plant of the trans-Mississippi section. He has been picking 20,000 sweet peas a day from one house, shipping them to the A. L. Randall Co.

Mrs. K. N. Cooper, manager of the Auburndale Goldfish Co., seems to be getting more than her share of hard luck since the first of the year. The latter part of December Mrs. Cooper fell on an icy walk and she has not yet recovered from the shock. She has been confined to her home on this account for the last six weeks. As reported in The Review, her establishment was recently burglarized, and on top of all this the mysterious death of a young colored woman, employed by her, is causing Mrs. Cooper considerable worry. The woman failed to report for work for several days and on investigation was found in a hospital, where she died several days later. Mrs. Cooper is planning a trip to New

AN APPEAL.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will hold the annual carnation night March 12, at the meeting rooms, Madison, N. J. We have plenty of vases and fine tables, so there is room for all we get. Our own boys will bring all they can in the standard sorts, and we would appeal to introducers through The Review to send us their 1913 candidates, so we can all see them and let the public see them, too. There are a grand lot around this year, and it would be a pity to not let us see them as they actually are. We will have an essay on culture, too. Send all consignments in care of C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., and a full dozen of us will do justice in the way of staging them. Edward Reagan, Sec'y.

KANSAS CITY.The Market.

The Lenten season as yet seems to be almost forgotten and business is as good as could be expected in such cold, uncertain weather. The wholesalers are short on everything. Roses are coming into crop again, after a shortage which has continued for five weeks. The Killarneys and Richmonds will be exceptionally fine for Easter, and the Beauties are of splendid quality. Bulbous stock is arriving in larger quantities, but is only bringing a fair price. Yellow seems to take the lead in the color of bulbous stock, especially in daffodils. Sweet peas have improved in quality and increased in quantity, but do not seem to move fast. Carnations have advanced a little in price, and they also show a marked improvement in quality. Sprengeri and adiantums are in better demand and the stock is improving. Violets seem to drag, as there are so many on the market.

Various Notes.

E. D. Ellsworth will have close to 1,800 lily plants ready for Easter, with any quantity of blooms and buds which look exceptionally fine.

William Foith will have a fine crop of roses and carnations for Easter. His carnations are especially good—better than in any previous year.

The Right Display Is the Big Secret of Success In Your Business

Maybe you've never looked at this Refrigerator question in its true light. Getting the right flowers is only half the battle. Selling is your big proposition.

A McCray Refrigerator will play a vitally important part in getting your flowers into your customers' hands and getting their money into your cash drawer. Hundreds of florists have found this out to their steadily growing profit. They've found that in addition to saving them big money, the McCray has boomed business with a rush—by keeping the flowers in the beauty and freshness of perfect condition—and by displaying them with the very limit of attractiveness.

Write for our Catalogue No. 73, which gives all the facts—lots of useful information which you should have whether you're in the market now or not.

Alexander McConnell of New York City, whose refrigerator is shown in the cut, writes us as follows:

"The refrigerator you installed in our place of business has been very satisfactory in every particular. The flowers retain their freshness and color. The refrigerator is ventilated in so satisfactory a manner that the glass is never covered with moisture; consequently the stock can be inspected without opening the doors. The box is also economical in its requirement of ice."

The Rising Eastern Market.

March has come quiet as a lamb, with sudden fierce changes to leonine severity that pass almost as quickly. The market is irregular, making it difficult of description. The crops of many flowers are heavier than a week ago, while business is hardly so good, although there have been excellent days. Good Beauties are extremely scarce. The rose crops in general are light, yet the shorts are often unsold. White carnations are in brisk demand at good prices, while the colored varieties do not bring so much; this is particularly true of Enchantress. Violets are in poor shape; not the flowers; they are all right; but the call for them. An expert believes that the fashion of wearing artificial flowers has hurt the violet. Sweet peas are in oversupply; fine flowers bring moderate prices, while poor flowers often bring nothing. Valley is in oversupply. Easter lilies have been hard to market. Snapdragon has fallen in price. Cattleyas are less plentiful, but lack support. Gardenias have only a limited market just now. Daffodils are firmer, with lighter receipts of fine stock. Good tulips, such as Le Matador, Couronne d'Or, Murillo and Lord Rosebery, are in demand, but the ordinary variety lacks support. White lilac has been selling fairly well. Daisies and pansies are good stock most of the time. Shipping is not so heavy as it has been.

branches of the profession in the advertising experiment that has been carried on lately by William A. Leonard, of Lansdowne, Pa. Mr. Leonard has been advertising his roses in a local evening paper, offering to send fresh flowers cut from his own greenhouses by parcel post at a price lower, grade for grade, than the same roses bring in the stores. This is believed to be the first effort of its kind made in this city and its success will be watched with interest. At first glance it seems like an attempt to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. Exactly how the stores can continue to pay good prices in face of such competition is difficult to see.

Craig's at Easter.

The modern plant of the Robert Craig Co., at Norwood, is an important factor in the production of high grade Easter plants. Today they have a number of houses devoted to some of the finest stock that has been seen here. I have never seen so much fine Easter blooming stock in one place. There are three houses of unusual promise. The first is filled with roses, Tausendschon, Juniata, Hiawatha and a few other roses. They have been grown in a low temperature. They are well budded and the picture of rose vigor. The second house is filled with gigan-

Specimen ferns are a feature at Norwood.

The older place of the Robert Craig Co., at Forty-ninth and Market streets, is filled with all varieties of Easter plants of merit, old and new. The lilies show the contrast between the For-have ever seen, all Gladstone save a few of the pink. The golden genista is better, the experts agree, than in past seasons, while rhododendrons are liberally covered with big buds. Ferns and foliage plants, with the less important flowering plants, complete the varied stock. The Easter bustle is already beginning. Loads of plants are going out to the early buyers. Their places are being taken by big loads of plants from Norwood. The timing on all varieties appears to be wonderfully accurate. It looks today as though nearly everything would bloom naturally at Easter.

FLORISTS MEET AT AUSTIN.

We don't know of any convention that ever meets in this city, says an Austin, Minn., newspaper, that is more quiet than the W. B. Perry Florists' Association. The Federated Women's Clubs have their little differences, the Convention of Charities and Corrections had its trouble, the Ministerial Association may have its friction, but one couldn't conceive of a florists' convention being other than quiet. The florists' work lies with quiet nature, the silent but wonderful manifestation of plant life. When the florists' convention convenes no bands are playing a "Hot Time!" No marching bodies with flags and ribbons meet the delegates! The mayor never surrenders the keys of the city. There are no addresses of welcome and no programs. president. When the convention meets the florist of the place of meeting does all the entertaining. This association has met here before, the last time being four years ago.

A. N. Kinsman is entertaining the association at its winter meeting, those present being W. B. Perry, of Cresco; W. T. Symonds, Decorah; John Murphy, Independence; Walter S. Hall, Osage; Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Wetherby, of Charles City; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clausen, and P. Clausen, of Albert Lea, and O. J. Olson, of the firm of Holm & Olson, of St. Paul.

These florists always have a good time and never miss a convention if they can help it. There is sociability all the time. The delegates wander around the greenhouses looking for faults, with both eyes open for any new wrinkles in the business. They talk about red bugs, green worms, white microbes and black fungi. The whole range of plant life as found in the greenhouses finds a place on the unwritten program of subjects. It is a practical convention and one that never has a trace of unpleasantness and never leaves a thorn scratch when it is over.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market reports for the last week in February are that everything in season was quite plentiful. The rose shippers are again on crop in all varieties; roses were again so that orders for both local and outside could be filled in full, with easier prices. Fancy long Beauties are scarce, but there seems to be plenty of the lower grades, especially short-stemmed. The bulk of the stock is Killarney.

The great glut during the week was in violets and sweet peas. In large lots the price was $2 per thousand, with the lower grades even cheaper. The supply of carnations also was large and the five wholesale markets were well stocked every day during the week, and at reasonable prices all through. The varieties most in demand are White Wonder, Enchantress in all colors, Beacon and Washington. The bulk of this stock is being consigned by the Kirkwood growers.

There is also a fine supply of bulbous stock. Tulips are among the best in

The market is excellently supplied with greens of all kinds, with smilax, asparagus, galax and adiantum having the call.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, spent March 3 in St. Louis and left at night for Peoria, to attend the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association.

Chas. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., spent two days in Chicago last week buying up Beauties for a big job they have this week. He says he got what he wanted, and had a good time besides.

A. Jablonsky, at Olivette, Mo., according to those who visited his place, has the finest Easter lilies ever seen there, just right for Easter.

Chas. Kuehn was confined to his home with the grip last week, but everything was run in good shape by George Schreifer, A. Mayer and Chas. Kuehn, Jr.

The Bentzen Floral Co. has outgrown the old automobile delivery and is out with a new truck, which Mr. Bentzen is trying to master, but the chances are that the junior will be at the wheel by the end of the week.

The Brix Floral Co., on St. Louis avenue, reports an unusual quantity of funeral work all last week, mostly large designs.

The C. Young & Sons Co. has the decoration for the spring opening of the Vandervort department store this week, in which nearly 1,000 Beauties will be used. The big force of men started the work Saturday night, March 1.

A state board of forestry is to be created at the state capitol this week, according to Senator Cassidy, of St. Louis. This board is to appoint a state forester, to receive $2,500 per year salary. The Florists' Club is to send in the name of an expert after the governor appoints the new board.

cal Garden, Dr. George T. Moore, has appointed Dr. Jesse Moore Greenway as curator of the herbarium. Dr. Greenway is a graduate of the University of Berlin and the author of several books on botany.

Mrs. Edward Mallinckrodt, wife of Edward Mallinckrodt, who was president of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, died last week at her home in Vandeventer place. Every florist in the city had something for the funeral. The house was completely filled with flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank X. Gorly, of the firm of Grimm & Gorly, are spending a week at Hot Springs, Ark. The firm is making preparations to move into its new location, two doors west of the old one, which will give them much needed room.

Albert Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., is back at his post after a week's confinement at home with a bad case of grip.

Mrs. Rose Schoenle, who is now a close neighbor to R. J. Windler, on South Grand avenue, opened her store this week, with attractive window displays and a splendidly arranged store.

Plans are being prepared for rearranging the heating system of the greenhouse plant of John T. Milligan, at Crescent, Mo., using the Siebemann vacuum system. Mr. Siebemann and Robt. Thomson, the builder of the plant, spent March 2 at Crescent, in consultation with Mr. Milligan about the building of more greenhouses this summer. Mr. Milligan, who is several times a millionaire, expects to have his big growing plant in operation by next fall, and will grow violets, carnations and roses for this market.

The St. Louis Florists' Club's carnation meeting will take place next Thursday afternoon, March 13. The exhibition will be held at the store of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., 1316 Pine street, and the meeting, as usual, at the club's rooms in the Odd Fellows' building. The meeting opens promptly at 2 p. m., and at 4 p. m. the club will proceed in a body to Smith's to view the exhibition. Growers of new varieties are requested to send blooms. Shippers to this market are also requested to send samples of their stock. All florists in the city are invited to this exhibition, and a large attendance is expected.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible, the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders..	113.20
Net value of orders.....	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was poor all last week. Saturday showed a somewhat better clean-up, but trade on the last day of the week is generally good. Roses are more abundant and have dropped considerably in price. Long-stemmed Beauties are scarce, but there is a surplus of short-stemmed stock. Cardinal, Russell, Ward, Sunburst, Taft and Hillingdon are favorites. There is a greater proportion of short-stemmed stock of these, as well as Killarneys and Richmonds, arriving. Last week was a poor one for roses. Carnations are now going off crop with some growers and this may relieve the present glut. A few fancies, such as Rosette and Benora, reach $4, but the general run goes at $1 and $2, with select at $3. Violets are a perfect glut and are only cleared at low prices. The color and quality are fine. Sweet peas are abundant. Some superb long-stemmed stock sells well, but there are quantities of short-stemmed flowers that are hard to move at any price. Lilies and callas are abundant. The former are mostly quoted at 12½ cents per bud for Easter, inferior stock being offered lower. Yellow Marguerites are rather too plentiful. Mrs. Sander is selling well, making $2 per hundred. Freesia is almost over.

Abundantly prepared at all times.

Flowers for All Occasions, from Cradle to Grave

Dutch bulbous stock is in heavy over-supply, but is of fine quality. The prevailing prices are not profitable for growers.

Gardenias are rather more abundant. Valley is of variable quality, a good deal being inferior. Blue cornflowers, wallflowers and English primroses are popular. There is still an ample supply of Cattleya Trianae. Some C. Schroederæ are coming in. This latter variety, however, is not popular here. The demand for asparagus, smilax and adiantum is not good. Pot plant trade is showing a decided impetus, and indications are that this will be more of a plant Easter than ever before.

Various Notes.

The Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn, has 5,000 Easter lilies in prime condition. The azaleas and rambler roses are also good. This concern is a heavy shipper of single violets to the Boston Coöperative Market.

For the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at the establishment of W. W. Edgar Co., Waverley, March 8, members and friends are invited to take the 2 o'clock train in the Cambridge subway, on Tremont street, changing at Harvard Square to Waverley cars.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business has been good for the last few days, as the coming of the suffragettes and the other inaugural visitors has made the demand for cut flowers quite satisfactory. Violets, sweet peas, gardenias and orchids lead in popularity, though the fakers are handling a large amount of the calls for the violets and sweet peas. Dinner decorations, however, are not as plentiful as could be desired, though there are a few good orders to be had. Funeral work has been exceptionally heavy.

Various Notes.

John H. Small & Sons furnished the flowers and other decorations which graced the rooms of President Wilson and Vice-president Marshall at the Shoreham hotel, and delivered for Henry P. Neun, of Rochester, N. Y., two baskets of growing plants and two dozen special American Beauty roses to Senator Thomas B. Dunn, for presentation to the President.

The amaryllis exhibition at the propagating gardens last week attracted considerable attention. There were 580 plants, all grown from seedlings and bearing about 3,000 blossoms. Some of the blossoms measured ten inches across. The hybridizing was accomplished with thirteen crossings of parent plants. No attempt at definite classification will be made until the persistence of acquired traits is demonstrated.

Robert Bowdler has opened his new store at Fourteenth and I streets, N. W., in the room that was occupied by George C. Shaffer prior to his moving across the street. The interior and exterior of the store have been painted white and numerous improvements have been made, including the installation of electric lights. For the present, at least, Mr. Bowdler will not keep open on Sundays and will thus be one of the few exceptions.

Charles Wernig, of York, Pa., was in town last week, showing his new Primula Gertrude, a clear, vigorous growing primrose, bearing, when in perfection, twenty-five to forty bunches per 7-inch plant. The blossoms are of a delicate pink shade, measuring two and one-fourth inches in diameter.

Other visitors in town were Robert Shoch, Sidney Bayersdorfer and S. S. Pennock, of Pennock-Meehan Co.

J. H. Small, Jr., and W. F. Gude were prominent in inaugural affairs. Both gentlemen were members of half a dozen different committees of importance, and, unlike the usual run of committeemen, they took an active part in all the work. As chairman of the illumination committee, Mr. Gude deserves credit for the magnificence of the appearance of the Court of Honor, where President Wilson reviewed the parade. Mr. Small furnished the American Beauty roses and other flowers which graced the presidential section, and C. H. Merryman furnished the countless number of cedar trees which banked the entire front of the White House grounds. C. L. L.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A LAWN grass that will kill weeds is a brand much sought for.

F. H. HENRY, of Henry & Lee, New York, is on a western trip.

IN all branches of the seed trade quick action is in vogue; even the onion set people now are hustling.

WE cannot too highly recommend the assistant who is always healthy, especially in the busy season.

THE wise market gardener is buying his usual quantity of seed, regardless of the present price of produce.

THE L. C. Brown Seed House, of La Grange, Ill., is planning to open a branch establishment at Kankakee, Ill.

It is the opinion of the average buyer that good seed is the kind that will make a prize-winning crop, no matter how planted.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, is platting a portion of the property on which its greenhouses stand and will put about forty lots on the market.

JAMES A. HOVEY, for several years in charge of the seed department of the George A. Weaver Co., Newport, R. I., died at Newton Highlands, Mass., last week.

THE Atlantic Seed Co., Augusta, Me., has been incorporated, with $30,000 capital stock. The promoters are G. J. Lange, of Eau Claire, Wis., and L. J. Coleman and R. S. Buzzell, of Augusta.

THE Standard Seed and Soil Inoculation Co., of Troy, N. Y., recently was incorporated. The directors are John E. McDonald, 1913 Sixth avenue, Watervliet; Isabel Kelly, 2162 Fourteenth street, and Pierce Bailey, Springside, Burden avenue, Troy. The company is capitalized at $1,000.

MAIL orders in February have, according to reports, been good, but not many records have been broken. The principal increases have been made by the comparatively new houses in the south and west. The older houses in the east still are growing steadily, but they are more conservative. The weather in February was so mild that it not only helped to a good mail business, but in some sections started the counter trade stronger than usual.

FOR some time of late the weather has been seasonable in nearly all sections. The rush occasioned by the preceding mild weather has let up, giving a chance to keep up with the orders from sections that must have seed at once or lose out. All standards seem to be in fair supply, except Fordhook lima and a few other important sorts of beans. There is a long season yet, however, and the plan this year, more than ever, seems to be to hold off until absolute necessity compels a purchase; there may be, therefore, a scramble for some things yet.

"OFF AG'IN, ON AG'IN."

The congressional struggle over free seeds reminds one of the well-known story of Finnigan. It will be recalled that this celebrated Irish railroader

THE COST OF FREE SEEDS

IN response to a resolution of the Senate, Secretary Wilson has furnished the figures covering the cost of the congressional free seeds for the last four years. It totals $1,110,933. The cost of purchasing seeds and plants includes the purchase price, freight and drayage, inspection of growing crops, office salaries, equipment and supplies; the cost of preparing the seeds for distribution and delivery to the mails includes rent, cost of equipment and repairs, labor, bags, boxes, paper, twine, hauling, etc. The figures, which do not include the cost of carrying in the mails, are as follows:

was taken to task for using up so much perfectly good paper in his reports of his numerous derailments, so the next time the report came in laconically: "Off ag'in, On ag'in, Gone ag'in, F'ninnigin." The free seeds appropriation might well be reported in the same words.

In the first place there was an effort in committee looking to the omission of the appropriation, but it failed. Then, when the appropriation bill was presented in the House, an effort was made against the free seeds appropriation, possibly a little stronger effort than last year, but still unavailing. Then the bill went to the Senate. Before the Senate committee the argument against the appropriation for seeds produced no effect, but when the bill was up for consideration February 27, much to everyone's surprise, the Senate voted to cut out the congressional free seeds, inserting a paragraph which permitted the Secretary of Agriculture to try out new varieties and to distribute them for experimental purposes, but made no provision for the regular free seeds distribution. Then the appropriation bill went to the conference committee. The free seeds were put back in it. Both houses concurred and President Taft signed. So it is "off ag'in, on ag'in, gone ag'in," for another year.

THE FREE SEEDS.

A strong appeal for the discontinuance of the congressional free seed distribution was recently made by Representative Robert M. Page, of North Carolina, before the House Committee on Agriculture. For several years Mr. Page has opposed on the floor the appropriation for the free distribution of ordinary seeds, and he asked the committee to eliminate the appropriation from the bill in the first instance, but the committee did not follow his request. Mr. Page said that every farmers' organization in the country commended him for his effort last year to lop off the free seed farce. These organizations declared it was simply a waste of public money and that the agriculturists of the country cared nothing for the seeds, as they did not use them. "I have for ten years in Congress opposed this distribution," he declared. He denied that he opposed the distribution in the interest of the seed trade, saying he had never had any correspondence with anybody connected with that trade. "The only people to whom any motive personal to themselves might be imputed are the editors of agricultural papers," Mr. Page continued. "I can see that they might have a personal interest in the opposition because of the fact that they have a certain income from the advertising of seed producers. They almost as a whole oppose this appropriation. Most of them editorially have commended the effort I have made to discontinue the appropriation.

"And personal observation—one of the reasons for my opposition is the worthlessness, practically, of these seeds, which I think can be demonstrated to any gentleman who will take the trouble to make a little inquiry. Personal observation, or, rather, concurrence, was brought to my attention within the last few months by a gentleman who happens to live in my own district. A large industry is carried on in certain sections of this country in the cultivation and sale of the Rocky Ford cantaloupe. It is a native of the high altitudes of Colorado and grows to greater perfection there than elsewhere.

"I happened to have an enterprising constituent who owns a farm in Colorado, on which he raises the Rocky Ford seed. He is an authority in this country on the cultivation and the raising of this particular fruit. I have his word that the government contract let for the Rocky Ford seed which the Department of Agriculture was going to distribute was given to a firm of Jews in the state of Colorado, whose name I do not recall at the present time, on a competitive-bid price. That he himself saw the employees of these people, who had been the successful bidders to the government, going into the cantaloupe fields of Colorado from which the salable, perfect fruit had been gathered and sold, taking the refuse that the farmer had left, to secure the seed that they sold the government under the contract that they took; and this happened last year. He says they are absolutely worthless, and I believe he knows what he is talking about.

"Personally and in the interest of the people of the country, I do not think we are warranted, that the committee is warranted, or that Congress is warranted, in appropriating a dollar of money for a useless purpose; and my thorough conviction is that this sum, amounting practically to $300,000, that is expended for the purchase and distribution of ordinary garden seeds, is a waste of that much of the tax money of the people; and I do not think this committee or the House of Representatives is warranted in spending that money; and I wanted merely to make my protest here and say to the gentlemen that I felt that the people that are to be consulted—the people who are supposed to use these seeds—do not want them."

It is an unusually strong grower and the most prolific bloomer of any of the climbing roses. 4900 MARKET STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WOOD, PA.

T. Philipps & Co., Toledo, O., seeds and supplies; David Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J., dahlias, cannas, gladioli and other summer-flowering bulbs; Charles D. Ball, Philadelphia, Pa., wholesale list of palms and decorative plants; Wilhelm Pfitzer, Stuttgart, Germany, seeds and plants; Searl & Sons, Sydney, Australia, bulb catalogue.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Trade among the wholesalers was highly satisfactory during the month of February. Stock of all kinds was good and there was enough of everything to supply all demands, except in roses and Beauties. Roses, however, are getting more plentiful and of better quality every day, with a good outlook for Easter stock.

All the retailers are carrying a fine assortment of blooming plants, which, with the forced shrubbery so much in use at this time, enable them to make fine displays. Now that nearly all baskets are made with pans that can be filled with water, there is an unusual display of arranged baskets on exhibition in many of the stores, and purchasers are encouraged to buy baskets of all sizes. This makes a demand for a much greater variety of flowers than in former years, and in the case of debutantes one finds many more baskets than bunches, which was not true in former years. Even in funeral work certain flowers are used—and most artistically, too—which would not have been thought of a few years ago; such flowers, for instance, as daffodils, red tulips and, in fact, anything that looks like a flower. Nothing is objected to when arranged so that it is artistic and pretty. Of course, there are some who make awful conglomerations, but they should not be classed with the real artists in the business. And there never was a time when it was so necessary for a cut flower worker to know his business as just now.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements have had some unusually pretty effects in blooming plants arranged in baskets, but nothing more striking than a single specimen Adiantum Farleyense in a basket, with an appropriate ribbon.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. have in the rear of their store a conservatory which is really a part of the store, and which is ablaze with blooming plants of all kinds. And, judging from the number of plants wrapped for delivery, one would say that the extra efforts are not in vain.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who takes pride in the artistic effects which can be produced in a small room, makes frequent changes in the character of the plants used in her window and store, presenting at one time some fine color effects in foliage plants, and at another time using blooming plants with cut flowers and other effects to harmonize. This can only be done by the true artist and it shows the advances being made in the profession.

The A. W. Smith Co., with its immense room, at this season keeps one man busy looking after decorative effects for the windows, one of which is nearly always an orchid window of some kind, besides arranging the groups of foliage and blooming plants

The Market.

There is an abundance of all kinds of flowers, but there has been no glut. Business has kept up well, in spite of Lent, and there has been a great deal of funeral work. Bulbous stock is most plentiful and Dutch hyacinths are coming into the market in great quantities. The trade expected a big increase in business last week, because of the hardware convention in the new city hall auditorium, but the extra work for the convention proved to be of little consequence. Flowering plants are moving at a lively pace.

Various Notes.

L. D. Robinson reports that his azaleas and bulbous stock will be in fine condition for Easter. January and February have been the best business months in his experience.

Meacham & Hassell have been doing a great deal of funeral work during the last few weeks.

My Original SILVER PINK SNAPDRAGON

is a money-maker, being a grand variety indoors and out. Aside from a possible sport, it has never varied from the soft, silvery pink which is best in full sunshine, making it an ideal bedder. Plants like cut can be grown in three months, which, in 2½ or 3½-in. pots, will make double the money that geraniums or any other bedding plant will, from the fact that you can grow 16 plants to the square foot in 2½-in. pots and 9 plants in 3½-in. pots. Use pencil and figure profit at 75c to $1.50 per dozen. It requires 9 months for geraniums to do half so well, and a year of good growing for carnations and many other plants to equal it. Clean up a corner anywhere and fill with SILVER PINK. You can't keep it from growing.

Price of seed—my own growing—$1.00 per packet of over 500 seeds; 3 packets, $2.50, delivered. Can still supply plants for MEMORIAL DAY flowering at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000, by express. Cash must accompany all orders.

BLOSSOM-END ROT.

Can you tell me what my outdoor tomatoes suffered from last season? A small black spot started at the eye and spread all over the fruit. It was a kind of black rot. I have been told that it is caused by the decaying wood in the soil. Can you say whether this is correct, and what remedy would you advise? W. D.

The trouble you have had on your tomatoes is commonly called blossom-end rot. Little is known of the cause of this trouble, which affects plants both under glass and outdoors. It is worse outdoors during a spell of damp weather. It seems to be superinduced indoors by a too close and stuffy atmosphere and an overabundance of moisture, both at the root and in the atmosphere. Perfect cleanliness is necessary, including whitewashing of the walls, keeping floors and spaces below benches clear of rubbish and removal of dead or decaying foliage.

Avoid using the same soil again for tomatoes when your fruit has been badly affected. Do not save and sow your own seed, but secure it from a distance, where climatic conditions are not congenial to the disease in question. Pick off and destroy spotted fruit as fast as it appears. Keep a dry atmosphere and a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. Ventilate on all possible occasions, always avoiding draughts. In winter keep the plants a little on the dry side for best results. Perfect cleanliness will do much toward getting rid of this disease. C. W.

BY DISBUDDING LILY BULBS

in the fields in Japan about July 1st, when the buds are only half developed, much of the strength of the bulb is preserved. Horse-shoe Brand Giganteum fields are all disbudded at the proper time. This means quite some work, for it is not a light job to disbud between two and three million lily plants. However, it is done because it makes the bulbs more solid and compact, much stronger and better able to stand the Cold Storage strain, should it be required. This is likewise one of the reasons why Horseshoe Brand Giganteum have such a good flowering capacity, as compared with some other brands.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

EVERBLOOMING BABY ROSES.

What baby rose is good for commercial use in the vicinity of San Francisco? The growers here are raising Cecile Brunner mostly, but it is not of much account in the winter season. Are there some other everblooming baby roses in the eastern markets? If so, kindly inform us. S. M. & C.

There are several other varieties of the true polyantha type, and many belonging to the ramblers and other less flowering families. All of these are small-blossomed, more or less clustered. They are usually grown for a particular occasion and, after blooming, but little more is expected of them for several months. Cecile Brunner does not come under that description, but, when properly handled, will give blossoms all through the fall and winter season. During the early spring and summer it is flowered with great success outdoors, where, though the foliage may not be as delicate, the flowers will be of better color and substance than those produced under glass at the same season. If the plants are properly handled, you will have no trouble in getting quantities of blossoms at the time when they are expected under glass, and if a succession of plantings is made they can be had at any time desired.

While there are several other roses of the same type as Cecile Brunner, there are none up to this time of the beautiful shade that has made this rose so popular with flower buyers. There is nothing that can be found to duplicate it; when the cultural requirements are complied with, it will probably be found perfectly satisfactory. G.

CUTTINGS DO NOT ROOT.

Perhaps you can tell me why my rose cuttings will not root. We have what we consider a good propagating house. It is on the north side of the range and is 12x125 feet, with a height of fourteen feet from walk to ridge. We have two concrete benches, six inches deep. The framework is solid, with 1-inch drainage holes about ten inches apart. We have bricks on top of the concrete. The wood for cuttings is selected. The only cuttings that root are Chateaus, of which we get about fifty per cent. The others look well for two or three weeks. They make an unusually large callus, but about half of them drop their leaves and the rest of them will not root. The sand heat is from 65 to 70 degrees; the top heat, 60 degrees. We do not fire in the daytime, as we get lots of sunshine here, in southern California. We also have heavy shade on the house. We have no trouble in rooting carnations on the north bench of the same house. Our sand is the best river sand. We use well water and it has some alkali in it. A. R.

The usual causes of a large callus and slow rooting in rose cuttings are too much moisture in the sand and too little bottom heat. There should be at least ten degrees of difference between the top and bottom heat. The cuttings should be lightly sprayed overhead, not heavily watered, especially late in the rooting process. When first inserted, the cuttings should be thoroughly wet. It may also be that your wood was too old and hard, as such cuttings often suffer in the manner described.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Plenty of stock and good business form a combination satisfactory to all, and this is the state of affairs here. The shortest item is good indoor roses. Beauties are fair. There is plenty of bulbous stock, including yellow daffodils, Paper White narcissi, tulips in variety, Dutch and Roman hyacinths. Carnations are arriving in quantity; so, also, are violets. A few pans of hyacinths are seen around the stores, but the majority are poor and short in the stem.

Forced plants of Wistaria Sinensis and its white variety provide a cheap method of making an excellent show, for they are singularly pretty and graceful. Azalea amona is well flowered and popular, giving satisfaction to customers owing to its long lasting qualities. Indian azaleas are scarce and only of moderate quality. Easter lilies, both cut and in pots, are selling well. The demand for magnolia, stimulated by the recent shortage in flowers, seems to keep up even now, when flowers are plentiful. Good cattleyas have been on the scarce side, but phalenopsis and a few others are plentiful. Valley is equal to the demand, which has been large.

A heavy rain occurred here February 23 and 24, over seven inches being precipitated. The soil was moderately moist before the rain came; hence not so

THE NOVELTY OF THE SEASON "RAMONA" THE NEW RED CHEROKEE ROSE

THIS sensational and magnificent new climbing rose occurred as a sport from the well-known Pink Cherokee (Rosa Sinica, var. Anemone). It is a stronger and more rampant grower than its parent, and produces during the spring and early summer months flowers in such profusion as to entirely cover the plant; in autumn there is a secondary crop of bloom. The flowers are much larger than either the pink or white forms, with brilliant golden-yellow stamens and broad petals of a glorious carmine-crimson color; an unusual shade, wonderfully striking and effective; the foliage is absolutely mildew-proof, a rich, glossy green, so bright that it appears as though varnished. The life-like illustration in our advertisement in The Review of February 20th, showing blooms and foliage natural size, pictures its beauty stronger than mere words.

The original sport occurred on the nurseries of Messrs. Dieterich & Turner, at Montebello, California. They, realizing its value and great beauty, propagated over one hundred thousand plants, from whom we acquired the entire stock. This is indicative of our faith in its value, and its coming popularity is attested by the fact that we have already booked orders for many thousands of plants, hence we feel that we are safe in stating that "RAMONA" will have the largest first season's sale of any new rose ever offered to the American trade.

"RAMONA"

will be of special value as a garden rose to the entire Pacific Coast, the Southwestern, Gulf and South Atlantic States; it will prove hardy as far north as Philadelphia. For planting on pergolas, pillars, porches, etc., it is a rose of unique and beautiful effect; in addition, it makes an elegant hedge plant if properly trained and pruned, affording a relief from the stereotyped privet hedges, with the added value of a rich display of color.

We are offering plants of "Ramona" at the following prices, cash with order:

In lots less than one hundred: From 2-inch pots, 35 cents each, $3.50 per dozen; from 3-inch pots, 50 cents each, $5.00 per dozen; from 5-inch pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per dozen.
In lots of one hundred to five hundred: From 2-inch pots, $20.00 per one hundred; from 3-inch pots, $30.00; from 5-inch pots, $60.00.
In lots of five hundred to one thousand: From 2-inch pots, $125.00 per thousand; from 3-inch pots, $150.00 per thousand.

Parties desiring to list "Ramona" can be supplied by us with copies of the colored plate shown in the Review of February 20th, at the rate of $3.50 per hundred, $30.00 per thousand; larger quantities at special rates.

The opening of the First National Bank's new building, at Seventh and Spring streets, was the occasion of a great deal of stock being sold. Chicago, is in town. Mrs. Randall accompanies him.

"Great business" is the report from J. W. Wolters' store, especially in decorations.

A recent decoration by the Freeman-

Lewis Co. was rather unusual. It was a complete reproduction of a wedding scene—the church, decorations, pulpit, bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets and all. Pink roses and valley were largely used. The occasion was an announcement party, and the whole thing is to be carried out again in full size for the wedding, April 30.

Dieterich & Turner will be in with a fine crop of roses for Easter. Prima Donna has made a magnificent showing and is coming again, and the Killarneys are elegant.

G. W. Smith, of Howard & Smith, has just returned from a business trip to San Francisco.

One order for 40,000 bunches of daffodils was filled by the Los Angeles Flower Market for the fashion show, beginning March 4. This order was for one store only and is a yearly one for this firm. H. R. Richards.

PASADENA, CAL.

Extremely heavy rainfall is causing general rejoicing among the members of the Pasadena Horticultural Association, as well as farmers, citrus fruit growers and other horticulturists and agriculturists in southern California. The Pasadena association is particularly pleased because of the annual spring flower show scheduled for April 10 to 12, at the Hotel Maryland. Although this is an association of amateurs and private gardeners, the commercial growers and florists always come to the fore with large, creditable exhibits, and the shows attract much attention from the general public.

Announcement is made that the store formerly known as Kempton's Flower Shop, 190 West Colorado street, will be conducted in future as the Rogers Flower Shop. Owing to plans for the building of a large garage where the shop now stands, the latter is to be removed to the next lot west. Work on the change is in progress and the Misses Rogers hope to be permanently settled in the new location within the next few weeks.

Burglars entered the Campbell Seed Store, 148 West Colorado street, February 24, but all they obtained for their trouble was $3.50. This was all that had been left in the cash register and the prowlers apparently cared for nothing but cash. Entrance was obtained through the rear door, which had been nailed shut and proved easy to force. A. C. B.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is holding up remarkably well. A good call for funeral work is what helps out the situation. With the lengthening of the days and the increase of sunshine, flowers are becoming more plentiful. Carnations are almost a deluge, but, with good management, the stock is kept pretty well cleaned up. Roses are rapidly improving; Brides, Maids, Killarneys and Richmonds are the leading varieties. Violets are in oversupply; hence there is a decline in prices. Valley and orchids move well, with the standard of prices maintained.

Spring flowers are abundant. Daffodils prove the best sellers; yet there is a good call for freesias and tulips.

Various Notes.

Karl Gardner is receiving congratulations, being the proud father of an 8-pound girl.

Martin & Forbes have a nice batch of lavender and white lilac in pots.

The Market.

Flowers continue overabundant and business continues at rather a low ebb, although in comparison with that of one year ago it is a trifle ahead, which is somewhat encouraging. Bulbous stock is now at its best. Never have daffodils or the various kinds of narcissi made a bigger showing than in the last two weeks. They are our most popular flowers at present, but, owing to the favorable weather conditions, they are produced in much larger quantities than are needed. Apparently, this is not the case with tulips. A few of our larger growers did not plant tulips as heavily this year as formerly, and they are not in such heavy supply. Still, there are plenty for all requirements.

Roses and carnations are plentiful and cheap. Valley is not in oversupply. Freesias are scarcer. Japanese lilies are bought up well. Violets are not quite as much of a drug as they were, but are in good supply. Sweet peas are cheaper. Adiantums and other greens are easier. From all accounts, there will be plenty of material for Easter.

Various Notes.

The Panama Pacific directors have advertised for bids for large quantities of nursery stock with which to ornament the grounds of the coming exhibition.

The California State Floral Society will give its spring flower show in the Fairmount hotel, March 27, 28 and 29.

The California Retail Florists' Association held its regular meeting in Native Sons' hall on the evening of February 24. There was a large attendance. The by-laws committee presented a full report.

C. C. Morse & Co. have just finished a plant house, 25x200, on their grounds at Hayward, Cal.

A visit to Darbee's shipping station on Hyde street shows the tremendous business being done by this firm in violets. The season is now at its height and thousands of bunches are shipped daily to all points on the coast.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

D. M. ANDREWS, Boulder, Colo., has published an excellent vest-pocket monograph entitled "The Planting and Care of Street Trees in Colorado." It includes a classified descriptive list of recommended varieties.

THE nursery firm of Peyton & Barnes, at Boonville, Mo., has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Barnes retains the old firm name, Boonville Nurseries, and is planning to have even better facilities than formerly for the transaction of business. Mr. Peyton is understood to have taken over three-fourths of the growing nursery stock and a large part of the propagating equipment, and has organized the firm of T. R. Peyton & Sons, whose establishment will bear the name, Peyton Nurseries.

WILL RETURN DUTIES.

In response to an inquiry from the collector of customs at Boston the Secretary of the Treasury has written:

"I have to state that the duties deposited on nursery stock, etc., found to be in violation of the plant-quarantine act of August 20, 1912, and the regulations thereunder in T. D. 33071 of January 8, 1913, and exported or destroyed, may be refunded from 'Excess of Deposits' upon proper evidence of exportation or destruction.

"Such exportation shall be under customs supervision. Evidence of destruction shall be in the form of a certificate of a customs officer or of a representative of the Department of Agriculture. The certificate should specify the kind and amount of stock so destroyed, the number of the permit of the Department of Agriculture, and the name of the importer. A certificate of a state department of agriculture to the fact of destruction may be accepted when verified by a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture."

NEW ENGLAND ASSOCIATION.

The election of a new board of officers and the appointment of a committee to give publicity to the fact that New England, and particularly Massachusetts, is not the hotbed of insect pests and that the six states form a most desirable section of the country for the purchase of nursery stock, formed the chief business at the session of the New England Nurserymen's Association at Worcester, Mass., February 25 and 26.

The officers elected were: President, Harlan P. Kelsey, of Salem; vice-president, John R. Barnes, of Yalesville, Conn.; secretary, Charles Adams, of Springfield; treasurer, V. A. Vanicek, of Newport; executive committee, W. W. Hunt, of Hartford; C. H. Graton, of Providence; A. P. Horne, of Manchester, N. H.

Charles R. Fish, of Worcester, was named chairman of the membership committee. The other members elected are George C. Thurlow, of West Newbury; Daniel A. Clarke, of Fiskville, R. I.; Herbert A. Jackson, of Portland; F. H. Hosford, of Charlotte, Vt.; C. R. Burr, of Manchester, Conn., and A. P. Horne, of Manchester, N. H.

The convention had invitations from Worcester and Springfield for the holding of the next annual convention. It was decided to meet in Hartford the last week in February, 1914.

The committee on publicity, as named, is: W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Ernest L. Coe, New Haven, Conn.; D. A. Clarke, Fiskville, R. I.

There was an excellent attendance and a fine program of papers and discussions on trade topics.

FIGHT PROPOSED NURSERY LAW.

Declaring the Vert bill before the New York legislature to be a measure that would put their business at the mercy of "crooked" farmers, nurserymen of Rochester and vicinity engaged former Judge John D. Lynn as spokesman and went to Albany two carloads strong for the hearing on the bill held February 26.

Representatives of leading nurseries in Rochester, Batavia, Newark, Dansville and Geneva met February 25 in

Bargain In Silver Pink Bedding Stock

This entire lot of splendid plants of Silver Pink snapdragon at a small price. Shipment March 10, when they will be sturdy plants with 2 to 6 branches. They are offered at a bargain because we can afford it. We will have used this bench space three times in one year and can make the low price with still a good margin of profit. The price is only cash, by express. These plants will make strong stock in 3½ and 4-in. pots for early bedding sales, and should sell more readily and make you more money than any bedding plant. We have been short of stock for two seasons and have had so many advance orders and inquiries that we cut our geranium stock in half. The only advertising done was a bed of Silver Pink in our home grounds.

Snapdragon is destined to become as popular and profitable for bedding as it now is under glass. Get in line and pick up some of the easy dollars and a lot of new customers. Use these plants to show blossoms and sow seed for 2½-in. stock. See my smaller display ad. for figures. Price of seed, my own growing, $1.00 per pkt. of over 500 seeds; 3 pkts., $2.50, delivered.

Be prompt with plant orders. This is my last lot for spring sales. Can supply a few larger plants for immediate delivery at $4.00 per 100.

was held to be unconstitutional and unworkable by the legislative committee of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association.

Among other clauses are three providing that every firm selling fruit-bearing trees shall affix to each tree a variety tag, that every sale shall be made under a written contract and that a penalty of $5 for each tree not up to contract specifications may be recovered in civil action by the purchaser. The last provision is regarded as ridiculous by nurserymen. "The man outside the state sells his product outright, receives his money and the transaction is closed. Can you imagine what chance a purchaser would have five or ten years later, when his trees get to fruit-bearing age, to collect any money if the trees didn't make good?" said Irving Rouse. The farmer who buys twenty-five trees of different companies would have no way of telling at a distant date which firm sold him the worthless trees, it was argued. Only the unscrupulous farmer, the nurserymen think, would benefit by that section of the bill. The nurserymen question the validity of a law providing that error is punishable by fine. The Vert bill, in setting aside $5 remuneration, does not recognize unintentional mistake.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The general run of trade is decidedly slow, and were it not for a few of the extras that happen occasionally, such as weddings, funeral work, etc., we would not be able to speak favorably of business. Perhaps, too, the lull in trade is more noticeable on account of the plentiful supply of stock in all lines. The bright, warm weather has not only brought an abundant supply of cut flowers and plants, but in some varieties has caused a glut. Especially is this true of the longiflorum lilies, while others complain of carnations and roses. In fact, the mild winter has been a problem for the florists to solve, for it is thought by some that a good portion of the bulbous stock will come in a little too early for Easter.

Various Notes.

W. G. Matthews' window at his Main street store last week was a beautiful array of spring flowers in baskets.

Mrs. B. Haschke tells us she is picking a fine crop of sweet peas.

One thing that is attracting a great deal of attention and admiration at W. W. Horlacher's greenhouses is a beautiful crop of forget-me-nots, uncommon in this city.

George Bartholomew, of the Edgemont Floral Co., gives an encouraging report on business.

George Lampert, of Xenia, was in town March 1, with some fine carnations and sweet peas.

One of the big things that the Heiss Co. did last week was to decorate for a wedding in Harshman.

Visitors: Harry Gabel, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; Wm. E. Astling, of the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.; G. Reising, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago; D. Rusconi, Jr., of Cincinnati.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson has been unusually busy with funeral work.

Miss Bessie Bartholomew has been quite ill with tonsilitis.

M. & L. Johnson report trade to be good.

The Miami Floral Co. is having some heavy cuts on Easter lilies. R. A. L.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business has been fairly good, but the demand for cut flowers has fallen off to some extent during the last week. Bulbous stock is plentiful, some of the local florists offering daffodils and tulips as a special March 1 at 35 cents per dozen. Funeral orders are quite heavy and all the florists seem to be getting their share. Carnations and sweet peas of choice quality are more plentiful, but the supply of choice roses is reported by some to be short.

Various Notes.

A. Ostermann reports business as being good, with orders for funeral work heavy. His store is attractive.

The S. H. Moore Co. reports business quite satisfactory. Funeral orders were exceptionally heavy last week. Hyacinths and tulips in pots and pans are selling well. The window was attractive with bulbous stock, specimen azaleas and ferns.

Champion & Co. had an attractive window display of azaleas, choice cyclamens, and a few genistas and roses, which reminded one of the near approach of Easter. Recently they have been kept quite busy with decoration orders.

Charles Munro, the Chapel street florist, reports funeral orders quite heavy and other business fairly good. He had a special sale of tulips and daffodils March 1, which cleaned up a lot of stock. Erica melanthera was pretty in his window. At his greenhouses on Townsend avenue, everything is in fine shape. Rhododendrons and lilacs are specially good, finely set and just right for Easter. His house of lilies is coming along nicely, also two long benches of spiræas. Hyacinths and tulips in pots and pans are grown in large quantities for the store trade, also thousands of these and daffodils have just been brought in for the Easter business. Just at present there is a house of Bicolor Victoria which are readily picked up in the store. The most attractive feature at this plant just now is the house of azaleas, which presents a truly magnificent sight. Mr. Munro says he finds no trouble in disposing of these in the store. Roses, principally White Killarney and Killarney, are grown in quantity here; they are a little off crop at present, but have every indication of being in heavy crop around Easter.

Wm. H. Long has been quite busy with funeral work; otherwise he reports trade rather dull. He had an attractive window of bulbous stock, both cut and in pots and pans, also choice roses, carnations and sweet peas. M. B. F.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

Tremulus Bros., with headquarters in Chicago and branch stores at Rockford and Aurora, Ill., have opened a store at 305 Upper Second street. They had their opening March 1 and the business done was far ahead of the greatest expectations. Mr. Tremulus said it was the greatest opening he ever had, the sales amounting to over $200. They gave away, as souvenirs, about 25,000 violets. The store is ideally located near Main street and was crowded from morning till night. They sold 7,000 carnations at 25 cents per dozen, fine, long-stemmed roses at $1 per dozen, jonquils and daffodils at 35 cents per dozen, violets at 15 cents and 25 cents per bunch, sweet peas at 15 cents and 25 cents per bunch. They had a few plants, but not so many as they expect to have later, when everything is arranged. A large ice-box has been built in the store. A large front window gives a good opportunity for making displays. E. L. F.

Fairfield, Conn.—C. P. Loder, of Clinton, Conn., has purchased the greenhouse on the land of Henry Newhall, on Lawrence avenue, and has removed the house to a vacant lot on Main street.

Scranton, Pa.—The business of the Davis Floral Co., including the store at 526 Spruce street and the greenhouses at Fillmore avenue and Washburn street, has been purchased by C. W. Baldwin, of Wyoming, Pa., who will continue the business in his own name. It is his intention to build a 40-foot greenhouse at the rear of the store and to make other improvements.

Dear Sir:-

Our specialty is Mile High Plants in paper pots, so that express charges will be small.

Our Roses are a grand lot. Tausendschon is about the finest pot rose you ever saw. You can handle some at a profit at once. They are early and will probably all be gone before Easter.

We have a very large stock of Ramblers, including Crimson, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha, White Dorothy and Newport Fairy, from $1.50 to $3.50 each. Baby Ramblers and Jessie from 4-inch pots with one good flower truss at 20 cents and larger plants at 50 cents to 75 cents.

Hydrangeas, good foliage and large trusses, $1.50. Spiraeas, either white or pink, 50 cents. Hyacinths, 4-inch, 15 cents. Tulips and Daffodils, 6-inch pans, 30 cents.

Azaleas all sold.

We hate to say so, but our lilies are poor.

We had to send back a lot of money at Christmas, to people who ordered too late, and you can bet we hated to do it, so make out your order and mail it at once.

Yours truly,

THE PARK FLORAL COMPANY,

TYLER, TEX.

Business has been splendid for the last year and is still keeping up well, but death has visited each of the three florists within a little more than a year. Mrs. Hill was called away in January, 1912. November 11, 1912, Frank Hewitt passed into his rest, after a painful illness. January 11, 1913, James Whitten died. Mr. Whitten's sister sold the business and retired. Mrs. Hewitt, however, will continue her business, and expects to build more greenhouses in the coming summer.

Everything is looking promising. We have had a mild winter so far, but with much cloudy weather. I think the lowest outside temperature was 16 degrees above zero, and that only once this winter.

I had written thus far, February 26, when I saw a storm coming and soon it looked as if the greenhouses and everything in them would be a total wreck. It was the worst hail storm we have had in years. About 200 panes of glass were broken in Mrs. Frank Hewitt's greenhouses and quite a number of plants were damaged. It is impossible to say at present what the damage to the fruit crop will be, as the storm seemed to skip some places. H.

SCRANTON, PA.

J. B. McClintock is finishing his latest range in concrete. These are on the ridge and furrow plan and considered the best suited for bedding stock, which is raised in great numbers. Judging by the size of the excellent Easter stock, big business is expected.

Our New Lobella

MRS. AUG. SWANSON

Named in honor of the wife of Mr. Aug. Swanson, 28 years a florist in St. Paul, now retired. This lobella is a sport from Bedding Queen, which we found among our seedlings in 1911. It is a wonderful improvement on that best of lobellas. The flower is exceedingly large and free blooming. It has $\frac{3}{4}$ more white in it than any other lobella we have ever seen. It is a plant we assure you will sell better than any plant you have on your place. We exhibited plants and four vases of flowers at the St. Paul, Minn., Show, Nov., 1912, and before we could remove them next morning after the show, every bit of the cut stuff and four plants were stolen. So, you see, they like it all right. The upper picture is Bedding Queen and the lower Mrs. Aug. Swanson. The cut is a photo of two 3-in. pots, laid on the side. The large white eye does not show on the picture, as deep blue and white never show up properly in a photo. Large plants with plenty of cuttings on them, 75c per doz., \$6.00 per 100, \$50.00 per 1000. Delivered free of charge.

This variegated carnation, sent out by Mr. Peter Fisher last season, is the finest variegated variety, and one of the very best carnations of any color, ever sent out.

It has immediately attained a commanding position among the very choicest sorts, and will add to Mr. Fisher's already enviable list of introductions. It is indispensable.

It is a very early and free bloomer, matures quickly, making very perfect flowers of the largest size on long stems; does not split the calyx.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The March weather is quite "Marchy," with the wind blowing and the temperature around zero. Business is about the same as last week, with a steady demand for pot plants and a good many funerals, which keep the stock moving. The next two Sundays will find most of the florists busy with spring openings, and that means work every Sunday until after Easter. We all hope to see the day when florists can rest on Sunday the same as other people. There is no more reason for florists working on Sunday than there is for any other business men, and when the florists can get together and eliminate Sunday work it will be better for all concerned.

Various Notes.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. has a fine lot of fancy plants for Easter, and Mr. Schreiber deserves a lot of praise for his efficient work. He delivers the goods in fine condition and on time.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co.'s stock is in fine condition, and Mr. Hoffmann, Wiegand's grower, deserves his share of credit. He knows his business.

The florists having motor car delivery need not dread long transfers of flowers now, for a new rule in effect at Crown Hill makes it possible for lot owners to obtain a permit to drive cars within the gates.

Robert Fohl, formerly with the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., has taken a position with A. E. Nelson.

It is reported that T. B. Pritchard, formerly of Wiegand's, and for the last few years manager of the Hollywood Gardens, in Seattle, Wash., has severed his connection with the flower business and hereafter will be associated with the automobile business, with a Seattle firm. We wish him success.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS

BUFFALO.

March opened like a lion. If previous experiences are any indication, we stand some show of having a pleasant Easter. The wind reached a velocity of sixty-five miles an hour, with blinding snow and cold. February on the whole was not so cold, but the sun disappeared in the latter part of the month and the lilies did not move so fast as we would have liked them to. The lily situation will be about the same as usual; perhaps they will be a little scarcer. Azaleas will be short, but the other stock seems to be in about the usual supply. We all look for a good Easter and, while business leading up to it has not been wonderful, we can not complain for the Lenten season. Increased publicity has greatly increased the sales of the last few months and for Easter we look for an increased amount of advertising, which can not do otherwise than make the season bigger and better than ever.

The bowling committee invited the Rochester club to a night of bowling and pleasure, which was returning the compliment of a few weeks ago, and the event was most pleasant. The Buffalo boys turned out in fine shape and the able chairman, Joe Streit, was a royal host. He was busy every minute satisfying the wants of someone and we feel sure that no one can say that he did not have a good time. The Rochester boys were somewhat handicapped by the absence of some of the star bowlers and as a result did not make the showing usually credited to their scores. Charles Sandiford was high for the Buffalo team and Mr. Boland for the Rochester side.

The Corfu establishment of the Wm. Scott Co. has been purchased by N. A. Brown as an investment and leased to his son-in-law, David Scott, who has been the manager of the plant, which consists of 45,000 feet of glass. Mr. Scott will hereafter conduct the growing business at Corfu under his own name, the greater part of the output being sold, as heretofore, in the retail store of the Wm. Scott Co.

Newton Falls, O.—C. E. Tinker is greatly pleased with the last few months' business. The volume of trade was the heaviest since he started in business here three years ago.

Barrington, Ill.—F. W. Stott procured some blank slides and writes his own advertisements on them, to be thrown on the screen at the local moving picture shows. He has found it a paying advertisement.

New American Beauty GERANIUM

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 our new American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on it for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty Color. The individual blooms measure 2¾ inches across. It is semi-double, medium dwarf, of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade: 2½-in. pots, 50c each, $5.00 per doz.; 3-in. pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per doz., cash. Write for circulars in natural colors and prices on large lots.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in the Board of Trade rooms February 21. President Duthie occupied the chair. The secretary read the report of the dinner committee, which proved to be most satisfactory. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the committee, and also to Charles Rothman for his splendid service.

On behalf of an anonymous donor, the secretary was instructed to offer a silver cup for the best collection of peonies at the spring show; also $10 in gold as a second prize and $10 to be devoted to school children's exhibits.

Seven new members were enrolled and two were elected.

W. D. Robertson, James Goldsmith and John Sorosick acted as judges and their decisions were as follows: Primula malacoides from Frank Petroccia, honorable mention; cucumbers from Joseph Marmarole, honorable mention; three pots hyacinths, Joseph Robinson, cultural certificate; four pots Primula obconica, Frank Kyle, cultural certificate; vase of lilies, A. Lahodney, cultural certificate; 100 violets, A. Walker, cultural certificate; three orchids, J. Ingram, honorable mention.

Joseph Robinson announced his intention to give a gold medal to the member gaining most first prizes at the monthly competitions for 1913.

The exhibitors gave interesting talks on their methods of growing the stock exhibited. Floyd Blowers, of Westlook Farm, read an interesting essay on outdoor grapes, and the society extended to him a hearty vote of thanks.

The secretary, in behalf of the N. A. G., distributed catalogues for the International Show. The secretary was also instructed to get all particulars about the national bowling tournament and report at next meeting.

The exhibits at the next meeting will consist of one pot of Easter lilies, three spikes of antirrhinum and three heads of lettuce. J. T. I.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was brisk last week. Stock was cleaned up well, with the exception, perhaps, of lilies, valley and some of the bulbous stock. The market is well supplied with pans of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths, and they move readily. There appears to be a scarcity of large azalea plants; those growers who have some are apparently holding them over for Easter.

Various Notes.

Wm. A. McAlpine, of Exeter, N. H., owner of the New England Rose Conservatories, spent a few days here last week. He appears to like this part of the country well.

Mr. Scharff, of Scharff Bros., Van Wert, O., was a recent visitor at Thomas Browne's establishment. He came here to see the new carnation, Philadelphia, growing, and was favorably impressed.

Mrs. Sylvester, mother of Albert Sylvester, died recently, and was buried February 28.

Schroeter's Studebaker 20 was considerably damaged in a collision with another auto last week. Fortunately, the driver, the sole occupant of Schroeter's car, was not injured.

The committee, with Philip Breitmeyer as chairman, that has taken up the fight on behalf of all the users of steam for heating greenhouses in Michigan, against the two bills recently presented at Lansing, is sadly in need of funds to pay attorneys' fees and other incidental expenses, and will greatly appreciate a check for $5 from any interested grower who has not already contributed. Make the check payable to Hugo Schroeter, 56 Broadway, Detroit, who has this matter in charge.

Ed. Hampton, representing J. G. Neidinger, was in town last week.

Mr. Maynard, manager of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, is well pleased with trade.

S. S. Skidelsky was in the city and met with Fred Breitmeyer and Robert Rahaley at the office of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange to formulate more extensive plans for the handling of the sales of Carnation Philadelphia, over 60,000 cuttings of which have already been ordered. After viewing the plants at Thomas Browne's houses, Mr. Skidelsky is so highly elated over the carnation, and has so much confidence in it, that all orders are booked with the privilege of canceling them should the buyer be disappointed after having seen the plants growing. We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The close of last week and the opening of this one were excellent. The receipts were larger and sales sufficient to take up almost everything offered. March 3 there was a good increase in prices on some lines and a tightening in others. It would take more than a fortune teller to predict as to whether or not this state of affairs will continue. From present indications it seems that the market will be tight for some time to come. However, it may be only temporary, and extremely temporary at that, as has happened many times since the first day of the year.

The carnation cut is shortening considerably, and this, combined with the big demand, is making the carnation market a good one. Roses, too, are selling well. The good sweet peas find a ready sale, while short stock must necessarily be sold at a low figure. Bulbous stock, both in small blooms and in Easter lilies and callas, continues in a more than sufficient supply. The first, however, are generally of a much better quality than a fortnight ago. Single violets still enjoy a much better call than doubles. The call for valley is only ordinary. The green goods supply is adequate.

Various Notes.

F. Ben George has opened a store at 3706 Eastern avenue, in the east end. He has absolutely no direct competition in that part of town.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in fine lilies and tulips from J. A. Peterson & Sons.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been getting in fine Killarney and Richmond from Bloomhurst, at Lockland.

Walter Butler, formerly of Chillicothe, is opening a store on Madison avenue, near Woodburn, in Walnut Hills. This makes the fifth retail store in that immediate neighborhood.

Last week C. E. Critchell and Fred Gear were duly initiated into the Scottish Rite. Mr. Critchell also went through the Shrine.

E. G. Gillett has been finding little trouble in selling the excellent single violets from Geo. Hopp, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

DECORATIVE and FLOWERING PLANTS

The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

PREPARE FOR EASTER!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past, and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need, found in one place to grow.
The Lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter Day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.

The Araucarias, matchless are the Ferns all green,
With bulbs and plumed Spiraeas, the best you've ever seen;
And Aschmann gives a challenge: "Let every florist hear!
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear;
If you wish to gather dollars like Violets in the Spring,
Then send your largest order—his plants the cash will bring."

A Photo of a House of Lillium Multiflorum, with Godfrey Aschmann, the Grower.

For the last 35 years we have been in the Lily culture, and we have given the growing of Lilies for Easter our special attention; we can safely say that we have reached that point where we can declare ourselves Lily Specialists. We have three houses of the best Multiflorum with buds hanging now, just right for Easter, of medium height, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 buds to a plant, all nicely staked up, 12c per bud for those having 3, 4 and 5 buds to a plant; 10c per bud for those having 6, 7 and 8 buds to the plant.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas.

CARNATION CUTTINGS.

I can supply the very best carnation stock on the market. What you need is not the cheapest stuff you can buy but stock that will produce the most and best flowers next fall and winter. I use stock plants selected each year as the most vigorous ones in the field, I grow them cool and flower very little; all the vigor of the strongest plants goes into the stock you buy from me. This is my specialty. All stock is grown and shipped under my own eye, I stand back of every shipment that leaves my greenhouses, guaranteeing satisfaction absolutely.

Send for my list of varieties and prices, also my special proposition to grow your stock on until your field is ready.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as the plebian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales 1913. Send for both of the booklets.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

FIRING WITH HARD COAL.

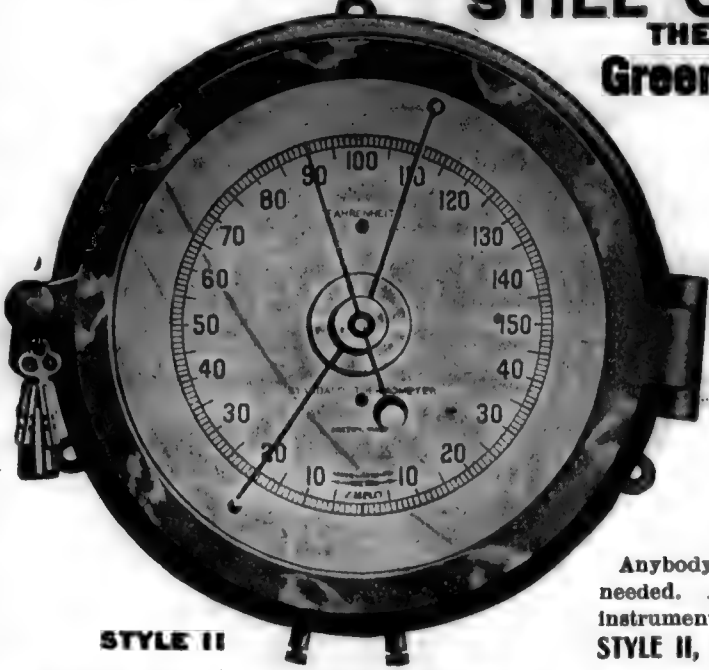

Quite a number of florists in the western part of Pennsylvania, Ohio and, in fact, in all the states where soft coal is used and yet near enough to obtain hard coal, are making the change. Most of them that make this change are having difficulties because they do not understand firing with hard coal, for it is vastly different from firing with soft coal.

Probably the same grate could be used if it was fine enough mesh to suit the size of coal to be used, as the mesh of the grate depends entirely on the size of coal. If No. 1 buckwheat is used a small mesh is necessary, while if egg or grate coal is used a large mesh would give better results. Some florists use the patent grates; something on the principle of the Dockash, of which a number are in the market.

The common, double, straight-barred grate is probably more generally used than any other and is all right if you know how to handle it, but to fire with smaller size coal it is necessary to know how to handle the fire; here lies the whole secret. Below I will give the directions how to fire with No. 1 buckwheat, which would apply to all the smaller sizes, pea and probably chestnut, and I do not know why it should not be applied to the larger sizes. However, we have never used the larger sizes in the vicinity of Scranton for greenhouse heating, as we have so much of the smaller sizes here, and heretofore they have been so cheap compared with the large sizes, that we have always used the small. If anyone will follow out the following principles in firing he will make no mistake, if the gratebar surface is large enough to give the results.

To a thirty horse-power boiler the grate surface should be $3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ feet, a bricked-in return tubular boiler. I will start my instructions with a new fire, which you would, of course, start with wood, putting on coal a little at a time until you get a bright fire from the coal. It ought not to be more than two inches thick at this time. When it burns up brightly do not put on any more coal until you see little white spots here and there, at which time do not put on more than four or five scoops until the fire gets to be from eight to ten inches thick, according to the weather conditions.

Never touch this fire with the poker until you clean down after it gets this thickness. If you do touch it, thinking you are going to improve it, you will spoil your fire, as the fine ashes will fall into the crevices kept open by your draft; consequently your draft will be choked and your fire of no account.

The way to break this fire down is as follows: Before you are ready to clean up put on seven shovels of coal instead spots come in; you want to catch it with bright, live coals before the carbon is burned out. Take an iron hoe and pull these live coals from the back to the front of the fire, not out, but just at the front. Be careful not to pull up the ashes; if you do you will get them mixed with the live coals, which you want to avoid. Then reach over the back of this live coal into the dead ashes and give them a quick jerk out of the fire-box door. After the back of the grate is cleaned off shove these live coals back on the bare grate surface; then proceed to pull the front ashes out. Then scatter the live coals equally over the grate surface; they would probably be one and one-half to two inches thick over the grate; then sprinkle on a light coating of coal, shut your door and let the drafts go full blast. You will soon have heat in abundance.

This breaking down and starting up a new fire would have to be done in cold weather in the morning and then repeat again towards evening. In bright weather catch the benefit of the afternoon sun, but in milder weather it would not usually have to be done more than once a day. By taking advantage of the afternoon sun the houses will not cool off so much while the fire is down a little.

With soft coal, as I understand it, a blaze is obtained in firing. It being full of oils, it burns up something like wood. With hard coal this must never be expected, for the best results will be obtained when you get an effect as of an incandescent light appearance, which gives off an intense heat, and by the light firing the carbon is constantly ignited and burns until the white spots appear and the recoating is necessary. These results can never be obtained by heavy firing with hard coal; by heavy firing I mean a large quantity of coal on the grate at one time.

After a fireman has studied these conditions he will readily fall into the knack of firing in this way, which he will find easy.

The Market.

Little change is to be noted in the condition of business during the last week, except that the holding back for Easter becomes more apparent, although there is a plentiful supply to meet all demands. Prices are at the lowest ebb, but at the same time superior stock commands good figures. Funeral work is active and numerous small home functions call for enough cut flowers to keep the stock well cleaned up. The indications for Easter are quite promising, both as to supply and quality.

Various Notes.

Cast Iron Boilers Crack

I want to thank you for your promptness in shipping the boiler I ordered of you on January 13th. I had a breakdown; one of a battery of two cast iron boilers cracked so it was impossible to use same, so I got you on the telephone at 8:30 a. m., January 13th, and ordered one of your hot water boilers. Same was put in my boiler room in the afternoon of January 15th, after which we built foundation and connected up. Since that time the boiler has taken care of same glass as the two cast iron boilers had done, easier and better in every way.

The Market.

Market conditions, for the last week, were much the same as for the one preceding. There was plenty of stock in all lines and most of it kept moving in pretty good shape. One large department store gave away carnations as souvenirs all last week, which helped to keep some of the less good stock from accumulating at the wholesale houses.

Various Notes.

Word has just been received that William Schmitz, who is located at Thirty-second street and Burnham avenue, forsook bachelorhood about two weeks ago.

The A. F. Kellner Co. is getting material ready preparatory to moving its place of business on Auer avenue about three blocks north from the present location. This concern has all its decorative stock booked for next week, at which time all the department stores will have their usual openings.

Locker & Son are cutting a good grade of carnations, sweet peas, violets and bulbous stock these days.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports prospects good on the Easter lily proposition. The daily cut of carnations and roses is good.

Word received from Wm. Edlefsen, at Lorane, Ore., one of the pioneer florists of this city, is that he is now in perfect health. The air there has entirely cured his throat and nasal trouble, which caused him considerable inconvenience for some years while residing in Milwaukee.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is again cutting a fine grade of Killarney roses. The Easter lilies at the Brown Deer plant are reported to be in good shape. H. V. Hunkel spent March 2 in Chicago and vicinity.

Gust Rusch & Co. report no oversupply in the medium grade of roses as yet; just about enough to go around.

The Question of Wide Houses

THERE are certain proven reasons why wide houses of reasonable widths—say 40 to 60 feet—are more economical to build, easier to heat, give better ventilation and grow better plants. But wide houses must be built right, not only strong, but right.

We know how to build right. Have been doing it for over a quarter of a century. We want to talk with you about that house you intend building. We will do it either by letter or by coming to see you. Write us and get things started.

THE WAY WE FRAME OUR GABLES

A GREENHOUSE construction company—not L. B. Co.—last fall built for a Providence grower what he called “a sample house.” It was supposed to be something very fine. I saw the owner last week. He was far from enthusiastic. He said some very forcible things about that sample house—the kind of things we would feel very badly to have said about one of ours. Among other things that “irritated” him was the falling out of one gable and smashing all the glass. He now has it propped up and braced so it looks like a scaffolding for a concrete wall. Our gables are thoroughly iron-framed to start with; then they are securely bolted to the purlins in such a way that the gable strain is distributed over the entire framework of the house. There is a terrific suction pull on big gables that must be taken care of beyond all doubt.

The secure way we frame gables is “a sample” of the way we frame our entire house. How about trying one of our “samples” this year? Drop us a postal.

MANKE BROS.

FANCY CARNATIONS AND MUMS

NORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS. February 28th, 1913

John C. Moninger Co.,
Blackhawk St., Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:-

For several years we have purchased woodwork and other materials from your company. The materials have always been entirely satisfactory, so that in all of our business dealings it has never been necessary to make a claim against you of any kind. Our business relations have been so pleasant that we have always felt as though it was a sort of friendship that existed between us.

It is with pleasure that we now give you an order for two new houses 30 x 125 feet, of your Pipe Frame Construction, in accordance with estimates which you have just submitted. Your prices on material compare very favorably with other bids received, but we would be more than willing to pay a premium for your houses.

Our experience with Moninger houses and our investigation of other houses in various parts of the country leads us to believe that it is useless to try and get a better house or better value for the money from any other manufacturer.

Yours very truly,

Manke Bros.

The houses of E. J. Ahern, of Wellesley, one of the growers for the Boston Cooperative Market, were frozen up February 13. His night foreman had a fall and became unconscious. It being a sharp night, the temperature in the houses fell to 17 degree. Mr. Ahern's specialties were primulas and marguerites and he has the sympathy of a large body of growers in his misfortune.

Tuesday night, February 11, about 1:30 a. m., Ben L. Elliott, proprietor of the John Bader Co., was awakened by the ringing of the alarm connected with the thermostat in the greenhouses. On getting out, he found the outdoor temperature down to 16 degrees above zero and the night fireman, who had been a reliable man for years, sound asleep beside the boilers. Mr. Elliott says this is a case where an investment of $15 with the Standard Thermometer Co. for a thermostat, saved him at least $30,000, as undoubtedly his entire place would have been frozen before morning.

Some Simple Expedients for Easing the Pressure While Increasing the Total of Easter Sales

EVERY business has its drawbacks, and in the retail flower trade the difficulties are at least as numerous as in other lines; but of all the handicaps, none is greater than the necessity of doing a whole holiday's selling within a few hours. It is characteristic that people put off ordering flowers almost to the last moment. It is true of funeral flowers, of gift flowers, and of almost all kinds of flowers except, possibly, wedding flowers and large decorations. Consequently, any little increase in business means a rush, and any little falling off in trade means almost complete stagnation. With the florist it is either a feast or a famine.

The trade in general is so accustomed to the short-notice, rush-order style of business that with the majority no effort is made to get orders early—the retailers act as though they were satisfied to take the business when they can get it. But they don't talk that way. One hears a lot of kicks about there being nothing to do up to the last day, and then a rush that cannot be handled. It reminds one of the story used by a florist who was arguing the negative on the proposition that "satisfied" and "contented" are synonymous—of the same meaning. He illustrated the difference in meaning by stating that he is satisfied that when he stays at the store all the night before a holiday his wife goes to the theater with an old-time sweetheart—he is satisfied, but not contented.

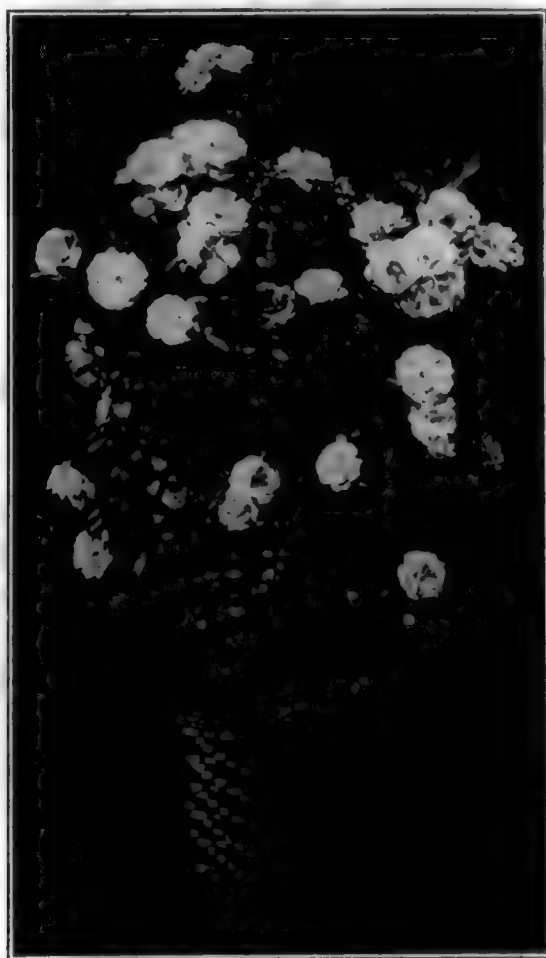

Those florists who are not contented with the natural flow of Easter business are finding several simple expedients for easing the pressure while increasing the volume of Easter sales.

A Limit on One Day's Sales.

There is a limit to what any man, or set of men, can do in one business day—even though that day be stretched from one morning to the next. When the holiday trade is left to its natural course, the last-day customers are so numerous that they cannot be waited on; every retailer has had the experience of seeing good people walk out the door because they would not wait for the clerks. And every retailer knows that he gets the largest sales out of the buyers who are ordering at their leisure. In a crowd a buyer orders what must be had, and lets it go at that. If given time to look around, and the attentions of a skillful salesman, a much larger order is obtained. It is extremely bad business to rush one's customers.

If you were able to wait on only a certain number of customers the Saturday before Easter last year, and some went out without getting attention, you cannot possibly, with the same facilities, increase your sales March 22 this year; the only way you can do it is to make some of the sales earlier. Friday you had time. Probably Thursday there was little doing, and Wednesday the clerks were idle. The plain evidence is that the way to increase the business is to sell earlier. Any number of retailers will, when they stop to think of it, admit that the reason the Easter business does not grow faster is because it is all crowded into one day.

How, then, are earlier orders to be had?

Those who have thought on the subject have found numerous ways. The popularity of pot plants makes it easy to decorate the store earlier than was possible in the old days, when cut flowers were principally used. The retailer can just as well have his show presentable the Monday before Easter as to wait until Thursday. Of course it will not be desirable to get in all the Easter stock a full week ahead, but it is worth the loss of a little material to get the business started early.

Ways of Waking the Buyers.

With the plant display in place and the store dressed up in its holiday attire, customers will order freely if you only can get them into the place. The plant baskets are there as samples; the customer is told that he will not receive the identical basket he is looking at, which is a sample, because it will be past its best by Sunday, but that he will receive one exactly like it. It makes the plant selling easy. And cut flowers are cut flowers any day. One can as satisfactorily take an order for cut flowers on Monday as on Saturday—as satisfactorily, that is, to the customer.

So it gets down to being a problem of getting the customers into the store.

Advertising Makes Things Possible.

Since retail florists have taken hold of advertising they have found many things possible which had not been considered possible before. The non-advertising retailer cannot reach the buyers; he must await their pleasure. But the retailer who has learned that there is profit in telling the story to the public can put his facts before the buyers and shape the trade more or less as he will.

As a general proposition, the Easter advertising is too late. It serves only to add to the rush at the last moment. Those who have tried it have found that the advertising is no doubt more effective in the three days before Easter than it is three days earlier; but what is the use of bringing in customers when you cannot satisfactorily wait on them? Consequently, the retailers who use newspaper space are now using it earlier. They are using it to get the early orders, knowing that the natural run of business will keep them busy the last few days.

One of the most successful retailers

Getting the Regulars Early.

"In the few days before a holiday, such as Easter, there is a large increase in the transient trade. It therefore is urged that my regular customers place their Easter orders during the first part of the week. During these days the Easter display will be at its best, and regular customers can be waited on without being inconvenienced in their selections by the presence of those who buy flowers only at holidays. Easter display ready Monday, March 17, 1913."

This retailer also will do his newspaper advertising March 16 to 18. He knows that by Thursday business will begin naturally and that the rush will increase from hour to hour until during the shopping period of Saturday he will not be able to wait on all the people who enter the store.

Conditions Not Unchangeable.

This florist is not one of those who believe conditions are unchangeable. Too many act as though they thought that what always has been must always be; they seem to fear to undertake any change from the routine of other years.

The day has passed when a florist may prosper by simply sitting still and waiting for business to come his way. The great majority still make a living with no greater effort, but the progress and prosperity goes to those who have adopted modern methods of merchandising. There are dozens of retailers through the country who are forging to the front in their communities through the use of the same methods that are employed in other lines of business, modified to meet the needs of the flower trade. They do not wait for customers; they go out, one way or another, after the customers. The first response may not be heavy or prompt, but it is an old saying that "Every little helps," or that "Every little added to what you've got makes just that much more." Also that "Keeping everlastingly at it brings success."

It is possible to educate the flower buyers to buy early and to buy often, just as it is possible to educate breakfast-food users to call for a certain brand when they visit the grocer.

An Opportunity to Coöperate.

The coöperative advertising that is being done by the florists in a number of cities offers one of the best means of correcting the tendency to crowd all the business into one day. One of the advantages of the coöperative advertising is that it not only permits the use of larger space than the individual ordinarily feels he can afford, but it seems to carry a greater weight from the fact that it is the concerted action of the leading members of the trade in a given vicinity. This extra weight should by all means be turned toward starting the business early, as well as toward arousing additional interest in flowers. As a matter of fact, under the conditions of the past it is more important to get the buyers started early than it is to increase the volume of business offered at the last moment.

The Retailer's Part.

The retailer himself should not leave everything until the last moment. Too many do it. They give the newspaper sixteen minutes in which to get up an advertisement before going to press, when nothing would be lost and much might be gained by allowing the printers several days for their part of the work. The retailer gets quotations from several wholesalers on his Easter needs in cut flowers, but he waits until the day of shipment and then orders by wire. The Easter plants are ordered at the last moment, when the shipper has more than he can do, are a day late in arriving and the whole operation is hurried and haphazard. A holiday rush reminds one of a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match, except that the participants are not in good training. There isn't the slightest need for it. In each and every branch of the business it is possible to act in time, so that one's own work need not be hurried and so that ample time for best service can be given to everyone from whom the florists get supplies.

It is common to hear, "Well, I am glad it's over," after a flower holiday, and the larger the business the speaker does, the more certain he is to make some such remark. It's all because no effort is made to push the business instead of letting the business push you.

EASTER PLANT ARRANGEMENTS.

Harmony in Materials.

The success of plants for Easter uses has depended most of all upon the skill with which the florist selected the stock to be combined. It makes all the difference in the world whether an appropriate receptacle is chosen. There must be harmony between the plants and the basket, or the plant business will not come up to expectations. On the other hand, where the retailer possesses the real artistic instinct, the sale of the Easter plant combinations only is limited by the florists' opportunities of bringing them to the attention of the buying public.

In this issue there are a number of illustrations showing Easter plant arrangements. Some are better than others, but each one shows some point which can be profitably applied to the production of similar, yet dissimilar, arrangements.

The illustration on page 27 shows two low baskets of hyacinths. The one at the left was a pink variety and with it only ericas and adiantum were used. In the basket at the right the hyacinths were blue and the ribbon was carefully chosen for a harmonious shade of lavender. Of course both baskets were fitted with the metal pans, now to be had with practically everything of this character. Size, shape and coloring all were carefully considered.

A Popular Rose.

The illustration on page 28 shows two plants of Hiawatha rose, one trained in balloon shape and the other grown as a standard. These require no embellishment other than a pot cover, which must be chosen to produce an air of solidity, for the plants are large and heavy; a light, fussy pot cover would give a top-heavy appearance.

On page 29 there is a boat-shaped willow basket that would be nowhere near Low Baskets of Tulips Have Become a Popular Form of Easter Plant Arrangement.

Hyacinths and Adiantum in Metal Lined Willow Baskets are Excellent Sellers.

so good were the handle either higher or lower. The proportions are excellent. The only improvement would be the addition of ribbon. This basket was filled with Hexe azalea, a Clothilde Soupert rose, a Dorothy Perkins, some Superbissima fern and a Japanese maple.

The big basket on page 29 was an arrangement photographed last Easter in one of the leading Chicago flower stores. It sold for $25, and of course is too large for use in the average retail place, for more plant arrangements will be sold at from $3 to $7.50 than at any higher prices. However, these big show pieces are good advertising, even if they are too expensive to be sold. This basket was filled with hydrangeas and with a white rambler rose trained over the handle. In the front the variegated foliage is a funkia and peeping from the back is a lily. The ribbon was light blue, chosen because of the color of the hydrangea flowers.

On page 25 is a Tausendschon rose. This has come to the front as possibly the one best-selling variety. The English of the name would be Thousand Beauties and there literally are that many fascinations about a well-grown, well-flowered specimen. The one shown in the illustration, though it is not especially apparent in the cut, had too large a pot cover. It was one of the adjustable variety, too hurriedly chosen. A smaller size would have greatly improved the appearance of the plant.

Tulips in Low Baskets.

Low, wide baskets of tulips are shown in the illustration on page 26. These are ready sellers. Of course the baskets were tin lined, for it is the tin containers that have made such plant arrangements possible; no one would want them if they were leaky or even scattery. The basket at the left was filled with red tulips. Note the way the bareness of the base is relieved by the use of adiantum. The basket at the right was filled with Murillo, possibly the commonest Easter tulip. The pussy-willows appeal to some and add variety. The ribbon might be either white or pink. Selaginella was used to fill the void between the edge of the basket and the tulips.

What would Easter be without the lily? High-toned stores that cater to the most select trade do not nowadays use so large a proportion of lilies as they did a few years ago; they have cut down on the lilies while adding variety to their stock by using other plants. But no flower store could be without lilies at Easter. There are more kinds of lilies than there are flower stores; almost as many as there are flower buyers. Doubtless there will be department stores selling lilies in clay pots, unwashed, at 29 cents per plant, and there will be thousands of good stores selling neatly arranged and carefully handled lily baskets at 25 cents per flower, with an extra charge for the receptacle. The florist supplies what his customers want—quality and price. The illustration on page 31 shows two good lily arrangements. At the left is a single plant in a low, green willow basket, with some adiantum and hyacinths planted around the base of the lily. At the right is a large white basket, tin lined, in which three lily plants were made up. Each retailer will elaborate or modify according to his needs.

Some Changes in Plant Vogue.

On page 30 is an illustration which shows two of the new French hydrangeas. At the left is Lorraine, pink, and at the right, Avalanche, white. So good a judge of plants as E. Wienhoeber has been quoted as saying that these new varieties will put the old Otaksa out of business as an Easter plant, and the growers who have tried them endorse the retailer's view. The supply this season is much larger than that of last year.

Azaleas will not this Easter cut as much figure as has been the case in other years—the trade does not seem to be able to handle it so profitably as in times gone by. The supply is not large this season, much less than usual, in spite of the early date of Easter, which should be in favor of good and plentiful azaleas. While some important firms have ceased to handle the plant, the probability is that a reaction will come in a year or two and that then larger quantities than ever will be forced.

EASTER CUT FLOWERS.

A Reaction Is in Progress.

One of the interesting developments in the trade has been the reaction from plants toward cut flowers. For a number of years it has been the report that "this was more than ever a plant Easter," but in the better class of stores there has, for a couple of seasons, been a noticeable increase in the sale of cut flower arrangements; the public taste evidently is changing again. Not that plants are any less popular but that cut flowers are sharing more evenly in the increased business.

Perhaps the increased sale of cut flowers is in some measure due to more reasonable prices, for the tendency nowadays is not to advance holiday values as formerly was done; but the chances are that a good share of the increase is due to the better methods the retailers are using in showing and selling cut stock. Until quite recently no retailer thought of offering cut flowers otherwise than put up in a box. But now the leading stores show them tastefully arranged in baskets, and they sell the baskets with the flowers. In a good many cases the person delivering the flowers is competent to arrange them for the recipient. The basket and the arrangement both are important factors in the sale.

Easter Fashions in Cut Flowers

In this issue there are a number of illustrations showing cut flower arrangements of this character. The most pretentious of these is the big basket shown on page 33. The store in which this was photographed last Easter sold it for $25. It was a large white basket, decorated with a wreath of flowers. Of course it had a tin lining. The decorator filled the liner with crossed twigs, which made it possible for him to insert his flower stems in water almost as he would have done in moss. The stock used was all spring flowers, including almost everything the season affords.

Possibly the best sellers prove to be the baskets shown on page 34. At the left is an ivory finished basket filled with Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. The handle carried a bow of good quality ribbon that exactly matched the roses. The supply houses now furnish splendid matches in all the leading flower colors. At the right is a straw basket with a glass container. The color was yellow, with a green handle with a cute little bow at the top. The flowers were open Maryland roses, with a few tight buds, and some valley, inexpensive but extremely attractive.

On page 35 the basket at the left was a fine seller. It was one of those double-barreled affairs of willow, with deep tin lining, making it possible to use long-stemmed roses. Those photographed were Rhea Reid and the ribbon was Reid red. At the right was one of the Japanese straw baskets filled with mixed roses. Such combinations do not appeal to all tastes, but in some neighborhoods this basket of roses as shown at the right was a good seller.

Some Excellent Sellers.

On page 32 the illustration shows three simple little affairs that were good sellers. At the left the basket vase contained pink sweet peas. In the center Cattleya Trianae and lily of the valley are shown. The basket at the right was filled with Wilhelmina tulips and poet's narcissi.

For the customer wanting something out of the ordinary the cut flower basket shown on page 33 was provided. This was of Japanese straw, champagne color, with ribbon to match. Shaped like the schoolgirl's book bag, it contained a tin lining. The material used was cut sprays of Azalea mollis, Spiraea Gladstone and Japanese maple.

PLANTS AND THEIR CARE.

How to Handle Easter Stock.

Next in importance to growing or buying good plants is the importance of giving them proper care when they reach the store, and proper packing when sent out to customers. Easter comes at an unusually early date this year, in a month notoriously treacherous as to weather, so we should be prepared to give plants all necessary wrapping. We may be fortunate enough to have balmy weather just prior to the great floral festival, but of this we can never be sure. Of course, mild weather means a great saving in labor incidental to wrapping plants, but it would be wise to lay in an abundant supply of newspapers and other wrapping material. Better cover more heavily than may seem necessary, rather than have complaints coming in of chilled and frozen plants. Clean pots and careful staking and watering are other details which should be attended to. The grower who sends dirty pots to the store deserves to lose trade, yet some of them persist in doing it. No wonder they are passed in the race by their more up-to-date competitors.

The Easter Lilies.

Lilies are, of course, the most important of all Easter plants, and if one plant only is wanted it will probably be a lily. A large quantity are this season being subjected to hard forcing in efforts to flower them on time. This means that many plants will carry flowers much lacking in substance and which are likely to suffer severely in a store if subjected to draughts and a moderately low temperature. Look over the plants daily and remove all pollen masses to keep the flowers clean. Few of the giganteums should need any staking, but the taller growing Formosae and some of the multiflorums will require it. There is quite a call for made-up lilies in 10-inch to 12-inch pots or deep pans. It is always best to let the plants have the flowers about ready to open before making up. A lot of the soil can be shaken off or washed away with the hose. If the roots are not too much disturbed the plants will show little ill effect. Be sure, however, to keep the soil moist. In packing lilies, be sure to first wrap tissue paper about the flowers, and be careful when covering the spikes that they are not tied tight, so that the flowers will be bruised.

Rambler Roses.

Some rambler roses are likely to be rather lightly flowered this season and will show the effects of hard forcing. They are among the most popular of Easter plants. The old Crimson Rambler led the procession years ago, but it is not now much seen, the pink varieties having secured a commanding lead. A few years ago white was the predominant Easter color. Outside of lilies this does not hold good now. Perhaps the greatest seller of all is Dorothy Perkins, but the newer Tausendschon pushes it hard for leading place. This latter proves a great seller. Unlike the majority of ramblers, this sort has a pleasing fragrance. Juniata, light pink, is a fine thing, as is Lady Gay. As a red we have nothing today superior to Hiawatha, with its bright red single flowers and rich, shiny foliage. Wedding Bells, American Pillar, White Dorothy and Farquhar are all fine Easter varieties. Then in the so-called baby rambler, or dwarf class, we now have quite a range of shades, from dark red to pure white. The original Mme. Norbert Levavasseur has not a good color, but Mrs. Cutbush, Orleans, Catherine Zeimet, Phyllis and others are all of delightful shades. All the ramblers need a generous water supply. One drying out will severely cripple them, so be sure they never approach this stage.

In the case of hybrid perpetual and hybrid tea roses in pots, it is not easy to time them to a nicety and it may be necessary to forward or retard them to hold them in the best possible condition for Easter. Frau Karl Druschki, Sunburst, Killarney, Brunner and Magna Charta are among the favorites in these classes. Hold plants which are well expanded in a cold, shaded house, but avoid cold air currents, which are always liable to produce mildew.

Genistas.

No matter whether grown naturally, trimly sheared, or as standards, genistas make popular Easter plants. They are not good house plants when compared with rambler roses, azaleas or spiræas, one week usually completely finishing them in a warm room. They sell well, however, and stand quite a low temperature without showing any ill effects. They are easy plants to pack, as they can be pulled together closely without being damaged in the least. Do not place these in the store too many at a time, for it does not take many days to give them a jaded appearance. Do not stint them on water; they need an abundant supply.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas do not sell so freely at Easter as at Memorial day. Until recently H. Otaksa has been the only form of hortensis much in evidence in the plant markets, but the newer French hybrids are catching on wonderfully. Mme. Emile Mouillere is a beautiful white, Mousseline has mauve rose flowers, Bouquet Rose is a bright pink, Mlle. de Tremault a superb white, General de Vibraye is a bright rose and La Lorraine is rose, turning bright pink. These are half a dozen new sorts which will be considerably in evidence in future years. Hydrangeas can hardly be overwatered and it will pay to keep saucers below them to prevent drying out.

Azaleas.

There are always heavy sales of azaleas at Easter, and both the colored and white varieties take well. The double white Niobe now takes the lead over Deutsche Perle, which latter is supreme in its color for Christmas. Apollo, double scarlet; Simon Mardner, double pink; Varvaneana, Paul Weber, Firefly, Empress of India and Vander Cruysen, to say nothing of the newer varieties, are good sorts to carry. There are some sorts with colors somewhat out of the beaten track, rosy lilac or lavender, particularly, which critical customers will buy in preference to the varieties most commonly offered. Few plants are more generally satisfactory than azaleas in the dwelling. With a little picking over they are easily kept presentable for two or three weeks, which is longer than the general run of Easter plants last.

Acacias.

Of all the hard-wooded plants, none are more beautiful than the acacias. Outside of A. paradoxa (armata) they are not offered at so low prices as other hard-wooded stock, their culture being more difficult. Quite a few varieties are now offered commercially. The peerless A. pubescens is seen only in limited quantities and many more could be sold. Armata, pendula, heterophylla, Riceana, cultriformis and Baileyana all make good Easter plants. In the case of A. armata the flowers should not be too much open prior to Easter; once the flowers become brown they spoil the appearance of the plant, and in order to make such plants salable these discolored flowers should be removed. Never allow acacias to become dry, and advise customers purchasing them to give them a liberal water supply; also, if they want to keep them in fresh condition as long as possible, to give them as cool a room as they can.

Spiræas.

For purchasers of moderate means, spiræas are always popular. They can be profitably grown and sold at a comparatively low price and make a really satisfactory house plant provided they get an ample water supply. While many plants will keep sufficiently moist with one good watering a day in the average living room, spiræas must have two soakings or they will shrivel up. In fact, they scarcely can be overwatered, and in place of the tag "Water this plant every day," let it read "Water this plant twice a day." The old S. Japonica, while still grown considerably, is much inferior to such kinds as Gladstone, grandiflora compacta and astilboides, while the beautiful pink varieties, Queen Alexandra and Peach Blossom, will bring even higher prices. These latter cannot be had in the best condition for Easter. They come better for Memorial day, but a good many are being grown for the coming Easter. To hold their beautiful color, keep them out of the sun when opening. Any spiræas which are late can be given a night temperature of 70 degrees and copious water supplies. Such plants, however, must not be suddenly removed to a low temperature, or they will surely suffer.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

The early Easters suit Dutch bulbs well, for by being grown along cool they become nice and stocky. For late Easters retarding has to be done and taller plants are the result. It should not be necessary to support any of the bulbs, if properly grown. However, if supports are required, use green painted stakes and green raffia, which will be comparatively inconspicuous. Such double tulips as Murillo and Couronne d'Or, and singles like Keizerskroon, Queen of the Netherlands, Yellow Prince, La Reine, Flamingo, Pink Beauty and Duchess of Parma are popular. Victoria among the bicolor, large trumpet narcissi, easily leads. It is a stocky flower. Emperor may need a little support, but Golden Spur stands up well. If the hyacinth spikes are well advanced, give a little support to them to prevent breaking. All bulbs in flower can be easily retarded in a cold pit. Late ones can be forced, but it is always at the expense of stockiness. These Dutch bulbs, being so hardy, can be stood outside the store and will not suffer from drying, cold winds as would spiræas, ramblers or any of the forced deciduous shrubs. Earthenware and wooden boxes made up with bulbs, with some small ferns or asparagus planted in with them, will be found quite salable.

Primula Obconica.

While some retailers taboo the primrose, Primula obconica, on account of the danger of poisoning from its leaves, it remains one of the most popular of moderate priced Easter plants. It is now in splendid condition and in little fancy baskets or hampers with a few pussy willows added it has a delightful spring effect. Of the various colors, the clear, bright pink is the best and will sell far better than either the pure white or bluish shades. Pick off any of the decayed flowers on the plants to give them a perfectly fresh appearance, and remember that they need a liberal water supply. One real drying out will mean the shriveling of nearly all the flowers.

Cyclamens.

For late Easters it is not easy to have cyclamens in good shape. This year they are exceptionally fine. Of course, to hold them back a cold house will have been necessary, but if they have been grown cold and airy, even as low as 40 degrees at night, they should be stocky and bristling with flowers and buds. Cyclamens cannot be as easily and cheaply grown as primulas, but any well-grown plant, provided it is of the large flowered type, will usually sell on sight. Cyclamens need a moderate water supply and do not dry up so fast as primulas and many other plants.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons are not grown to anything like the extent of azaleas. They are of larger size than the latter and cannot be handled in small pots. The most popular Easter variety, and for that matter the finest of all for pot culture, is that beautiful pink sort, Pink Pearl. There is never enough of this to go around, although, being as yet comparatively scarce, it cannot be sold at as low prices as old sorts like Cunningham's White, roseum elegans, Charles Dickens and Boule de Neige. The rhododendrons should be well hardened off before being removed to a store or the flowers will wilt badly. Remember that these in common with other hard-wooded plants have fine, hair-like roots and must never become in the least dry at the root.

Deciduous Flowering Shrubs.

In this class are a number of varieties which always appeal to flower connoisseurs, being peculiarly suggestive of spring. Lilacs are more grown than any other variety, and at this advanced season, by being grown in full light all the time and well hardened off, they have splendid foliage. It is noted that the pink and lavender shades sell better at Easter than the white ones. Marie Legraye, single white, and Mme. Lemoine, double white, are the leaders of this color. If white and pink, or white and blue varieties are made up in large, rather deep hampers and sprays of mountain laurel are used to cover their lower stems, they look charming. Other deciduous shrubs in favor are the ornamental crabapples, peaches and almonds. Care should be taken not to have these too fully expanded, for once the petals start to drop they are not easy to sell. Deutzias, wistarias, staphyleas, crataegus, forsythias and Azalea mollis are other popular plants. The last named, with its glorious shades of color, is easily the most popular and a group in any window produces a most charming effect. All these deciduous shrubs, if gradually hardened off, or grown cool, will stand a quite low temperature.

Lily of the Valley.

A sufficient lot of well-grown lily of the valley in 6-inch or 7-inch pots rarely comes in at Easter. It cannot be profitably sold so cheaply as tulips or daffodils, but well foliaged plants carrying strong spikes, placed in suitable receptacles, will sell before almost any other plants. The hard forced stock with a little pale foliage and drawn-up flower spikes is wanted by no one. Salable plants should be grown in the light from the time the pips are three or four inches high. Then they will be a credit to anyone.

Two of the New French Hydrangeas that Promise to Displace Otaksa as an Easter Pot Plant.

The Lily no Longer is the Whole Thing at Easter, but it Still is Indispensable, in Pots or Cut.

Marguerites.

The fine varieties of marguerites, Queen Alexandra and Mrs. F. Sander, make great Easter plants. They do not bloom so profusely as the older and smaller flowered sorts, but their big flowers rivet attention at once. Marguerites stand considerable rough treatment, provided always they have water in abundance at the roots. In addition to the plants of large specimen size, small plants carrying a few flowers in 4-inch or 5-inch pots are salable and pretty effects can be produced with them in baskets and boxes. The yellow varieties do not make as shapely plants as the white ones, or they also would be in demand.

Cinerarias.

For a cheap Easter plant, the cineraria is in the front rank. Its many-hued flowers are hard to arrange pleasingly with other plants. Better stand them in a group by themselves in the store or greenhouse. As they do not like much sunshine, give them a shaded position, and if instead of mixing the colors up indiscriminately, the whites, pinks, light blues, dark blues and reds are grouped together, the effect will be much more pleasing.

Orchids.

For high-class trade some of the more popular orchids cannot well be overlooked. While this is not the height of the orchid season, a fair assortment is now to be had and some of these can be sold at a moderate price. Late plants of Cattleya Trianae can still be had, while C. Schröderae is in good crop. Dendrobium nobile in its many forms and D. Wardianum are beautiful varieties. If white flowers are wanted, nothing could be better than Cœlogyne cristata, while in cypripediums the old C. villosum, Sallieri and others are to be had. One thing about orchids is that cost may be comparatively high but the flowers have great lasting properties. A drying out will not harm the plants at all and they can be carried over and flowered again if necessary.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The board of management has made the following dates for meetings of the societies coöperating in the show at New York:

April 7. Society of American Florists.
April 8. American Rose Society.
April 9. American Carnation Society.
April 10. National Association of Gardeners.
April 11. American Sweet Pea Society.
April 12. American Gladiolus Society.
The meetings will be held at 10:30 a. m. each day.

Each afternoon and evening during the show the lecture room will be reserved for public lectures on horticultural subjects. In addition to the lecturers already announced, Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., will lecture on "The Gladiolus"; Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., on "The Whys and Wherefores of Tree Planting"; and L. W. C. Tuthill, of New York, on "Greenhouses and Frames for Amateurs."

Members of the Rose, Carnation, Sweet Pea and Gladiolus Societies and of the S. A. F. in good standing will be furnished with tickets or badges admitting them to the show at all times.

The show will be opened at 6 p. m.

Saturday, April 5, with an appropriate ceremony, and on other days will be open from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m. Posters and hangers, in colors, are now in course of distribution.

The advertising forms for the official program will close March 15, so that anyone who has not already taken space in the same and intends doing so should lose no time in making his wants known to John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, who also is still able to furnish a few excellent locations for exhibits in the trade exhibition.

ORANGE TREES IN GREENHOUSE.

You would do me a great favor if you would let me know of a nursery where I can buy some good sized orange trees for planting in a greenhouse, to be grown for the fruit. When would be the best time to plant them?

T. N.

You should secure these from one of the firms in Florida or California which make a specialty of growing them. Such firms as Reasoner Bros., of the Royal Palm Nurseries, Oneco, Fla., could supply you. Winter is the proper time to secure the plants.

ORCHIDS

Cattleyas.

The sun is becoming more powerful and it will be necessary to give the glass a thin shading, just sufficient to break the direct rays. The temptation to put on a heavier coating is strong when we get a brilliant day, suggestive of the tropics, but these in March are usually borrowed days and followed by dark, cold spells more closely resembling the arctics.

Potting should be pushed ahead with C. Trianae and any other species needing it. Rather coarse and wiry fern fiber is better than the soft, spongy kind for cattleyas, as it wears longer, and be sure to firm the plants thoroughly, whatever receptacle they are growing in. No cattleya or other orchid loosely potted will ever thrive. Potting, when properly done, should enable anyone to pick a cattleya up by the bulbs and move it without disturbing the compost.

It is a good plan when repotting to also clean the cattleyas. Use a brush that will reach right down between the top of the bulb and the leaf and clean any scale out thoroughly. This scale also will fasten itself on the bulbs and must be forcibly removed. Such insecticides as Aphine, Firtree oil and Imperial soap are all good for this purpose.

As C. Trianae passes out of flower we will be dependent on C. Schrodereae, now coming into season. This cattleya is pale in color and for some reason has never become popular. It, however, is a beautiful variety and fills in the gap nicely until Mossiae and Mendellii come in season. A few Mossiae are already opening and soon there will be a good display of this easily grown and free flowering early summer orchid.

A night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees will suffice for cattleyas, giving such varieties as gigas, Dowiana and Mossiae the warm end of the house except when in flower.

Watering of newly potted stock must be done sparingly until the roots are taking hold of the new compost. Better always to underwater rather than overwater orchids. Growing plants will now need more abundant supplies. All watering should be done in the morning, and in spraying over on clear days plan to have the foliage dry before nightfall.

Keep a sharp watch for cattleya fly; it usually comes on C. labiata, but will attack practically all varieties. Abnormally swelled growths show the presence of the pest and the only remedy, a radical one, is to cut these off, cut them open and burn them. Fumigation may kill a few, as will fly papers, but the only real remedy is to cut open the growths.

Phalaenopsis.

At this season the beautiful moth orchid, the phalaenopsis, makes a truly magnificent show. It is such a fine and popular commercial orchid that it is not surprising to find more growers taking hold of it. In California, where the phalaenopsis is largely grown, it vies with the cattleya in popularity. Its culture is looked upon as difficult and comparatively few growers have handled it. It is true it needs some fussing over, but given plenty of moist heat, a position near the glass, and suitable shade, there are no special difficulties attending its culture. The phalaenopsis resents direct currents of air; anything like a draught is harmful, so ventilation must be carefully given. It succeeds well in pots, pans or baskets, but rather deep, cylindrical baskets are particularly good. It also thrives nicely on blocks with some fern fiber and sphagnum securely fastened to them.

Just now the beautiful, much branched pink variety, P. Schilleriana, is in flower. Fifty to sixty flowers are not uncommon on this sort, sometimes as many as seventy-five to 100 being produced. The exquisite white forms, grandiflora, Rimestadiana and amabilis, are all now in season. It is unwise to leave the fully expanded spikes on the plants too long, as they severely cripple them.

A night temperature of 65 to 68 degrees must be maintained, but on severely cold, windy nights it can be allowed to drop to 60 to 62 degrees. On dull days a temperature of 70 to 72 degrees should be kept, while on bright days it can be advanced to 80 degrees, with ventilation. Sponge the leaves occasionally with tepid water as a preventive of thrips and red spider and keep a moist atmosphere, but keep water off the flowers, which soon become spotted; also be careful not to play the hose on steam or hot water pipes. Steam in the atmosphere will soon spot the white-flowered sorts.

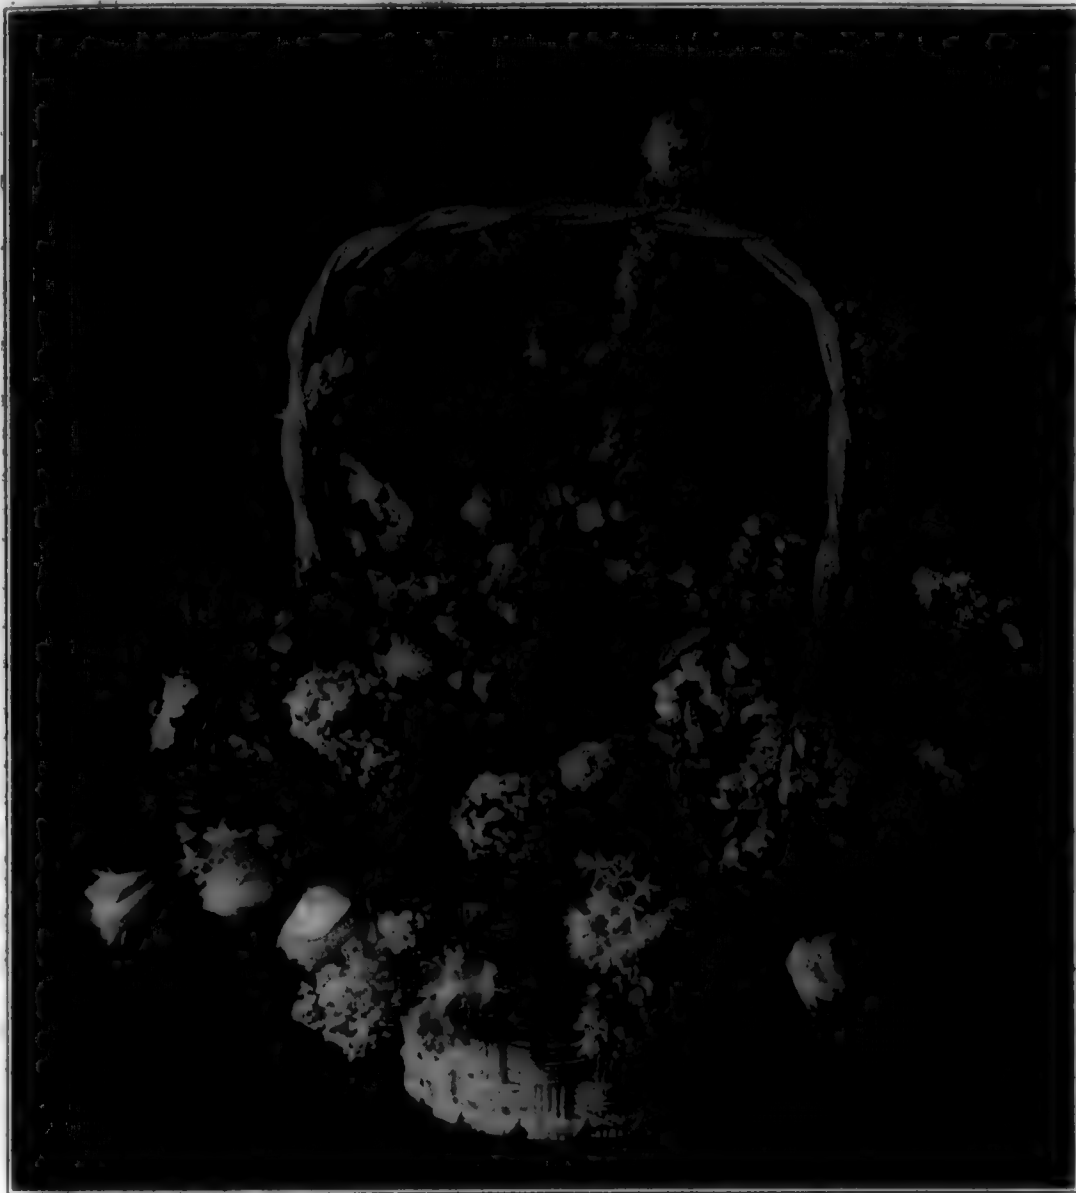

OUTLOOK FOR BULB GROWING.

Right at the start comes forward the question, can any business be overdone? It can be answered by yes or no. The usual can be overdone, the best never. The way of the great majority often is clogged, but that of the painstaking few hardly ever.

How is it with Europe? Many years ahead of us in growing, with far cheaper labor and still longer experience, they are increasing their output year by year. But I think we can well stop a moment and take a look at the environment. We have an immense country, a population that is growing faster than production along food lines. Luxuries sometimes have to wait a bit. Flowers, the product of bulbs, are among the luxuries. Sometimes luxuries prove, in the end, to be necessities. Such is the position flowers are in today. They are gradually becoming a necessity and will gain just so fast as intelligence and a love for the beautiful fasten themselves upon the people as a whole.

Therefore, I take it that the future of bulb growing depends as much upon the intelligent, honest and painstaking grower as on any other factor. Put up the square deal on what you sell, the same as you insist upon receiving. Right along by the side of this put publicity for what you have to sell. No need to misrepresent or exaggerate the beauty of any flower. They came from the hand of the perfect One, and not by any jumping-jack, haphazard evolution. Put these two influences together and we never need fear the overproduction of any really valuable flower. Show the people the value and they will not only appreciate our efforts but will reward us financially.

I believe the business of bulb growing has struck a snag, if you will allow such an expression, and it is now up to the straightforward producer of good stock, with honest methods of handling and selling, to set the trade straight and reap the reward. The people of this country are being educated faster than many realize. They are also watching the advertisements of the goods, making comparisons, as it were, in the quiet of the home. This consultation, often around the fireside, decides the route by which the next order shall travel. It is often quite hard to learn it, but business men are learning it and some are profiting by honesty and sincerity.

The grower suffers somewhat in comparison with the producers of many of the necessities of life. His results largely depend on weather and he must plant, care for and harvest with this fact in constant view. His business is largely dominated by faith, but with that faith, borne upward by the reward that surely comes if faithful, he works on year after year with an abiding happiness that conquers all.

In the bulb in which we are all more or less interested, the gladiolus, we have a good example. Year after year the bulblets are planted with scarcely any regard to good or ill results. Consequently the small or weak ones go in with the rest, and stock is hurt thereby. This is being remedied in some cases. This can be largely remedied by sifting the bulblets. Doing away with this evil will help the general stock. Carry this principle all along down the long row of bulbous flowers and the far-reaching results would in time surprise. I think we need have no fear of overproduction of good stock of any bulb, but we certainly must have more care for selection, the eradication of disease, and good keeping. The seed-corn growers are beating us by miles in carefulness and selection.

New things are desirable, but the old standards have not lost their value. Twice two still makes only four, and it is fair to conclude 'twill so remain. I think we can reasonably say, put out good stock, be fair about the price, insist upon getting value received, but deliver the goods, and we need have no fear of the future in growing any bulb the market calls for.

SNAPDRAGONS FOR WINTER.

I have several hundred Silver Pink snapdragons that were grown from seed and are now in 2-inch pots. They are ready to be shifted into 3-inch pots. Can I carry them along the same as I do my carnations; that is, keep them topped back to six inches, plant them in the garden in June after all danger of frost is past and then bench in August? I am located in the western part of New York state. I want them to bloom next winter. If this method of procedure is wrong, kindly tell me how to go about it to get flowering plants next winter. Is the crop continuous after they once commence to bloom?

A. E. B.

Your plants have been started a little early for next winter's crop. If you have any vacant bench it would pay you better to plant them out now, placing them twelve inches apart each way, and get a crop of flowers through May and June. If topped once, the plants will send up five or six shoots each, all of which should be allowed to remain. An additional batch of seed, sown now, will give you good plants by the end of April, which can at that time be planted out in the field, kept headed back, lifted and benched in the early part of August for winter flowering. Geo. E. Buxton, a successful grower of Silver Pink snapdragons, puts each plant in a strawberry box, which he covers about one inch, and when lifting he thus gets a good ball of roots and the plants sustain little check. Of course, cuttings inserted now will also make you nice little stock to plant out about the last of April. Snapdragons do not mind a little frost and should be planted out earlier than such stock as geraniums, verbenas and petunias.

SOWING SPRENGERI SEED.

Please let me know how to treat Asparagus Sprengeri seed to get the best results. Of some fresh seed that I sowed, only a small percentage germinated.

C. B.

Asparagus seed should be sown in shallow flats, containing about two and one-half to three inches of soil. A good rule to follow in regard to the depth of soil with which to cover the seeds, is to use enough to cover them about the diameter of the seeds, or, in the case of asparagus, generally to cover them with about a quarter of an inch of soil. A thin covering of sand will answer well, and will keep the surface of the soil from baking hard.

Place the flats in a temperature of 65 degrees and keep them moist, but not sodden, and there should be no trouble in germinating the seeds, providing they are fresh.

PRINCESS OF WALES VIOLETS.

When and how should Princess of Wales violets be watered and sprayed, and what ventilation is necessary during and after the process? What are the best temperatures in which to grow them? During the month of December should they be treated differently? How can aphids and red spider be fought? What is the effect of too much heat and closed ventilators on that violet?

R. L.

Morning is the best time to do any necessary watering. Never allow violets to become in the least dry at the root, or they will suffer severely and fall an easier prey to red spider. When you do water, give a thorough soaking. The proper night temperature for single violets is 40 degrees; it should not exceed 42 degrees. No different treatment should be given in December, with the idea of increasing the pick.

No spraying should be given except near heating pipes, where spider is liable to attack the plants. Spray with nicotine or Aphine for green aphids, or fumigate with one of the tobacco papers. Violets will not stand heavy fumigation. They want abundant ventilation. Only on the coldest nights should the ventilators be closed. Too much heat and closed ventilators will mean flowers off color, a heavy crop of leaves, plenty of insect pests and an early running out of the plants.

DOUBLE VIOLETS IN POTS.

Can anyone tell me how to grow double violets in pots to sell to local trade? I once saw some that carried about seventy-five flowers to a pot and they were beautiful. My location is western Massachusetts.

A. F. J.

Good field-grown plants should be dug up and potted in 6-inch or 7-inch pots in August. Place in a coldframe at first, keep freely aired and spray occasionally until established. Place in a cool greenhouse in September, giving a night temperature as near 45 degrees as possible. Rather let the heat run a little lower than higher in winter. Use soil such as you would grow roses or mums in, with a good proportion of decayed cow manure. Feed with liquid manure occasionally when they are well rooted in pots. You will find Lady Hume Campbell the best variety to grow.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

American readers are undoubtedly aware of the extraordinary outrage that was recently perpetrated by militant suffragettes at Kew Gardens. The glass in two orchid houses was broken and hundreds of valuable orchids were torn from their pots and trampled under foot. An envelope bearing the words, "Votes for Women," was found among the wreckage of glass and flower pots and the greenhouses had the appearance of having been swept by a terrible storm. Just how this outrage is to help women to obtain votes is difficult to conceive. The damage is estimated at $1,000.

The one hundred and ninth annual meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society was held February 11. Twenty-five years ago the society had 1,100 members; today there are over 13,000 names on the books, and the invested funds amount to $350,000. The chairman, Sir Trevor Lawrence, mentioned that the occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the appointment of Rev. W. Wilks as secretary. He had pleasure in stating that the council were having a portrait of Mr. Wilks prepared and the testimonial fund had reached $2,500. In addition he had pleasure in handing a silver salver to Mr. Wilks.

The proposed establishment of a diploma in horticulture is likely to be achieved soon. In conjunction, the Department of Horticulture, the Royal Horticultural Society and the University of London are preparing a syllabus. It is also hoped that a degree in horticulture will be established at London University.

The Royal Horticultural Society has conferred the Victoria medal of honor upon Rev. W. Wilks; also upon James Whitton, superintendent of the Glasgow parks, and W. H. Divers, gardener at Belvoir Castle, a well known gardener and writer on gardening subjects.

David King, nurseryman, Edinburgh, who has succeeded W. H. Massie, seed merchant, Edinburgh, as president of the Scottish Horticultural Association, delivered his inaugural address February 4. His subject was "Recent Advances in Horticulture," and he expressed the opinion that such advances had been more along scientific lines than on practical lines. Britain had always stood high in practical horticulture and it was difficult to say that there had been much advance during the last half century.

Two well known gentlemen in the dahlia trade spoke at a conference of the National Dahlia Society in London February 14. W. C. Wyatt, of Keynes, Williams & Co., Salisbury, spoke on "Exhibiting and Judging Dahlias," and F. G. Trenchard, of Trenchard & Co., Ltd., Cardiff, spoke on "The Future of the Dahlia." A challenge cup of the value of $370 will be competed for in September, for decorative garden dahlias, on a space 3x25 feet.

The French National Society of Acclimatization has conferred its large gold medal upon Sir Henry J. Veitch, in recognition of services rendered by the introduction of numerous exotic species of trees and shrubs, which can be cultivated in the open air in Europe.

John Waterer & Sons, Ltd., Bagshot, England, have appointed H. Buckenham as their landscape gardener. He received his early training in England and thereafter proceeded to the United States, where he was engaged in landscape operations. Among the schemes he superintended was that of Duke's Farm, Somerville, N. J. With John Waterer & Sons there will be abundant scope for his talents.

The ubiquitous sweet pea claims attention at all seasons. Seed merchants are now at their wits' end to satisfy customers as certain seed drawers become depleted. A number of members of the National Sweet Pea Society recently gave their votes on the best twelve varieties and the result was: Thomas Stevenson, 53 votes; Clara Curtis, 42; Elfrida Pearson and Maud Holmes, 40 each; R. F. Felton, 39; Elsie Herbert, 37; Nubian, 36; Mrs. C. W. Breadmore, 35; Etta Dyke, 33; Hercules, 30; Mrs. Hugh Dickson, 23; Sunproof Crimson, 23. Bee.

GARDENIAS IN BENCHES.

You were kind and prompt in getting me the desired information regarding the pest on Rhea Reid roses for which I wrote you, and for which I thank you. I am now writing to ask you for information through your paper regarding the culture of gardenias in the bench; also, how many blooms one should get per plant, and the average selling price per bloom. W. J. V.

Gardenias for bench culture should now be in sand or potted off. They will root in a month with a brisk bottom heat in a night temperature of 70 degrees. Cuttings require frequent watering; in fact, with fairly coarse sand they can scarcely be overwatered. Keep the young plants close and shaded until established in the pots, which should be 2¼-inch or 2½-inch. Later a shift can be given into 3½-inch pots, although if the bench is ready they can go there direct.

Gardenias want a light house, piped so that an absolute minimum of 65 to 70 degrees can be maintained with ease. I prefer to have the pipes below the benches, but near the ground, so as to afford some bottom heat. Use good drainage in the benches and for compost two-thirds fibrous loam to one-third dry, lumpy cow manure. To this can be added some broken charcoal and coarse sand. Gardenias want a porous soil, through which water will readily pass. If this is not given the soil will become sour and the yellows will appear sooner or later. Five inches of soil is ample. Set the plants fifteen inches apart in the rows and let the rows be twenty-four inches apart. Leave a little saucer about each plant and water in these for a time, until the roots are running through the soil freely. Too much water may bring on the yellows.

Gardenias enjoy a brisk, moist heat. Mealy bug and other pests can be controlled by the judicious use of the hose. Right through the growing season spray the plants over in the afternoon and close up so as to have a warm, moist growing atmosphere. Always avoid anything like overwatering. Pinch the little plants once or twice as needed and, before they become too much grown, support by a wire stake, to which some of the stronger shoots can be tied. Some growers use no stakes, but it pays to have them.

As autumn approaches, with colder nights, use great care in watering. Both then and in midwinter it is best to let the beds get a little on the dry side and then soak well. A too wet condition is more likely to cause bud dropping than soil partially dry. Do not let the minimum go below 65 degrees, and 68 to 70 degrees, except on severe nights, is better. Syringe on bright days, just often enough to keep the plants clean. A top-dressing of Clay's fertilizer mixed with some soot, loam and leaf-mold, not too much decayed, will bring a network of feeding roots on the surface. This form of feeding is preferable to using liquid manures.

A small number of growers only are successful in flowering gardenias in winter, the time they bring highest prices. Anyone can flower them in spring and early summer. Values run all the way from $6 to $50 per hundred at wholesale. Few bring the highest price, and then only at the holidays. A fair winter price is $25 for good flowers with 12-inch to 18-inch stems. Short stems bring, of course, much less. The production per plant is hard to give. Those flowering in winter give far fewer blooms than such as are kept for spring crops, but it is in winter that they bring the highest prices; still there is a demand for good gardenias in the big markets the year around.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

EXPENSE OF RETAIL DELIVERY.

I should like to hear from any of my brother florists who are situated as I am in regard to that increasingly important part of our business, the delivery service.

I am located in a town of about 12,000 inhabitants, with a large country territory, and with the nearest opposition of any importance over 100 miles away. I have a small greenhouse in the outskirts of the town and a store in the business part. All the help I need is a man in the greenhouse and a saleslady at the store. The sales run all the way from 25 cents to about $3 per purchase; few purchases are over the latter amount, while by far the largest percentage average from $1 to $1.50.

Of course, every store in town delivers free of charge and so do I, but here is where the rub comes in: The free delivery on such small purchases not only eats up the profit but often devours a slice more. I am getting most of my flowers from the city and accordingly have to figure on the cost of the flowers laid down at my place. On the other hand, the florists in the city are doing quite a business shipping flowers out here and people are constantly going back and forth; hence I have to sell at city prices in order to sell anything at all. Now, if I deliver free of charge and have to send my man from the greenhouse to the store, have him deliver a package or two or even three, and figure his time until he comes back again, as well as the cost of the box, wax paper, paper and string, the store expenses, etc., I am more than likely to be money out on purchases which do not amount to more than $1, while on purchases of from $1 to $1.50 I come out about even and on anything over $1.50 the profit is cut down to a considerable extent.

A short time ago a wholesale grower from the city was here and I spoke to him about it, but, as I expected, he simply told me that I would have to deliver free at any time and anywhere, or I could not expect people to patronize me. Does he do the same thing? Let us see: I have a standing order with him for cut flowers, which, with special orders sent in quite frequently, amount to from $10 to $20 per day. The flowers are all packed at a certain time and in one box. Any of the express companies will be glad to call at his place and get them, but at the end of the invoice I find a charge of 25 cents for packing and delivering. This includes box, paper, string, icing, and the time it takes a man to do the packing.

Now, how is it that the grower or wholesaler charges me 25 cents for this packing and imaginary delivering to the express company, on any order amounting to $15 per day, while I am supposed to furnish all boxes, wax paper, paper, string, clerk hire and incidental expenses without charge, and then deliver all these flowers free in small lots to all parts of town and at any time my customer wants them delivered? It is simply because all the growers and wholesalers make this charge, while we little fellows tumble over one another to get the trade at any expense, without doing any calculating as to whether or not the expenses connected with a sale eat up the whole profit. If we would come to an agreement to stop this tremendous expense of free delivery; if we would, like the wholesaler, charge our out-of-town customers with packing and delivery, we could all make the delivering pay for itself instead of being a heavy burden.

In the city a boy can probably be hired for the job of delivering for about $3 per week; here I have to pay any young fellow from $6 to $8, and half the time cannot get one even at those wages. In the city the gasoline for a motorcycle or auto delivery car can be purchased for a good deal less than here. We are paying nearly 18 cents per gallon in tank lots, and for everything else correspondingly.

Again, there is the delivering on Sunday. I keep my store open on Saturday night until 10 o'clock, and on Sunday from 10 a. m. to 1 and from 7 p. m. to 9. I am not making a practice of delivering on Sundays, but have a good many kicks on that. Some of my customers have even walked out without buying because I would not deliver free of charge. However, I look at it in this way: I cannot get anyone to work seven days a week for fifty-two weeks in the year by compensating him for only six days' work per week. One of us must be at the greenhouse and one at the store, and if delivering is done on Sunday, another helper is needed for this. Thus all three of us would have to work 365 days in the year, which I do not think is an enjoyable prospect for anybody. If I have to pay someone for delivering on Sunday, the expense is more than my profits amount to. If I call an A. D. T. messenger I have to pay from 10 to 15 cents per package and frequently have to wait so long that the flowers are not delivered on time, which is as bad as no delivery, or worse.

Besides, we live in a town which contains about sixteen churches. About ninety per cent of the flower-buying public are church members, or at least go to church whenever the doors are open, and, no matter what disagreements the different denominations may have among themselves, they all alike teach you to keep the Sabbath. However, coming from church, they drop into the flower store and buy a few flowers for the dinner table, and if these are not delivered for them they feel terribly put out about it.

Now, how could this delivery question be managed so as to be satisfactory all around and at the same time not be a source of loss? Would it do to cut delivery out on small purchases? Will it be necessary to deliver on Sundays, or could I make a charge of 10 cents on the non-paying and Sunday deliveries and deliver large purchases free? Let us have your opinion, as there are, no doubt, lots of small florists in the same situation.

R. S.

AN EASTER DECORATION.

"City florists will not take enough interest in the picture of the church decoration," writes Ernest L. Johnson, "but it may help some country florist to take courage. The city retailer has everything to work with, but the small country retailers, like myself, have to make the best of meager facilities."

The picture shows a church decorated for Easter by Mr. Johnson, who does business in Palmer, Mass. The plants used were cinerarias, ferns, palms and lilies. The cinerarias were grouped so that the colors ranged from pure white through the different shades of pink. The cross shown in the picture was garlanded with strings of smilax. At the left of the altar was a large basket of Easter lilies and pussy-willows.

If a suggestion may be permitted, no town is too small for the florist to carry a stock of crepe paper, if not ready-to-use pot covers, and certainly clay pots are no more sightly in a small town than in a large one.

FOR AN EASTER WEDDING.

The accompanying illustration shows an Easter wedding decoration arranged by Will Rehder, Wilmington, N. C. In the photograph the ribbons forming the aisle to the altar are somewhat exaggerated by a freak of the camera. In reality they were not so conspicuous a feature. The bay window was filled with palms and ferns, with a framework of southern smilax. The conventional kneeling stool stood beneath the arch and between the newel posts. On top of each post was a large kentia, around which had been placed Easter lilies. The mantel was banked with white roses and valley amid the ferns.

EASTER.

In reply to the annual inquiries asking why Easter is a festival with a movable date, and how the exact date is fixed, they tell us that it is fixed by the "ideal moon" adopted many centuries ago by the church. There is not a great deal of difference between the "true moon" and the "ideal moon" in their phases, but sometimes the "true moon" may just miss the "ecclesiastical moon." When it comes to figuring just where the difference lies you touch upon a pretty complicated astronomical subject. It is safe to say, however, that Easter comes on the first Sunday after the first full moon after March 21. Or, to put it another way, Easter is the first Sunday occurring after the first full moon, or more accurately, after the first fourteenth day of the moon following the vernal equinox. The vernal equinox invariably falls March 21, so that the Easter festival cannot come earlier than March 22 or later than April 25.

Not since 1856 has Lent come in so early as it did this year, and not for ninety-five years more will we have so early a Lent and Easter. Some day we hope it will not be a movable feast. Florists are not the only ones who would like Easter given a fixed date, and there is a strong and growing movement toward such a change.

BASKET OF LILIES.

The basket of Easter lilies is the one indispensable feature of an Easter decoration, no matter where or for what. It is an arrangement every florist will be called on to make times without closely together that they show no individuality. The accompanying illustration is interesting as showing a well proportioned arrangement of lilies with pussy-willows. It was by E. L. Johnson, Palmer, Mass.

WHY FLOWERS WILT.

Flowers wilt because of the collapse of the individual cells of which they are made up. So long as these cells are distended the flowers remain fresh. This distention is due to osmotic pressure. If the osmotic equilibrium—that is, the osmotic pressure within and without the cells—can be kept uniform, the flowers remain fresh. If the osmotic equilibrium is disturbed, the flowers wilt. Now, osmotic pressure depends upon the presence in the cell of a liquid containing substances in solution. The proportion and character of the substance dissolved determine the degree of osmotic pressure exerted by the liquid within the cell.

L. Fourton, associate professor of chemistry, and Vital Ducomet, professor of botany, at the National School of Agriculture at Rennes, France, have made a series of experiments during the last three years to determine the influence of various solutions in prolonging the life of cut flowers through their influence on osmotic pressure. Over 100 varieties of plants were experimented with and over 100 experiments were tried on each. It was found that mixtures of mineral and organic substances were, as a rule, not so effective no one substance was universally helpful, though solutions of sugar were more generally helpful than those of any other substance. The strength of the solution to be used varied with the different plants. Lilacs, lilies, sweet peas and a few other flowers were hurt, not helped, by the addition of sugar to the water. Sugar seemed to have no influence either one way or the other on marguerites, chrysanthemums and tulips. Nearly all the other popular flowers were benefited by the addition of sugar to the water in which they were kept, the life of the flower being lengthened from ten to 300 per cent. The strength of the sugar solution to be used varies with different flowers. With carnations a fifteen per cent sugar solution is helpful; with most roses a solution of from seven to ten per cent in strength gives the best results. Orchids did best in solutions varying from ten to twenty per cent of sugar. The sugar solutions accelerated the opening of buds, particularly among roses and orchids.

Lilacs, though injured by sugar solution alone, were helped by a twelve per cent solution of sugar containing one part of manganese sulphate in 10,000. Chloral, ether, glycerin and alcohol in varying proportions helped certain of the blossoms, while others were helped by lime water, potash and its salts, and ammonia and its salts.

The only advantage of changing water seemed to be the prevention of putrefaction; otherwise changing the water in which flowers stand seemed detrimental. The more deeply the stem was immersed in the water or solution, the better the result; that is, the water should come as near as possible to the blossom.

COMPOSITE CROPS.

Different Species Grown Together.

In these days, when the increasing cost of production threatens to deplete the fair profits the florist deserves, the problem of "making two spears grow where one grew before" should receive large attention. And the problem is largely hinged on the question as to what different species will do well together in the solid beds without emulating the theory of survival of the fittest.

To find out definitely what species will grow in harmony, what plants will use the different chemical constituents of the soil, what kinds will not rob each other of root formation, what kinds will help each other in the battle against their insect enemies, the stronger attracting certain pests until its weaker copartner gets a good start—these are the main points to be considered in this plan of plant management.

I sowed two pounds of cabbage seed with one and a half pounds of white-tipped Scarlet Turnip radish. The stand was even and I pulled the radishes out when fit for market. In the meantime they had attracted the flea beetles and kept them from the cabbage plants. But if you wish to grow beautiful plants by old methods, try the Volga; it is such a swift, robust grower that insects are left behind in the race and insecticides are quite unnecessary.

Seven Crops in a Season.

I have seen a Detroit florist grow this succession: Early in the spring number in the next few days. The one mistake most frequently made is to use too many lilies, producing a crowded effect. The idea of abundance always is desirable in any flower arrangement, but the beauty of the lily is lost when the flowers are packed so as either alone. Inorganic substances were helpful only in very dilute solutions, a strength of one part in 10,000 giving the best results. With organic substances a solution varying from one to ten per cent proved most efficient.

The results arrived at showed that he cut a good crop of spinach from seed sown in the fall; also some pansy plants. He plowed the land and planted lettuce plants from his greenhouse. When the lettuce was nearly marketable he drilled radish seed up the rows. When these were being pulled he planted wax beans which had been started on sod in his greenhouse. Then came crops of summer lettuce, fall radishes and spinach.

A New York market gardener once told me that I tried to get too many crops from the same piece of ground in one season. He relied on a single crop. But I would rather have the satisfaction of the Detroit florist who grew seven crops than that of the New York gardener who secured but one.

I had several thousand cosmos plants which grew too rank in the beds. I thought I would try lopping off the tops, as they were touching the glass. As an experiment I stuck the slips in between the tomato rows in a hotbed. In a few days they rooted and I discovered that these cuttings made flowering plants much sooner than those from seed, besides doubling my plant supply. In fact, some were in bloom before I planted them out in June.

Cream on Cream.

Gladioli seem to be a popular go-between in greenhouse plantings in this vicinity. Especially do carnation growers take to this bulb. But there are those, like the aforementioned New York gardener, who desire to see but one crop growing on the same ground at the same time. They forget that if they select those kinds that do not intrude on their neighbors, whatever is added to the income from these extra sales is but cream on cream.

Having 2,000 pond lily cosmos unsold one season, I planted them between the hills in a field of Golden Bantam corn; after the corn was cut the cosmos massed the field and several thousand cuts of the bloom added to the season's profits.

If we only knew all the workings of the underworld of roots—if we could see all plant life upside down, as it were—we could more easily choose those that would couple in harmony. If such plants as the gerardias are root parasites, as some botanists assert, we must beware of that class. On the other hand, those of the order of legumes, the sweet pea, etc., from their reputed congenial habits of growth, might be welcomed in composite floriculture.

With some greenhouse crops, such as cucumbers, etc., where all the soil or space is not needed at the start, beans, lettuce and even radishes might be used as fillers. The Japanese climbing cucumber seems to me to have many points in its favor as an agreeable greenhouse resident.

The Pentstemon and Its Future.

One of the coming popular flowers, in my mind, is the pentstemon. America is the natural home of this interesting plant, for there are no less than ten kinds found east of the Rockies, besides several in California, Mexico and elsewhere. But it is to the hybrids that we must look for suitable commercial varieties, and, while the English speak of named varieties of these hybrids, it is quite time for Americans to get their heads together and give the different beautiful colored specimens of Hartwegi, gloxinoides, glaber, pulchellus, etc., suitable individual names. In solid beds, until I can determine whether or not they are root parasites, I shall be slow to companion them with other kinds of plants. With the advent of hybrids having more sturdy, less wiltable bloom for cutting, with its already proved adaptability for bedding out and its ease of propagation from seed or from cuttings from low side shoots, the pentstemon is on the verge of a wave of popular fashion or public favor, such as is already experienced by many of its more fortunate neighbors.

Mushrooms may be grown in many beds without inconvenience to the host. Montbretias may be used quite as well as gladioli. Sea kale and Swiss chard, owing to their increasing popularity, must be given consideration.

Cultivate some of the "new things" in the open during the summer; give specimens or messes to the fancy restaurants; let them sample and whet their appetites; then try to force some to supply your trade. I have found that a bunch of flowers or hamper of some new vegetable, freely given away, often brings a good reward in the following sales.

CLAY'S FERTILIZER.

What proportion of Clay's fertilizer should be used to a gallon of water?
S. B.

A teaspoonful to a gallon of water is a sufficiently strong dose for the average soft-wooded plant. Such plants as callas, hydrangeas, marguerites and chrysanthemums will take it double that strength. Clay's fertilizer can also be applied as a top-dressing; one teaspoonful to a 6-inch pot should be applied to such plants as begonias, primroses, cinerarias, cyclamens, geraniums, calceolarias, etc. Strong growing ferns, like cibotiums and nephrolepis, are benefited by Clay's fertilizer, but use it half as strong as for the flowering plants, and in liquid form.

Sweet Peas

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

Early Sowing Desirable.

The winter now passing has been an uncommonly open one and no doubt some growers in the more southerly states have already made outdoor sowings. It is a common fallacy to wait until the ground is warm and dry before sowing the seeds. Sweet peas can not be sown too early, once the frost has left the ground and it has dried so that it is not sticky when worked. These early sown peas make deep roots before the growths appear, while the ground is cool and moist, and that is what we need if strong haulm and stems are wanted.

Thorough preparation of the ground pays. Turn it over deeply and manure liberally with rotted cow manure, fine bone and potash in some form. Of course, if the ground could have been turned over and the barnyard manure added last fall, all the better, adding the bone and potash in spring, but only a few growers thus prepare their ground in advance. For the best results, dig out trenches twenty-four inches deep, remove all gravel and stones, and when filling in, add plenty of manure. Cover the seed two to two and one-half inches deep and do not keep covering the little plants over as they grow, as often advised in seed lists, or you are sure to have stem-rot and other troubles. Sow thinly, or have courage to thin severely. Plants should not stand closer than four inches apart each way, and for exhibition flowers they can go much wider apart than this.

Some Good Varieties.

A few colors only sell well in the flower markets and it is useless to plant too many varieties, or such as the buying public will not take kindly to. It has always seemed to me, however, that in variety our American markets have a too small range in sweet peas, and that, without admitting really undesirable shades, quite a few more might be added. Growers handle what retailers demand and their colors are white, pink and lavender, with a few scarlets, pink and whites and scarlets thrown in.

For early flowering a few of the regular forcing sorts, such as Mont Blanc, Christmas Pink, etc., can be grown. These are not as satisfactory, however, outdoors as under glass. A boiled-down list of inexpensive but first-class varieties is as follows: White, Nora Unwin and Etta Dyke; deep pink, Countess Spencer; cream pink, Mrs. Hugh Dickson and Constance Oliver; orange pink, Helen Lewis; lavender, Florence Nightingale, Frank Dolby and Asta Ohn Spencer; scarlet, King Edward Spencer; picotee-edged, Mrs. C. W. Breadmore; blue, Captain of the Blues Spencer; rose, John Ingman; bicolor, Mrs. Andrew Ireland; yellow, Primrose Spencer.

There are each year many fine novelties coming out and some of these are great advances over varieties now in commerce. It is well to try a few of these each year. A few of the newer ones which should be given a good try out are: Barbara, Dorothy, Mrs. Cuthbertson, Hercules, Scarlet Emperor, Duplex Spencer, Charles Foster, Helen Peirce Spencer, Marie Corelli, Pearl Gray Spencer, Mrs. Heslington, Mrs. W. J. Unwin.

Starting Under Glass.

In order to secure a crop outdoors ahead of the regular sowing, it always pays to start a batch in flats or pots in a coldframe and later to transplant them. This will ensure flowers fully a fortnight ahead of those sown outdoors and of grand quality. Do not make the mistake common to nearly all growers of planting too thickly. Individual plants should not be closer than six inches apart and a foot is better. Remember that these outdoor sweet peas have a naturally branching habit from close to the ground when given sufficient space, and the wider apart they are planted, the longer and stronger will the stems come. Three-inch pots, with two seeds each, sown now, should be planted out sometime in April, according to latitude. They should never have any fire heat nor be coddled in any way, nor should they be allowed to become potbound before being planted out. W. N. Craig.

WINTER-BLOOMING VARIETIES.

We are growing sweet peas and they have been blooming well, but now they are throwing short stems and making a second growth. This is our first year with indoor sweet peas and we do not know enough about them to know what we should do. The second growth is about four feet high. The shoots start right above the ground and are strong. We would like to know if this second growth will bloom and when? We intend planting tomatoes where the peas are, but if the second growth will bloom, we think it might pay better to leave the peas and not plant the tomatoes. We have been feeding them with manure water and gave them a top-dressing of bone meal. We shall be thankful for any information you might give us. J. E. & S.

The winter flowering sweet peas will naturally send out strong shoots from the base; and these will give you a fine crop of flowers on much better stems than those you now are cutting. If they are already four feet high they will soon be throwing buds. Feed the peas well, now that the days are longer and they dry out more. A top-dressing of cow manure or pulverized sheep manure, lightly forked into the surface soil before watering, will be of great benefit and will work much quicker than the bone.

I doubt if you can profitably grow peas for a long season, and it would be well to have tomato plants in reserve to plant your house with when the peas show signs of running out. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS FOR OUTDOOR CULTURE.

Are there any chrysanthemums, used for greenhouse planting, that can also be planted outside for blooms before frost, in this Pennsylvania climate? What are the names of some in pink, white and yellow, and how are they handled? G. R. S.

There is an early flowering section of chrysanthemums, not much grown under glass, which you would do well to try. A few good varieties are: White—Hermine, Queen of the Earlies, Holmes' White. Yellow—Horace Martin, Carmelite, Carrie, Golden Queen of the Earlies. Pink—Dolly Reeves, Charles Jolly, Normandie, Mabel Roberts.

Secure plants in pots, harden off and plant outdoors from the middle to the end of April, according to the season. Plant out in an open, sunny spot in any good ground. Last season these and other varieties were in fine bloom at C. H. Totty's, Madison, N. J., until well into November. C. W.

MUMS FOR A BEGINNER.

Please give me the names of some varieties of chrysanthemums that a beginner can handle in a greenhouse. State how they should be handled, and when propagated and planted. G. R. S.

A few good commercial varieties for a beginner to handle are: Early—Glory of the Pacific and Pacific Supreme, pink; Chrysolora, yellow; Polly Rose and Ivory, white. Midseason—Major Bonnaffon, yellow, the best all-round sort in cultivation today, although an old variety; Dr. Enguehard, rose-pink; White Bonnaffon and Timothy Eaton, white. Late—Jeanne Nonin, white; Nagoya, yellow; Chadwick Supreme and Maud Dean, pink. Cuttings may be put in until the middle of May or even later, but to secure good flowers the planting should be completed by the middle or end of June. C. W.

LATE MUMS FOR POTS.

Please give me the names of two or three of the best varieties of chrysanthemums, white, pink and red, to grow as pot plants for late blooming. S. B.

In white you might try White Bonaffon, Mrs. Jerome Jones, White Helen Frick and December Gem; in pink, Wells' Late Pink and Helen Frick; in red, Harvard, Cullingfordii and Intensity. C. W.

MUM WILLIAM DUCKHAM.

Kindly advise me how to get the right bud on Chrysanthemum William Duckham. I have planted them two years, growing nice, healthy, single-stemmed stock, but the flowers come single and small and nothing like what I have seen, so it must be the bud. Any help will be thankfully received. E. H.

Select buds as near August 15 to 20 as you can and you should get flowers of the best quality. C. W.

BENCHING EARLY MUMS.

At what time should Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums be benched, in this Iowa climate, in order to have them at their best October 1? I have been having trouble with my mums growing too tall. What can I do to make them grow shorter? G. R.

Golden Glow and Smith's Advance should be benched not later than June 1 and they should be nice, stocky little plants at that time, in order to get them in flower October 1.

MILLANG TALKS ON TRAVELS.

Joseph A. Millang, manager of the New York Cut Flower Co., who is just home from a month's holiday in Europe, is convinced that "Little Old New York" is good enough for him and that the flower shops of London and Paris have nothing on those of Fifth avenue. "I did see one tastefully decorated flower shop on the Rue de la Paix," said Mr. Millang to The Review man, "which reminded me somewhat of McConnell's. In London the only place that impressed me particularly was the florist's shop in the Hotel Savoy. All the other flower shops that I saw were notably deficient in any attempt to make an artistic display. They could not compare at all with the florists' shops of any first-class American city. I was also disappointed in the flowers I saw in the shops, on the streets and in corsage bouquets at the theaters. I presume that the most artistic work in corsage bouquets is seen only at state dinners and such social functions, but those worn at the theater, the opera and in the fashionable restaurants in Paris and London did not compare either in number, richness or taste with what we see at Sherry's, Rector's and Delmonico's, or at the Metropolitan Opera House.

"In lilacs and bulbs the English beat us badly. These were a revelation to me, and I have spent all my life in the business in New York. I was disappointed, however, in the English roses; the only good roses I saw were some fine Richmonds. The Brunners offered for sale were poor. Indeed, the florists apologized for their roses, saying the season had been poor. I had no opportunity to inspect the greenhouses on the large private estates, where the best work is done, nor did I get down to Kew Gardens, but I did see some almonds blooming out of doors February 5. You see I was on a pleasure trip, and moreover I had an attack of double quinsy on my way over and the surgeon of the Majestic had to operate on my throat, so I was not in the best condition for sight-seeing.

"In Paris the flowers are peddled along the curb by old women; they do not solicit you to buy; and they are all old. In London also flowers are peddled on the streets, much as they are here, except that the peddlers are less offensive.

"I ran into a London particular fog which lasted four days. I had, of course, heard of and read of them, but nothing except an actual experience with one will give any idea of their dismal, depressing effect. London and Paris have their good points, but after all, as a place to live in, 'Little Old New York' is good enough for me."

Battle Creek, Mich.—Joseph Case, on North Jefferson avenue, has moved one door north, into the store formerly occupied by the H. A. Fisher Co. Mr. Case has thus secured more room than he formerly had, and the store has been handsomely remodeled for his use.

Mitchell, S. D.—Wm. Dethlefs, proprietor of the Davison County Greenhouses, reports a record shipment of cut flowers. It left February 1, to a customer in Baltimore, Md. February 9 Mr. Dethlefs received a letter of thanks for the fine condition of the stock when it arrived.

Ballston Spa, N. Y.—A. B. Reynolds comments on the fact that when he ordered some fungicide from one of the supply houses the other day it came with express charges of 45 cents, when on taking it to the local postoffice he found it would have cost by parcel post only 17 cents. He thinks the trade is not giving sufficient attention to the economy of the new method of shipping.

Carnations

A POOR CARNATION CROP.

Our carnations are not doing well and we shall be glad to have any suggestions you can offer as to the cause of the trouble. The plants look healthy and have a good green color, but are standing still or making only a little growth. Our soil was from a compost pile made in April, and containing one-third cow manure to two-thirds thick sod. It was turned twice and used in September, when it was well rotted. Was that compost too rich to use, without any additional loam? Our varieties are Enchantress, C. W. Ward, White Perfection and Harlowarden. The few flowers we have are of good size, with strong stems, except the flowers from White Perfection, which are poor and weak, with the buds coming deformed.

A green growth on the soil has been troublesome, but we have given, since September, two or three applications of lime and two or three applications of wood ashes. One application of wood ashes contained a mixture of bone meal, but as the roots have not half filled the benches they cannot need feeding, and we have given no liquid manure. We are running the houses cool, between 50 and 55 degrees, with fresh air every day. Our only insect pest has been red spider, and we are able to control it with force of water. During continuously cloudy days in the fall, when the spiders were more troublesome, we tried granulated sugar and arsenic, mixed with water to a syrup and diluted. It did not kill the red spiders and it badly burned the foliage, because arsenic does not combine chemically with sugar, and in the free state it is a dangerous remedy. How early could we put those carnation plants outdoors, in this New Jersey climate? We have plenty of ground and we use the benches for crops for Memorial day.

G. V. W.

Your letter discloses two bad features, but I am not prepared to say that they are altogether responsible for your troubles. Two-thirds sod and one-third cow manure is not a good proportion for mixing your compost. I would say one-fourth to one-fifth cow manure and the balance sod, cut four to five inches deep, would be better. The proportion you have would have a tendency to produce a rank, grassy growth. You have applied lime or wood ashes about six times since last fall. That is much more than is necessary, and the excess could not have a beneficial effect on the plants. I seldom find that more than three applications are required in the whole season.

As already stated, these factors may have aided in bringing on the condition in which you find your plants, but I doubt whether they are entirely responsible. It would not be practical to transplant these plants to the open ground. It would entail a lot of labor, and I doubt whether the returns would warrant the expense.

A. F. J. B.

RUINED BY SPIDER.

I am sending you some carnation plants. The variety is Enchantress. Kindly tell me the trouble. I am spraying for red spider, but my pressure is poor and my benches too wide, seven feet, so it is hard to fight any pests that may appear. Kindly advise me what to do.

F. H. D.

The specimens forwarded were literally covered with red spider and if all your plants are as badly infested as these there is nothing you can do but to throw them out. It is too late in the season to try to rid them of the pest and to get another crop of blooms from them.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATION RUST.

Enclosed you will find some carnation leaves which are spotted. This is my first year in growing carnations. They were doing well until a week ago.

They have bloomed well and the plants have looked fine. Can you tell me the cause, and what will stop it? I have used Grape Dust; is there anything better?

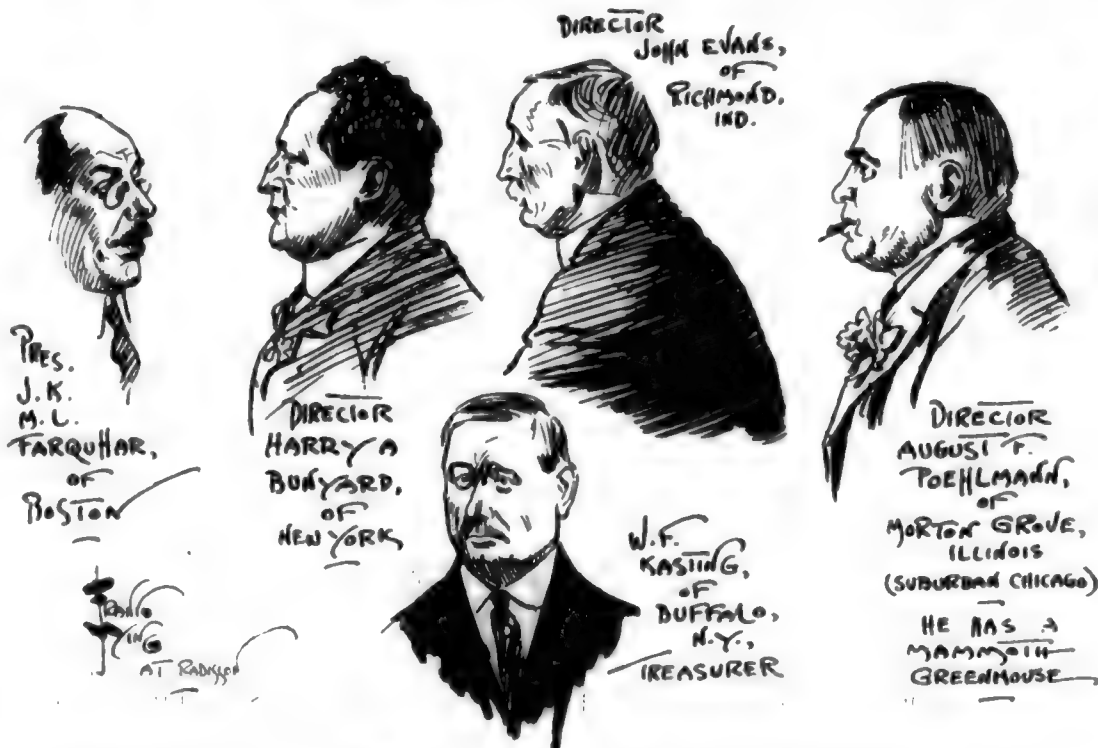

B. B. C.

The specimens forwarded were covered with the common carnation rust. The only way to rid your plants of it is to pick off the worst of it and then keep the plants dusted with Grape Dust or some such preparation. As the season advances and the sun increases in strength, it will give less trouble.

SOME MINNEAPOLIS SKETCHES.

When the S. A. F. executive committee met at Minneapolis a few days ago, the Minneapolis newspapers gave them considerable attention, the cartoonists finding an abundance of material. Reproduced herewith is one of the pencil sketches by the cartoonist of the Minneapolis Journal. The trade at large will enjoy it as much as did the gentlemen portrayed. There would be no trouble in recognizing Harry Bundy and John Evans without the inscriptions. President Farquhar also might be guessed at, but the best friends of August Poehlmann and W. F. Kasting will have difficulty in believing that they were the subjects of the sketches to which their names are affixed.

A fee of $2 will be charged for each entry made after that date. Staging of exhibits must be completed by 1 o'clock on the days specified for the various classes. Write for a schedule of premiums.

Class 53 has been added to Section C of the premium list, $10 in gold for six carnation plants in 8-inch pots, not over thirty inches high and shown without artificial supports, premium offered by Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.

The Hotel Manhattan, New York, has been selected as headquarters for the American Carnation Society. Engage your accommodations ahead, if you want to stop there. A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

HOOSIERS VISIT FORT WAYNE.

March 4 the writer journeyed, with several others, up to the metropolis of northern Indiana, where the Indiana State Florists' Association was the guest of W. J. & M. S. Vesey for the day. The Vesey establishment is well known throughout the central west for fine mums staged at all the principal exhibitions. This reputation for high quality stock drew a fairly large crowd, in spite of inclement weather. Those who braved the weather were well repaid for the trip.

The crowd was assembled at the Anthony hotel, where dinner was served. Here we were met by the genial Judge and his two sons, Wm. J., Jr., and Richard, who made everyone comfortable. Here also was held the meeting of the association.

The day's packing had just been finished when we reached the greenhouse, so we did not get to see a great deal of the cut stock, which is always interesting. The empty cooling room was accepted as good proof that the demand is good. A wide range of stock is being grown here, more so than seems to be the fashion on the large places these days. This is accounted for by the fact that many retailers are being supplied with practically all the stock needed.

The first houses entered were two, about 25x100, filled with orchids. Naturally the bulk of these are cattleyas of the several varieties. This is universally considered the commercial orchid, and no doubt it is, but what a welcome relief are the pretty dendrobiums, of which there were a few in bloom! Mr. Vesey pointed out some new growths coming on and they certainly have fine prospects ahead. This being a rather new department on the place, they are naturally enthusiastic over it.

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

PHILIP C. SCHUPP.

IT is an old saying that the man who rides a hobby is the worker who never feels a strain—the hobby affords the necessary relaxation from the cares of business. P. C. Schupp's hobby is Indian arrow heads. It is said his collection is one of the finest in America. Starting with the bits of flint picked up in the vicinity of his home, for the Budlong greenhouses in Chicago stand on what once was Indian camping grounds, he has added to his collection until it represents most of the important tribes of the middle west. Mr. Schupp is manager of the selling and financial end of the J. A. Budlong estate and this winter has had also much of the responsibility for the greenhouses, because of the ill health of A. H. Budlong, but a trip to the Indian mounds of Kentucky has put him into fine form for the heavy spring work.

From here we went into the rose section. Mostly the Killarneys are grown. Mr. Vesey is enthusiastic over My Maryland, which he says has paid them perhaps the biggest returns of any variety on the place. Several beds had plants which were in their fifth year and were coming on with a fine crop, after having had a short rest. Rhea Reid is another favorite here. This is one of the few places where this variety has succeeded under glass, but it has done well here from the first. Sunburst was being worked up into cuttings as fast as could be. It promises to be a great favorite here.

Mr. Vesey is a strong champion of Gloriosa and he thinks equally well of White Wonder. He has both in fine shape. Enchantress and White Enchantress are both grown extensively and well, but the first two will be given considerable space next year which now is occupied by the latter two. Rose-pink Enchantress will be dropped. In red, Victory and Delhi are grown. Victory will be dropped and St. Nicholas grown in its place. Delhi has given a large cut of blooms, but lacks in color. Rosette will be increased considerably next season.

A fine house of snapdragons will just about give a cut for Easter. Mr. Vesey grows these from seed annually, instead of propagating from cuttings, as most of us do. Except for the wide variation of colors, this seems to be a good way to handle them. Mr. Vesey says they sell, and that is all that is needed. A fine bed of smilax was seen. A large quantity of lilies is being brought on for Easter and they will make it just right. Gardenias are to be given a trial here next season. A nice batch of young plants, now in 3-inch pots, is coming on.

At the meeting there were a few vases of fine stock. W. W. Coles showed 100 extra fine blooms of White Wonder. Joseph Hill brought about the same number each of Benora and Commodore, also a fine bunch of their new rose, Mrs. George Shawyer. We saw this rose at Richmond last November, and commented favorably on it at that time, and I am glad to say that each time we see it, it gains in favor with us. It should make a place for itself among the pink forcing roses.

Five new members were taken in at the meeting and the membership list has grown far beyond any previous mark. These visits to points outside of Indianapolis are proving a great success in stimulating interest among the members, and certainly they are a great help in building up the membership. The next meeting will be held at Portland April 16. A. F. J. Baur.

A VINE-COVERED ARCHWAY.

The vine-covered archway here illustrated is one of the many features of interest in Bona Venture cemetery, at Savannah, Ga. The photograph was taken by H. J. Corfield, a landscape gardener who has a wide acquaintance in the trade.

Many florists will recognize the vine as Rhynchospermum jasminoides, though its strictly correct botanical name seems to be Trachelospermum jasminoides. In every-day English it is called the star jasmine, for it has star-shaped, five-lobed flowers, which are white and deliciously fragrant. It is also frequently referred to as the Malayan or African jasmine. Moreover, in the southern states, where it is a favorite best when supported on a large, strong trellis, not much less than ten feet in height. In favorable conditions it is a strikingly handsome vine, even when devoid of flowers, and in its blooming period it is often almost an unbroken mass of white. It commences to bloom in April and continues in flower till late in May. The blossoms are pendulous, about an inch across, and grow in clusters of five or six.

In the north it is popular as a specimen plant in greenhouses and conservatories, where it is commonly grown in large tubs in the form of dense bushes, attaining both a height and width of three or four feet. It requires several years, however, to develop specimens of that character. It is propagated by means of cuttings, preferably taken with a heel in the spring, from half-ripened wood. In order to obtain satisfactory results, it is necessary to give the young plants rather careful treatment, keeping them in a warm house and promoting a vigorous growth. When the plants are well established, however, they should be transferred to a cooler house, and during summer they may be plunged outdoors in partial shade. They should be watered freely in hot weather, but kept on the dry side during the winter.

THE DAHLIA, THE FLOWER.

[A paper by J. T. Fitchett, of Janesville, Wis., for presentation before the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, at Chicago, February 7, 1913.]

The dahlia is not only a flower, but the flower. No other flower can give such a wide range of form and color, or such a long season of bloom as the dahlia. In fact, some growers are be-with which it could be changed in form.

The show and fancy types were soon developed to a wonderful degree, and were the only forms known until comparatively recent years. Within the last two decades marvelous advancement has been made in producing new forms that are scarcely recognized as descended from the formal "daylies" of our grandmother's garden. Something over 6,000 varieties are now recognized by the various national societies, classified as follows:

The Types.

Cactus—Petals long, narrow, edge rolled back.

Decorative—Petals and flower flat, full to center.

Show and Fancy—Round, ball-shaped flowers, petals quilled; lines are not very definitely drawn between these two classes. They are the oldest form of dahlia.

Pompon—Miniature flowers, mostly of show and fancy type, although a few cactus varieties are now being introduced.

Peony-flowered—Large, loose flowers, two or three rows of petals, open center.

Single—Only one row, usually eight petals.

Collarette—Like single, with a collar of small petals at base of large ones, usually of a contrasting color.

Anemone—Two rows of flat petals surrounding the center of small tubular petals.

American growers have done their share in bringing out good varieties. Frank Smith, originated in Philadelphia over seventy-five years ago, is still the best selling fancy, while A. D. Livoni is the most popular florists' pink show. Ruth Forbes, pink, is described by the secretary of the German Dahlia Society as the first American cactus variety. Our president has to his credit a number of good varieties, among them Foster Barnes, a large white show. Thompson's Alexis, Jr., is a small counterpart of Grand Duke Alexis, with a good stem. Koerner's single white, Snow Storm, and rose pink collarette are both good.

Some Good Sorts.

Wonderful effects can now be produced for table decorations with the almost endless variety of colors in the cactus group. The more formal decorative and show varieties, such as Mrs. Roosevelt, Cuban Giant, Souvenir de Gustave Doazon, Le Colosse, Yellow Colosse, Dreer's White, W. W. Rawson, Jeanne Charmet and Delice are especially good for church decorations. Nothing could be better than Queen Wilhelmina, white peony-flowered, for a spray. Philadelphia, Bertha von Suttner, Lord Milner, Germania and Mrs. Seybold are all good. Geisha is perhaps the most striking flower of the group, with its long twisted petals of oriental red and yellow.

Culture.

Any soil that will grow corn will grow dahlias. Too rich ground means rank foliage and late flowers. Give plenty of sunlight, avoid shade and spraying the foliage with cold water. At planting time divide to one eye on a division and cover four or five inches deep. Constant cultivation will accomplish more than any amount of wateroutdoor plant, it is familiarly known as the Confederate jasmine.

It is a tender, evergreen plant, a native of the southern part of China. In this country, therefore, it is not suitable for outdoor cultivation except in the extreme south, where it flourishes gining to try winter growing for flowers as well as to propagate plants.

First mentioned by Francisco Hernandez in 1657 as a single flower growing in Mexico, it was later introduced into Europe under the name Dahlia variabilis, from the wonderful ease ing to keep the plants growing through dry weather.

When cutting the blooms, trim off surplus foliage and dip the base of the stem in boiling water for a half minute, then put in cold water for an hour or more. Treated in this way, you will not have trouble with flowers wilting when shipped.

The writer is not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but he ventures the assertion that the next ten years will mark a large increase in the use of the dahlia as a cut flower, and also the growing of a number of varieties under glass for winter use.

THE SMALL GROWER.

[An essay by H. Kleinstark, of Louisville, awarded third prize in a contest conducted by the Kentucky Society of Florists.]

As a member of your society and your craft, and doing business on a small scale—in plainer words, being a one-horse florist and grower—I am naturally confronted with the problem of making the most of it, without interfering or clashing with others in the same boat.

If we look back, say twenty years, we shall find that there is as much difference as night and day between the way business was done then and the way it is done today. Not only do we have to compete with enormous establishments, or factories of cut flowers and plants, which, at the demand for more and choicer stock, sprang up and are still springing up like mushrooms after a spring storm, but we have to take account of, and coax, the new and sometimes no better styles and fashions which make yesterday's stock a total loss on our hands today.

Difficult Competition.

It would be impossible for the small grower to compete successfully with the large one, on account of the latter's greater capital and smaller cost of producing and marketing his products. And that is not all, but here is the main drawback in a small place: While his big brother is contracting to deliver so many thousands of flowers a day, and will stand by his contracts even if he has to go into the open market some few times in the year and buy there himself, the small fellow is only cutting a few every day, and of course he cannot contract for even that small number; or, if he does, he will soon find that he has overreached himself, being unable, through several causes, to live up to his contract. If, in times of plenty, he totes his cut around to the several stores, the proprietors of these will either tell him they do not want the flowers, or will offer such a ridiculously low price for them that he feels discouraged indeed, and begins to cry "Murder!" and "Help!" saying the business is going to the bow-wows, and such things.

Time to Face About.

Now is the time, in the writer's opinion, to change front entirely, as soon as we find out that we are on the wrong track, and try it from a different standpoint. Most of the small growers have their greenhouses in the city's outskirts, and have, if they only knew it, a market right at their door without much trouble, which can be added to every year to the satisfaction of everybody.

Florists' Publishing Co.,

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders..	113.20
Net value of orders.....	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

Not only is there an increasing demand for cut flowers in every shape or form, but the plant business is endless, and nearly all through the year there are some kinds of plants that we can handle with both ease and profit. Several years ago, when I was visiting a brother florist, a lady customer came in and wanted a floral design made, but my neighbor told her he sold only at wholesale. Here is where he was, in my opinion, altogether wrong. In this manner he lost a trade which by this time would have made him independent of the stores and of his big brother with 100,000 or more feet of glass.

Some small growers tell me, "Oh, it is too much trouble to bother with these little orders, and then it is so much work to have so many different kinds of flowers and plants to grow." Of course it is trouble and worry, but it pays, and any trouble that pays ought to be good enough for everybody.

A Good Retail Trade.

Where a small grower now has only carnations or something else on his benches, and cannot make them pay after a certain time, let him have something that will pay him better, perhaps not the first year, but surely in a short while. Let the people once know you have something good for sale in your greenhouses, and they will flock to your place and buy it.

There is nothing that can compare, for the small grower, with a good retail trade. Once he has that, and attends to his business right, he can sleep without worrying about tomorrow. A great many people who live in the outskirts of our cities, being mostly of moderate means, are glad when they can call up a florist in their neighborhood and order cut flowers or designs or anything in the floral line, and know they will not have to pay quite such high prices as in the regular flower store, since by buying from the small grower they miss paying the profits of the middleman. In this way we would not hear so much about surplus flowers, but would let the wholesaler and store man fight this out between themselves.

Of course a great many more points could be brought out, but it will probably be better to bring these out in the general discussion, in which I hope all the members will join with great good will and with no hard feelings, and so increase the knowledge that is so necessary in our craft.

Elkhart, Ind.—W. H. Troyer has sold his greenhouses and store to Samuel Jones and C. H. Harrold, of Knightstown, Ind. Mrs. Lulu Kramer, store manager for Mr. Troyer, will be retained by the new owners. The store will be remodeled. Mr. Troyer will retire from active business life and will soon leave for a tour of the southern and western states, in company with Mrs. Troyer.

MR. VESEY ON

PUBLICITY

THE INDIANA VIEWPOINT.

[A talk by W. J. Vesey, Jr., before the Indiana State Florists' Association at Fort Wayne, March 4, 1913.]

The subject for the remarks I am going to make has been the absorbing topic among the allied trades for the last year, and no doubt most of those present have given a good deal of thought to this topic, namely publicity.

This association was organized for the same reason that other clubs and associations were organized, the advancement of the members' interests. We have secured advancement in that we know how to grow stock better, keep down disease, and many other things of note. But the times are changing, and so must we change. Millions of feet of new glass have been erected in the last year, which means a far greater supply of flowers than ever before. As yet nothing has been done toward creating a demand to consume the increased supply. Well, why not now?

I might say we are a fraternity, and a fraternity is only strong when its members pull together. We want to plan our business interests together, or, in other words, we want cooperation. We want to especially study what interests the public. The road to success lies in serving the public, and this can only be done by all taking a common interest in the forward movement.

The S. A. F. and Publicity.

This association cannot hope to accomplish all that we would wish. Our strongest hope lies with the national society. It is to the S. A. F. that we should lend our help and attention, as it is mainly through this body that we can hope to draw the attention of the public to our wares. Let us consider what the S. A. F. means to the average florist. It means a vacation, a picnic and a general good time. But those of you who have attended the last two conventions have found a different atmosphere prevalent. Questions of exceeding importance have come before the convention and been acted on. The florists who attend these present-day conventions are thinkers. They have come to realize that the business is not so easy as it used to be.

At the last convention, held in Chicago, a publicity committee was appointed. Through some mistake or oversight, this committee was given no power to act, inasmuch as there was no sum of money set aside for its use. I believe a fair sum will be forthcoming this year. The purpose of this committee was to get out such advertisements and reading matter as will attract public attention in the desired direction; to send copy to representative cities for all leading flower days, such as Christmas, Easter and Thanksgiving; to send copy which will eventually make national flower days of Lincoln's and McKinley's birthday, St.

Valentine's day and of Mothers' day.

There are unlimited possibilities for this committee. It could suggest to the political parties of this country that they should have a special flower emblem. Just stop and think what this one item would mean to our business. They could reach the women of this country through such mediums as House and Garden, Country Life, Ladies' Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion and numerous other magazines. They could teach the women how to care for plants in the house and garden, when to sow seeds, the varieties, how to water, and numerous other cultural details. Do you not think this would awaken a widespread interest in our trade?

Civic Improvement.

One of our big opportunities is the awakening of so many cities to civic improvement. This item alone is of prime importance to us in that it arouses public interest in the beautiful things we grow, which could probably be aroused in no other manner. Civic improvement I spell with four letters: H-o-p-e.

Another matter of recent date and of vast importance to us is the parcel post. The parcel post has opened unlimited territory for us to work in. Seedsmen can now quote prices in their catalogues on goods delivered to the door. This is an attractive issue to the average catalogue buyer. If the people learn to buy from the seedsmen through the parcel post, why not from the cut flower man?

You have all noticed the lack of attendance at flower shows. Why is this? You all know the answer. The shows have not been advertised in the manner and places that attract public attention. The public has not been made to realize what it has missed by passing by a flower show. We must surely realize that a flower show is one of our fortes. Why go to the trouble of getting up a flower show, with all of the provoking problems, and not properly advertise it? I attended the National Flower Show in Boston and from the size of the crowds each day anyone could tell that a great deal of thought and attention had been given to advertising. The building was exceedingly large, the crowds so large one could hardly force a way through. Did it pay? Well, rather!

The National Flower Show.

Gentlemen, a big opportunity is coming to bring the trade under public notice. That opportunity will be April 5 to 12, at New York. A wise selection was made when the National Flower Show committee was chosen. Every member is energetic and doing all in his power to make it a success. And I think it will be. It has been largely advertised all through the east. The entries are large, but they should be larger, and would be if the florists realized what an excellent chance they have to impress the public. All of you gentlemen should attend the show if it is possible to do so, for you will receive value for value.

A small way to advertise is overlooked by nearly every florist; namely, a buttonhole bouquet. Perhaps you do not realize the value of this small item. How easy it is to stop at the refrigerator and select a nice carnation or rose and put it in the buttonhole before going downtown! We all do it at a florists' gathering, but why not at home? I am like the rest of you; I hate to wear a flower, simply because no one else does. Nevertheless we are overlooking one item of advertising. I think I'll advertise from now on.

Showing the Way.

A florists' paper has taken up the matter of publicity in this way: In a January issue it went to a great deal of trouble and expense to show the trade how to advertise properly for St. Valentine's day. It went still farther and printed numerous photographs regarding new modes in the arrangement of boxes and decorations for St. Valentine's day. That issue no doubt helped a great many florists along this particular line. It is a good start in the right direction and I hope they keep it up.

The New York Florists' Club has taken up the question of publicity and from all reports the proposition seems to be moving along nicely. That is what all the florists' clubs in the country should do. And this will be the final outcome, as the florists are awakening to the fact that something should be done toward creating a demand.

Covington, Ky.—W. R. Miller's Sons, who have a range of seventeen greenhouses at Oakland and Wallace avenues, have opened a retail store at Eighth street and Madison avenue, one of the best locations in town. It is a tasteful, attractive store and the public is showing appreciation of it.

PLANTING GLADIOLI.

Will you please answer the following questions in regard to the culture of gladioli here, in northwestern Ohio? What is the difference between soft and hard-shell bulblets? Will bulblets from planting stock do as well as those from blooming bulbs? I have been told that fresh stable manure should never be used on land intended to be planted to gladioli. Part of the land on which I will plant mine for the coming season was manured last season; the other part has not been manured for several years and is not as rich as it should be. How would you manage so as to get good results? Would you use commercial fertilizer? If so, how much and what kind? What effect does fresh manure have on them? My soil is yellow sand and rather light. If I plant America, Mrs. Francis King and other varieties side by side in rows, will they run out, or should each be planted separately? I shall appreciate an answer to these questions through The Review.

F. J. K.

So-called soft-shell gladiolus bulblets are not really bulblets, but small bulbs of one year's growth from bulblets. Bulblets from planting stock will grow the same as from blooming bulbs.

Fresh stable manure spread on ground in winter or early spring is not harmful. It would be fully as good as most commercial fertilizers, if not better. Fresh manure in contact with the bulbs, however, is too heating.

Different varieties of gladioli will not "run out" or get mixed when planted closely, if carefully labeled, but it would be better to have them in separate rows.

The Market.

The exceedingly cold weather of the last week—the thermometer registering 10 degrees, with a gale from the northwest—has burned up coal and had a depressing effect on the demand, thus affecting the growers unfavorably, both in cost of production and in diminution of sales. Violets in particular, being distinctly a corsage flower, have been dull and hard to dispose of. Quotations range as low as 10 cents, although for choice single violets as much as 40 cents has been paid. But there are not many of the 40-cent kind. The dullness in Cattleya Schröderæ, which is almost a drug on the market, is probably attributable partly to the same cause. Schröderæ is quoted at 10 cents to 20 cents, but an offer to take a quantity at a shade under the market would find acceptance. C. Trianae is in better shape, bringing 25 cents to 40 cents. Fancy varieties of orchids, when offered, bring good prices, one small consignment of gigas selling last week at $1 each.

Beauties are in better supply and the advance noted last week has given way all along the line. The general range may be quoted at 30 cents to 60 cents for specials, 25 cents to 30 cents for fancies, 10 cents to 25 cents for extras, 8 cents to 12 cents for No. 1 and 1 cent to 5 cents for No. 2. Some sales of specially fine long-stemmed Beauties have been made above these figures, but they are the exception. Bride and Maid sell at 1 cent to 5 cents, with few sales at the higher figure. Killarneys are in plentiful supply, some selling below and a few choice blossoms selling above the quotations of 2 cents to 6 cents. Sunburst has declined to 2 cents to 10 cents, owing to oversupply. Other teas remain unchanged at 3 cents to 10 cents. Carnations of the lower grades are plentiful and cheap. The choice flowers, which are scarce, bring as much as 3 cents, but the general range of values is from 1 cent to 2 cents. Easter lilies are coming in freely and have declined to 6 cents and 8 cents. Valley has been dull ever since December 27. The short-stemmed flowers go begging at $1 per hundred, while as much as $4 is paid for exceptionally fine stock. Gardenias are quiet. A quotation of 50 cents to $2 per dozen covers the run of the market, but there have been sales both above and below these figures, on the one hand for imperfect flowers and on the other for extra choice stock. Sweet peas have as wide a range in quotations, 10 cents to $1 per dozen bunches, as they have in quality. Some that have been sent in this week are dear at the inside price. Narcissi, both Paper White and poeticus, are plentiful and cheap, bringing from 75 cents to $2 per hundred. Daisies are irregular in demand, bringing from 35 cents to $1 per hundred. Callas sell at from 60 cents to $1.25 per dozen, with occasional sales of large flowers at $1.50. A fairly good demand is reported for the better grades. Few hyacinths are offered, but in the absence of demand the previous quotations of $1 to $1.50 per hundred stand unchanged. Lilacs have been dull here, partly because of lack of demand and partly because of rather heavy arrivals from Philadelphia. Several years have elapsed since local growers have had to compete with Philadelphia. While quotations are 35 cents to $1 per bunch, choice bunches have sold a little higher. Daffodils are unchanged at 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Southern daffodils have come in during the week and have sold as low as 3 cents per bunch and as high as 8 cents. Tulips are unchanged at $1 to $3.00 per hundred. Freesias are not so plentiful, but lack of demand prevents any marked change in quotations of 10 cents to 20 cents for average quality. Acacia is scarce and high, the supplies being concentrated. Asparagus and smilax are both in good demand at fair prices.

Club's Annual Dinner.

The twenty-sixth annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the belvedere, on the roof of the Hotel Astor, April 10. Visitors from distant points who belong to organizations participating in the International Flower Show will be entertained as guests of the club. Subscriptions from members of the club will be accepted at $4 a plate. Each table will provide ten seats and subscribers are urged to send in subscriptions early, giving the names of those with whom they wish to be seated. Tables will be assigned in the order in which subscriptions are received. The dinner committee is composed of John B. Nugent, Jr., Robert Koehne, Joseph S. Fenrich, Thomas Boothe de Forest, Walter F. Sheridan and Alexander M. McConnell. Subscriptions accompanied by checks should be sent to the secretary of the dinner committee, Joseph S. Fenrich, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

The belvedere, where the dinner is to be held, is the most appropriate place in New York for a florists' dinner. It embraces the western half of the top of the Hotel Astor, which is covered by an arched iron frame filled with glass, constituting practically an enormous greenhouse. The greenhouse effect is further carried out by a tasteful arrangement of growing plants high up in the lofty arches which enclose the room.

Various Notes.

John Young reports many orders for trade tickets to the International Flower Show. These tickets, good for any day of the show, are sold to the trade at 25 cents each and where 100 are bought the name of the buyer will be printed on the ticket free of cost.

William Elliott & Sons put their opening sale forward a week, so that it occurred March 11, instead of St. Patrick's day, as they had originally intended.

Morris De Leeuw has opened a store at 1902 Seventh avenue, near One Hundred and Fifteenth street.

March 15 the regular monthly exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held at the American Museum of Natural History. The only class open to non-commercial growers is one in which a silver medal is offered for the best new rose not yet in commerce. At 4 p. m. Edwin Jenkins will lecture on "Roses, Outside and Under Glass."

Among the visitors in town last week were: Barney Myers, of Buffalo; Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia; Patrick Welch and Henry M. Robinson, of Boston; E. W. McLellan, of San Francisco; James Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa., and Emil Bollinger, of South Bethlehem, Pa.

John Young, the veteran secretary, says he not only got the double cross but got it in the neck. The surgeons at Roosevelt hospital did it with their sharp little knives in removing a deep-seated and obstreperous carbuncle. He is back in his den on Twenty-eighth street and at work, but will not be out on the street for a week or more, although he was at the March meeting of the Florists' Club.

Barney Myers, superintendent for W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo, spent several days in New York, returning home March 8. Mr. Myers is firm in his allegiance to Beacon and Comfort carnations, although he admits that the perfect red carnation is yet to be generally grown. The Red Lawson, which created such a flutter some years ago, was a product of the Palmer greenhouses and they did well with it for some time.

William Trumpore, of J. H. Small & Sons, still is at the French hospital, although it is expected that he will be able to return to his home within a week or so.

E. W. McLellan, of San Francisco, who is making a tour of the eastern flower markets, wired his people to send a trial shipment of Mignon roses to New York. They were shipped March 1 and arrived March 7 in remarkably good shape. Mr. McLellan has 200,000 plants and thinks it possible that if the shipping arrangements are carefully looked after he may be able to place California roses on the New York market in salable shape. He will continue his experiments until the question of the feasibility of his plan is decided by experience one way or the other.

A party of members of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association made a tour of inspection through some of the leading greenhouses in and around Brooklyn February 26 and found the stock generally well grown and in good condition for the Easter trade. Twelve members started from the Atlantic avenue terminus of the subway at 9 a. m., but the number grew to twenty-one before the tour was brought to a close by darkness, at Whitestone. The party included A. L. Miller, A. Zeller, George Scott, Harry Fraser, Carl A. Woerner, J. H. Sperry, Louis Schmutz, Jr., and John Appel, of Brooklyn; Anton Schultheis, of College Point, N. Y.; Louis and Edie Dupuy, of Middle Village, N. Y.; Rudolph Roehrs and Julius Roehrs, Jr., of Rutherford, N. J.; Hermann Steinhoff, Henry Baumann and Charles Engel, of West Hoboken, N. J.; Herman Schoelzel and August Menne, of New Durham, N. J.; J. H. Fiesser, of North Bergen, N. J.; Albert Winnefeld, of Hackensack, N. J. The plants of the following growers were visited: Charles Zeller & Sons, Louis Schmutz, Carl A. Woerner, Louis Schmutz, Jr., Peter Wagner, the John Scott estate, A. L. Miller, Fred Marquardt, John Boettjer, John Miesem, Anton Schultheis, Louis Dupuy, William Pankok, the Hinode Florist Co., and Gerald Dreyer.

Herman Warendorff, in the Ansonia, on Broadway, is making a specialty of bulbous stock, lilies and flats trimmed with French crepe paper for Easter. His advance orders indicate a satisfactory season.

Alfred Donaldson, with J. K. Allen, is receiving the congratulations of his friends, having recently become a benedict.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, was a recent visitor in the trade.

The marriage of Arthur Clarke, son of Marshall Clarke, and Miss Frances Loud has just been announced, although the wedding took place about a year ago.

P. M. McGovern, Ninth avenue and Nineteenth street, Brooklyn, has a house filled with geraniums in bloom which were grown to order for St. Bartholomew's Parish house, East Forty-second street, New York. These are to be distributed by the Parish house among the children of the parish the day before Easter. Several thousands of blooming plants are required. This offers an excellent suggestion for working up a special demand.

The city authorities have issued an order for the clearing of the sidewalks on West Twenty-eighth street from Broadway to a point 100 feet west of Sixth avenue. C. A. M.

OBITUARY.

Nathan D. Pierce.

Nathan D. Pierce, one of the leading florists and nurserymen of Rhode Island, a former member of the general assembly and one of Warwick's most prominent citizens, died at his home in Norwood March 7. Death was due to pulmonary tuberculosis, from which he had been a sufferer for over a year.

Nathan Dexter Pierce was born in Providence February 2, 1850, and received his education in the public schools. In April, 1862, he went to Norwood to live with his parents, his father having purchased a farm there. When a young man he became actively interested in politics, being a staunch Republican. He was elected a member of the Warwick town council in 1885, serving as a member of that body for three years. In 1888 he was elected a member of the house of representatives and was reelected for six successive terms prior to 1895. For several years after his successor was elected, Mr. Pierce served as clerk of the corporation committee of the house.

At the age of 22, Mr. Pierce began his career as a nurseryman, starting on a small lot set aside for him by his father. For years he was one of the most prominent members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and the Rhode Island Horticultural Society. He was a member of the first board of managers of the State Agricultural School, now the Rhode Island State College.

Mr. Pierce was twice married. He was first wed in 1872 to Miss Ida M. Congdon, of Riverpoint, who died in 1892. Of this union a son was born. His second marriage was to Miss Ida H. Sayles, of Providence, who, with two daughters, survives him.

Jos. A. Bolgiano.

Joseph Ault Bolgiano, for many years head of the seed firm of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., died March 1 at the home of his son-in-law, Dr. J. Burch Joyce, in Baltimore, at the age of 77 years. He had been in failing health for a long time, due to a complication of diseases, but his condition was not supposed to be serious until a few hours before his death. He was born in Baltimore, December 6, 1835. Having finished his education in the public schools of Baltimore, he entered the seed establishment founded by his father. A few years later he was taken into the firm. At an early age he married Miss Mary Elizabeth Walton, who died in 1893. He retired about fifteen years ago, turning his business over to two sons, who now conduct it. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Flora Joyce, and five sons, John, Frank W., Dr. Walton, Roland and Charles J. Bolgiano. A sister, Mrs. Charles J. Taylor, also survives.

Mr. Bolgiano was a director of several large financial institutions, the second president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Baltimore and one of the most prominent Methodists in the south.

Henry Augustine.

Capt. Henry Augustine, nationally known as a veteran nurseryman, of Normal, Ill., was instantly killed March 8 by being struck by the south bound Alton Limited as it passed the Normal depot platform.

Henry Augustine was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, July 25, 1840. The family removed later to Canton, Ill., when Henry Augustine was 17 years old. He was engaged in farming there when the Civil war broke out, and enlisted in Company A, Fifty-fifth Illinois, as sergeant. On August 1, 1862, he was commissioned second lieutenant and was later promoted to the first lieutenantancy and in 1864 was made captain of Company A. He later returned to his home and recruited a new company, I, of the Fifty-first regiment, which he commanded as captain. In this capacity he served until November, 1865, when he was honorably discharged.

At the close of the Civil war, Capt. Augustine engaged in the drug business, but owing to failing health he gave up his store and embarked in the nursery and farming business near Pontiac. In 1876 he removed to Normal and established the nursery business which has since continued under his name. It was one of the earliest nurseries in that part of the country, and became widely known throughout the west. Two of the best known of the varieties which he introduced are the Sudduth pear and the Snyder blackberry. His ability and prominence as a fruit grower were recognized at the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893 by his being made superintendent of the Illinois fruit exhibit. He was president of the American Association of Nurserymen in 1892.

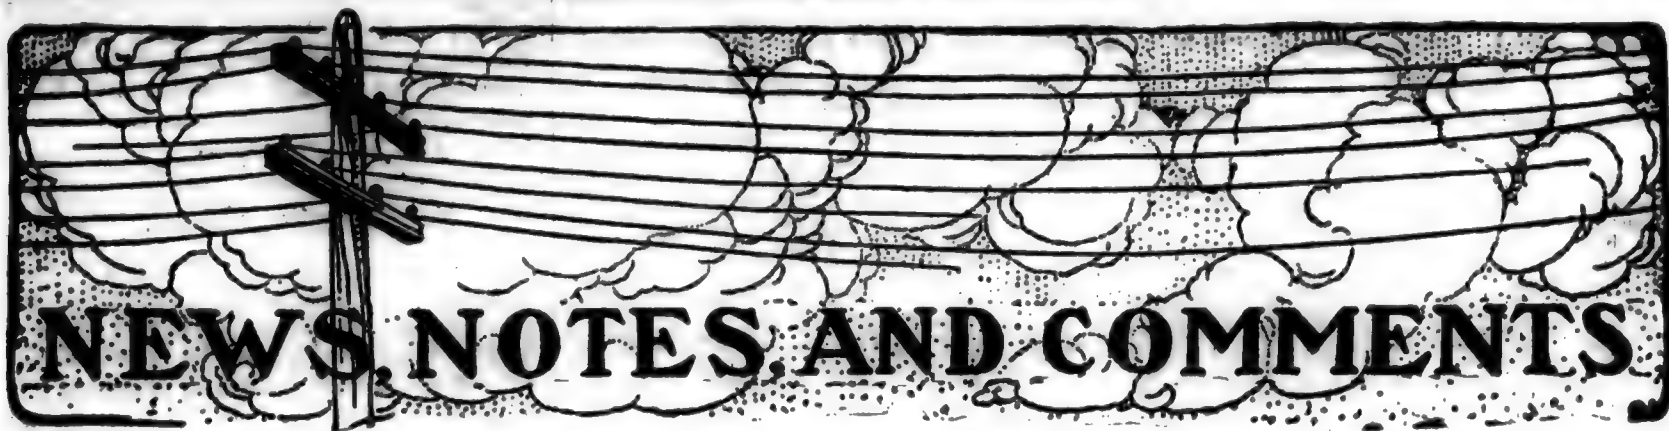

Capt. Augustine was married to Miss Margaret E. Gopen March 17, 1869. There is one son, Archie M. Augustine, who has for some years been associated with his father in the nursery business. Capt. and Mrs. Augustine also adopted a daughter, Ora, who became the wife of Judge Wesley M. Owen, formerly in the supreme court in the Panama Canal Zone.

The funeral was held at Grace church, Bloomington, Tuesday, March 11, and was largely attended.

John A. Payne.

John A. Payne, who represented the Foley Mfg. Co., of Chicago, and the Simonds Heating & Specialty Co., of Grand Rapids, in New York, died of heart failure, Monday, March 3, at his residence in that city. Mr. Payne left a widow, a son and daughters. The funeral took place Thursday, March 6.

Nowata, Okla.—Cass Lanning, proprietor of Lanning's Seed House, says he is giving the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, an order for a greenhouse, believing that he can run a florists' business in connection with the seed business and make it all go nicely together.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Southington, Conn.—Only one of the florists in the town, Olson & Lunden, filed a return with the assessors last fall and now the others find themselves rated far too high, at $14 per square foot, under an old law from which they have as yet found no appeal.

Davenport, Ia.—The Davis Floral Co., which is a separate corporation from the J. W. Davis Co., but allied with it, is building a range of four Lord & Burnham houses each 40x300, to be devoted to cut flowers and pot plants. The location is just across the street from the big J. W. Davis plant, where cucumbers and tomatoes are the principal crops.

Alvin, Tex.—A new firm has been organized here, under the name of the Alvin Jasmine & Floral Co. The proprietors are W. L. Heller, of this place, and S. Lomanitz, of Mexico City. The business will be under the direct charge of Mr. Heller, who in 1910 was manager and junior member of Stevens & Heller, in this town. Mr. Heller says his firm probably has the largest one-block jasmine farm in the country, and the bushes are all young, vigorous and thrifty. From present indications, he says, the crop will be heavy and will perhaps be from eight to twelve days early.

Indiana, Pa.—Last fall the Indiana Floral Co., as reported in The Review at the time, purchased eight acres of ground extending alongside the tracks of the street railway, and proceeded to erect a range of greenhouses there, for the growing of both flowers and vegetables. Two of the greenhouses, each 34x150, have been completed and stocked. A third greenhouse, to be erected in the near future, will be used for roses. The greater part of the land will be devoted to truck gardening, but the space between the greenhouses and the tracks will be beautifully laid out in lawns and flower beds. The firm is also planning to install a Skinner irrigation system.

Wyomissing, Pa.—Ferdinand E. Heck, who for thirty-two years was head gardener for George F. Baer, of the Reading Railway Co., recently resigned that position and is now building a residence near the wholesale flower establishment conducted by his sons, Harry F. and Ferdinand Heck, in this town. He expects later to be associated in business with his sons. Mr. Heck is a native of Germany, but left that country thirty-two years ago and came directly to Reading, where he did some notably fine landscape work on the grounds surrounding Mr. Baer's home. He is one of the best chrysanthemum growers in this part of the state and is the possessor of several silver cups and other awards won at flower shows. He is 65 years of age.

Albert Lea, Minn.—P. Clausen & Son, of the Lake Shore Greenhouses, recently installed a new electric watering system.

Olean, N. Y.—Elmer Rawlings has just completed three new greenhouses. He estimates that in less than two months of the present year he has already done more business than in the last half of 1912, though last year's trade was anything but dull.

Millersville, Pa.—Jacob M. Hostetter has erected a greenhouse here and stocked it with lettuce. The house is of first-class construction, with concrete walls. The heating system, which is said to be somewhat unique in arrangement, was installed according to Mr. Hostetter's own plans and is giving excellent service.

Maspeth, N. Y.—John Schmieg, recently in the florists' business on Juniper avenue, announces that he is no longer in the trade.

East Bridgewater, Mass.—J. K. Alexander recently has built a large storage house for dahlias, of which he claims to be the largest grower in the world. It has 4,680 square feet of floor space and 11,700 cubic feet of storage room.

Princeton, Ill.—George H. Jennings, foreman, says the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co. is preparing to add two new houses, one 9x53 and the other 8x40. These are for pot plants, but will be used for propagating next year. For next season the rose stock is to be increased 4,000 plants, the varieties being Sunburst, Milady, Killarney Queen and American Beauty.

La Porte, Ind.—The Kaber Co. has opened its new downtown flower store, at 808 Jefferson avenue. The room is exquisitely furnished and is decorated in white and gold. The refrigerator is especially attractive and holds ten tons of ice. The counters are all marble-topped. In the rear of the store is a balcony, which is partly occupied by a well arranged workroom. It is the intention of the firm to discontinue all sales at the greenhouses on Fox street.

Rochester, Ind.—A recent fire in the boiler shed of the Dunn greenhouses, conducted under lease by J. H. Shelton, caused a loss of from $200 to $300 to Mrs. Dunn, the owner of the houses, and a loss of $500 or $600 to Mr. Shelton. For some years Mr. Shelton has made the annual announcement, in the newspapers and otherwise, that he would give a bouquet to each person in the city whose birthday was on the same date as his own, February 14. This plan has not only aided directly in giving publicity to his business, but has also fostered in the public mind the idea of purchasing flowers as birthday gifts and there is a noticeable increase in the sales for this purpose.

Camden, N. Y.—The greenhouse business which Harvey B. Snow established and has conducted for many years has been sold by him to Messrs. Carl W. and Ernest D. Brown. The Brown brothers have purchased the greenhouses and business, Mr. Snow retaining his seed business, to which he will now give his entire attention. Carl Brown has had experience as a landscape gardener in New Hampshire, as foreman of a greenhouse in Augusta, Me., and as foreman of greenhouses in Houston, Texas, and several other western cities. Ernest Brown has been a student in the Agricultural College at Durham, N. H., studied horticulture and floriculture at Cornell University and has been employed as superintendent of a large estate at Wyoming, N. Y.

Whitman, Mass.—W. B. Brown, who combines landscape gardening and the nursery business with the florists' trade, says the outlook for spring is excellent. He has the contract for tree planting at Kenberma park, Nantasket Beach, as well as a number of nice orders for public and private work at Fall River, Brockton, Rockland and other places.

Cleveland, O.—Peter Nichols, the Superior Arcade florist, who was forced into service in the Greek army in the Balkan war while he was visiting his former home five months ago, has written to a friend here, enclosing a photograph of himself as he appears in his Greek uniform, and stating that he is looking forward anxiously to the time when he may be free to return to this city. His wife and son, who accompanied him on the pleasure trip to Athens, are living in their old home there.

The Review brings results.

DON'T think that a willingness to make allowances on complaints of customers is an evidence of fair dealing; quite the contrary, it is proof that there is something wrong with the methods that permit the necessity for adjustments.

BECAUSE the paper is sent only to paid in advance subscribers, The Review sends no subscription receipts. If the paper comes, the dollar has been received safely; if the paper does not come, the remittance has not arrived.

Two well known British florists who will attend the National Flower Show are W. Wells, the chrysanthemumist who was over a couple of years ago, and R.
F. Felton, the London retailer. They sail together on the Mauretania March 22.

THERE are becoming so many quarantine regulations affecting the interstate shipment of plants and other trade commodities that no man can be sure he has observed the details of the latest edicts.
Thus far the most serious burden is on the nurserymen, but florists are beginning to be affected and, apparently, conditions are likely to grow worse instead of better.

THE other day an advertiser spoke of The Review as a "western paper." The Review has more subscribers in New York than in any other state; Pennsylvania is second, but New England, with less area than either, receives more Reviews than go to any one state anywhere in the Union. Those who wish to be accurate in their speech will refer to The Review as "the national trade paper."

STEADILY if slowly the trade is getting away from the old ideas of credits and collections. The argument that this trade is different from other trades and calls for different methods than are applied to credits and collections in other lines is no doubt true, but the differences are in the direction of conservatism rather than laxity. If you don't get the money why part with your merchandise?

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

SOME PAPER.

The white paper consumed in printing this issue of The Review weighed 12,660 pounds, or considerably more than six tons. Were the pages in a single copy laid end to end it would make a strip 164 feet long, and the entire edition so placed would carpet a path for 343 miles. And the number of copies printed this week is only the regular edition.

BIG CLASSIFIED GAIN.

Last week's issue of The Review carried nearly a page more Classified Plant Ads than appeared in the heaviest issue last season—nearly two pages more than were in the issue of the corresponding date, for the peak never comes until about May 1.

The explanation for the strong increase in the Classified Plant Ads is the excellent returns the advertisers have had—the character of the classified advertisements is such that it is impossible to do much direct solicitation—all The Review can do is to await the word of the man with the surplus stock: first he says "Insert," and shortly he says "Cut it out, the stock is sold." This way:

Please change our fern ad as enclosed; we have closed out about 100,000 through your classified ads.—Newell & Ustler, Apopka, Fla., February 27, 1913.

The Great Central Market.

Within the last week the market has strengthened in some particulars and weakened in others. Business is steadily increasing. The supply as a whole also is larger than it has been in the last few weeks and conditions generally are about as usually is the case in the penultimate week of Lent.

Beauties of strictly first-class quality continue scarce and there now is little hope of heavy cuts for Easter. There are moderate quantities of imperfect Beauties, and they are selling at excellent prices, considering quality, because there is nothing better to be had.
Rose crops increased last week to the point where the retailers began special sales, the first time roses have been so offered since the Christmas crop went off. This week the supply is still further augmented, as most of the growers appear to be coming into first-class crop for Easter. The quality of the roses is excellent. All grades are abundant and excellent values are offered. Of course, the bulk of the supply is Killarney and White Killarney, with moderate quantities of Richmond.
Mrs. Ward is in good crop with those who have planted it. Lesser quantities of Rhea Reid, Radiance, Sunburst, Bul-garie and Maryland are offered. Killarney Queen is fine.

Carnations are slightly less plentiful than they have been and the market has firmed on these. The fact that St.
Patrick's day falls so close to Easter is making some difference in the situation on white. There are those who say carnations are going off crop and will not be plentiful for Easter, but others aver that not in recent years has there been any scarcity of carnations in the spring.

Easter lilies are coming in heavily. Evidently some of the growers are not late. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the probable supply for Easter. Each of the growers understands that his neighbors will be late, but says his own lilies will be ready, in spite of the early date of Easter. The wholesalers are booking Easter orders at the usual prices.

The more moderate weather conditions do not appear to have helped the violet situation; average prices obtained last week usually were the lowest of the year to date, even worse than the prices of the week before. Sweet peas, on the other hand, seem to be doing better than they did a fortnight ago. There is great variation in the quality of the peas. Some are extremely good, while others are extremely short. The top grades seem to be not realizing their special value with any degree of ease; it is the medium stock that sells best. Cattleyas are equal to all demands.

Valley dragged last week, and doubtless will do so until the weddings commence. Romans and freesia are about done, and not many Paper Whites are seen. Fewer jonquils and daffodils come in and the market is not overburdened with tulips, although there are enough. Southern outdoor bulbous stock is not yet cutting much figure.

The green goods situation remains unchanged.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held March 6 at the Union restaurant, with a good attendance on hand when President French took the chair. Various business matters were taken care of and a warm debate was opened when the selection of the official route to the Minneapolis S. A. F. convention was brought up. Owing to the fact that the transportation committee was not on hand to make a report, no action was taken, although George Asmus asked that the selection be made between the two best roads, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Northwestern. He explained that many eastern delegations will arrive in Chicago with the expectation of taking the same route as the Chicago club and said it is to the interest of the local organization that one of the two standard roads be the selection of the club. He strongly opposed the Great Western line as the official route. All the roads offer special trains if seventy-five passengers can be guaranteed. The matter was left open until the next meeting, in order to give the transportation committee an opportunity to report its finding, when a vote will be taken to decide the popular choice.

Two new members were elected, Geo. Ball, Glen Ellyn, and John Tiplady, of Lake Forest. Andrew McAdams, the south side retailer who recently retired from business, was elected to honorary membership, while the resignations of Andrew Robertson and A. G. Nealy were accepted. George Asmus also spoke on the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and pointed out that the public has not yet been educated to the idea of sending flowers to friends in distant cities, adding that it is time for retailers to take steps to work out the possibilities in this line. More data concerning the experience of other florists will be submitted at the next session. Vaughan's Seed Store exhibited the Erna Teschendorff rose and a red canna, No. 15.

Various Notes.

LILIES FOR EASTER

THE BEST---THE BEST

NOW READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDER

Randall's Easter crop of Lilies is famous—everybody who ever has tried them knows that there never are any finer and seldom any as good. For years and years Randall's Lilies have been the standard by which all other Lilies have been judged. Some years one grower and some years another will claim to have Lilies "as good as Randall's," but Randall's Lilies always have been acknowledged as the leader. These are true Giganteums—the best bulbs money would buy, forced by the best grower we know. Naturally, we have the best flowers. Easter is unusually early this year, and it is all the more important to place your order with the most dependable source of supply—there will be a great many over-forced Lilies on the market, stock that won't stand shipping. Our Lilies will be just right. They will be packed at the greenhouses in wooden boxes of 100 flowers each. Order as many as you need—Easter is only ten days away.

hour talk to florists gladly accepted. The attendance of wholesalers and retailers numbered about sixty, and Mr. Tholls held their close attention for over an hour. He used a stereopticon and gave his audience many new ideas of how business and selling may be made more certain in its results.

In the Record-Herald of March 5 there was a strong letter against the congressional free seeds by Guy W. French, president of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Harry Garland, manager of the Geo. M. Garland Co., was at Barberton, O.; this week on business.

Otto Benthey is now in charge of the George Reinberg ranges as foreman in place of J. E. Simpson, who has had that position for the last two years. The latter intends to go into the growing end for himself in the near future. Mr. Benthey is a brother of F. F. Benthey, of Kyle & Foerster.

Peter Reinberg was taken home Saturday, March 8, after his fortnight's sojourn in the hospital. He is progressing finely.

A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., has heard from H. E. Philpott, who is in England. His address is Saracen's hotel, Ashford, Kent.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., years ago was heavily interested in South Water street and now keeps in touch with affairs there. Last week he turned nine cars of grape fruit within a couple of days at a handsome profit.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has taken possession of the fourth floor of the building at 72 and 74 East Randolph street for its supplies department.

A burglar entered the store of Kennicott Bros. Co. the morning of March 6, but found only $5.38 in the cash drawer, the safe being impregnable.

At Winterson's Seed Store it is reported that a large number of orders, especially for perennials, are on file waiting the arrival of the planting season.

N. J. Wieter says that although Victory now is in excellent shape, his preference still is for Bonfire. He notes the spreading popularity of the variety in a wide demand for the cuttings.

C. W. McKellar received the first of his Easter supply of pot plants March 10.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. will not add any new glass this season, but will do considerable work in the way of putting the buildings into the best possible shape.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the establishment never has been so busy as now. W. W. Randall is on the Pacific coast, making his second trip there within a year.

J. H. McNeilly and W. H. Hilton, when met March 10 in the store of Poehlmann Bros. Co., were exchanging experiences. Both combine flowers and candy. One was first a confectioner, the other first a florist. Mr. Hilton insists that it was he who started McNeilly as a florist, and Mr. McNeilly avers that Hilton took up candy because he saw how well it worked with his neighbor.

Bassett & Washburn say that shipping business for the last two weeks has been unusually heavy. C. L. Washburn asserts it is almost impossible to get Beauties good enough to fill orders. So scarce have they been that St. Louis retailers even resorted to long distance telephones in an effort to obtain a few.

The newest of local retail stores is the Williams Flower Shop, at 102 South Wabash avenue, which was formally opened for business March 8, with Fred Strail as manager. Although located downstairs, the entrance to the shop is so arranged that it can give good display from the street and its interior decorations are excellent, including a well designed refrigerator. The woodwork is of stained oak, with furnishings to match.

George Economopolos reports that the retail trade at the store of the Alpha Floral Co. has improved during the last ten days, with bouquets having a big run. Bulbous stock in pans has likewise found a good sale.

Gardenias, according to John Kruchten, are in better supply than they have been, and he hopes for even larger cuts for Easter.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, is of the opinion that there will be no more than enough lilies to go around and the long ones will be hard to furnish if the orders continue to come in as strong as in the last few days.

William Homberg, shipping manager for J. A. Budlong, says white carnations are becoming less plentiful and, while there are enough to fill orders, he looks for not only the white but all others to go off crop after the big Easter cuts.

Canger & Bergman had an attractive window display this week, of metrosideros, Japanese maples and baskets of English wallflowers. The latter and some branches of forsythia, used in the interior decorations of the Michigan avenue store, drew the attention of all who passed.

Henry Wittbold's forces have had a busy time of it for the last ten days, taking care of spring opening decorations for Marshall Field & Co., Mandel Bros., C. A. Stevens & Bros. and a number of other State street stores. After completing these, the force started taking down the decorations installed for the Clay Products show.

Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, says stock is cleaning up well and, with the exception of one or two items, the supply is growing.

Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., is reported ill and confined to the house.

The Market.

With carnations going off crop with most of the growers, and the near approach of Easter, conditions show an improvement over a week ago. Roses continue the weakest spot in the market and are not selling at all well. The comparatively new sorts move the best, including Melody, Radiance, Bulgarie and Cardinal, while Sunburst, Hillingdon, Ward and long-stemmed Beauties are in fairly good demand. Killarneys are overabundant, as are Richmonds. The carnation market shows some improvement, due more to decreased arrivals than to better demand. Benora, Rosette and St. Nicholas are all fine now. The leaders in popularity still are Pink Delight, Gloriosa and White Wonder. Some superb sweet peas are arriving. These sell well, but there is a surplus of short-stemmed stock still.

Dutch bulbous flowers are moving somewhat better; the quality is first-class all around. Violets are now flowering heavily, with little change in price. With an early Easter, the supply will this year be larger than for several years. Marguerite Mrs. Sander sells well, as do the larger-flowered yellows, but small flowers are too plentiful. Snapdragon, especially pink, remains popular. Lilies are mostly quoted at $12.50 per hundred, with second grades at $10. At this time an adequate supply seems likely. Of blue cornflowers the supply is as yet inadequate. Pansies are now of good quality, as is mignonette. English primroses, wall-flowers, calendulas, gerberas, larkspurs, lupines, anemones and quite a variety of miscellaneous flowers are seen.

The cattleya market seems a little stronger, as the supply has shortened up. Gardenias are good and Boston growers will have a grand Easter cut of these. Lily of the valley has been moving fairly well. The call for asparagus shows an improvement. Pot plant trade is becoming brisk. Lilies are now appearing in the windows, and Club Field Day.

Beautiful weather favored the Gardeners' and Florists' Club for the field day at the plant of W. W. Edgar Co., Waverley, March 8. There was an attendance of eighty, including ladies, a delegation from the Ladies' School of Horticulture, Groton, Mass., being included. All the houses were found filled to overflowing with plants in prime condition for Easter. Some 1,500 azaleas were in flower, including a number of the newer sorts, such as Souv. de William Edgar, Easter Greeting and the beautiful Lady Roosevelt. Lilacs were seen in quantity and carried extra fine trusses. Many thousands of lilies were seen. These carried from four to eight flowers per plant and were finely grown. While giganteums predominated, a good many Formosas also were seen, also a fine batch of candidums.

Genistas were seen in all sizes, including some grand specimen plants. In rhododendrons Pink Pearl took the lead. Large quantities of rambler roses are grown, the sorts most in evidence being Hiawatha, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon and the various baby ramblers. A house of hybrid perpetuals in pots also looked first-class and included Brunner, Frau Karl Druschki, Magna Charta, etc. American Beauty was also well done.

Metrosideros, or bottlebrush, is always well flowered here and they never appeared better than now. Spiræas, hydrangeas and a variety of other Easter plants also were seen. Many thousands of young cyclamens were coming along for flowering next winter, which it would be hard to duplicate. Large quantities of geraniums and other bedding plants filled several houses, while thousands of hydrangeas were being started for Memorial day.

Following an inspection of the houses an excellent luncheon was served and speeches made by President W. J. Kennedy, A. P. Calder, Sr., Thomas J. Grey, H. H. Bartsch, the efficient manager and member of the firm; R. S. Edgar and Mrs. W. W. Edgar. Great praise was given Mr. Bartsch for the splendid condition of the stock and to Mrs. Edgar for her generous luncheon, and rousing cheers for them were given before the pleasant gathering dispersed.

Various Notes.

Members of the Horticultural Club visited the establishment of Peirce Bros., at Waltham, March 5. One of the big houses of giganteum lilies was in prime condition for Easter, as fine as this firm ever has had them. There were many thousands of them, and practically all are already sold. Azaleas and other pot plants also are grown. Roses now fill several houses and look remarkably well. Killarney, White Killarney and Hillingdon mostly are grown. A house of the last named looked first-class, with fine stems and large flowers. Several houses are devoted to carnations. Of the newer ones Rosette and St. Nicholas looked well, while Pink Delight, White Wonder and others were in good crop. The whole of the 150,000 feet of glass was filled with good stock.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, has some thousands of giganteum lilies in splendid condition for Easter. He has also grown quite a variety of rambler roses, his standards of Mrs. Cutbush being good. Mr. Davenport formerly forced quite a number of strawberries

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market has been fair, with a downward tendency during the last week. Carnations have been plentiful, their support rather poor. Violets in all grades have suffered, as have Easter lilies, particularly the poor ones, and the short-stemmed flowers of sweet peas and of roses. The receipts of southern daffodils are quite heavy. The flowers are short-stemmed, depressing the market. Greenhouse grown daffodils suffer from the competition.

Indications point to a good supply of Easter lilies and pretty nearly all the varieties of flowers on which dependence is placed at Easter. Beauties and, possibly, Richmonds may be exceptions, but on the other hand violets promise well, as do sweet peas. Prices are likely to be reasonable.

A Large Greenhouse.

The contract has just been closed for what will be one of the largest greenhouses of the east. It will be erected by Lord & Burnham Co., for John Stephenson's Son, Oak Lane, Pa. The new house will be added to the present structure, 72x400, making the whole house, when complete, 72x800. M. C. Wright, representing the builders, expects that the work will be finished by May 15.

that Mrs. J. M. Eison, of that city, has named her new carnation after our President. Mrs. Eison sent a box of handsome blooms of her newly christened variety as a gift to the family in the White House. It will be remembered that the variety raised by Mrs. Eison was exhibited at the February meeting of the Florists' Club in this city, where it was much admired. It is described as a fringed deep pink Enchantress of good size and is a cross between a scarlet and pink which Mrs. Eison has grown for four years. It is said that several offers for the stock have been declined.

Flowers for the Easter Parade

Ten-twelve Ontario.

Godfrey Aschmann has a fine lot of azaleas just coming into bloom; there are something like 4,000, making a beautiful show. His lilies are safe; no forcing needed to bring them into flower for next week. A whole house and an overflow bench of cinerarias are superb, big trusses of large, well-colored blooms in a variety of shades. Spirea Gladstone is uncommonly good; not a poor plant among them. Hydrangea Otaksa completes the list of blooming staples. Then come the bulbs—you just ought to see them. Hyacinths and tulips and daffodils galore, or, in plain English, thousands of them. The foliage plants are strongly represented by kentias, araucarias, which John Aschmann says are much used at Easter, and ferns. The place will yield an immense crop next week.

Second and Bristol Streets.

There is an air of life pleasant to see about the greenhouses of Aschmann Bros. They work with hand and brain and their place shows it. The Easter stock is in excellent condition. Lilies, azaleas, spiræas and hydrangeas all look well. Their enterprise is shown in the new house, 18x103, just completed and filled with blooming stock, notably 5,000 hyacinths. The general air of thriftiness is pleasant to see. The benches are full of plants that one would like to have one's self; no empty spaces, no rubbish.

Various Notes.

Ernest F. Hoehl, the well-known mignonette specialist, exhibited some fine flowers at last week's meeting of the Florists' Club. Henry I. Faust, of Merion, staged some of his high grade lilies. Stephen Mortensen displayed Juliet, a new rose.

George E. Campbell, of Flourtown, will rebuild one house, 16x140, with Lord & Burnham material.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh had one day's sunshine last week, then a little more rain on Thursday, followed by a bitter March wind and a cold snap on Friday morning, with a zero temperature at many places, and the week wound up cold. Trade was rather quiet all week, with no trouble in supplying all demands for stock.

The retailers are showing more plants as Easter approaches, and each year they seem to devise more beautiful ways of arranging them. There will probably be plenty of everything except hydrangeas, which will be too late at most places. However, the cut flower growers need not worry; there will be the same demand as usual for their stock.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, March 4, in the Assembly room of the Fort Pitt hotel, with a large attendance. President Neil McCallum took the chair and conducted the business of the evening.

James D. Cockerott, Northport, N. Y., sent the new pink carnation, Northport. This is a good pink, and as it had been exhibited before and its keeping qualities had been tested and proved more than satisfactory, it was granted a first-class certificate.

Scott Bros., of the Elmsford Nurseries, Elmsford, N. Y., sent by parcel post a large bunch of the grand new red carnation, Eccles. The flowers arrived in fine condition and were highly pleasing to all. The committee awarded a first-class certificate. The boys thought it was the best red they had seen.

The Herald carnation, sent by the Chicago Carnation Co., was awarded a first-class certificate.

C. Becherer, of Dixmont hospital, exhibited two red seedling carnations, which were awarded cultural certificates.

George J. Learzaf, the Mount Washington florist, exhibited a large vase of assorted carnations, which were highly commended.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

There is not a great deal to be said concerning the condition of trade last week; plenty of stock in all lines, with a fair demand. This week being "Spring Style Week" in Dayton, consequently the florists made a big thing out of their palms and decorative plants, as every available plant was used, besides quantities of flowers in spring varieties and decorative greens. This has done much to help the week along and bring satisfactory results.

...NEWS NOTES...

Kane, Pa.—Oscar S. Magnuson has purchased the business and greenhouses of Mrs. C. V. Proper and intends to carry on a general retail trade.

Oshkosh, Wis.—Fugleberg & Flister have a bench of exceedingly fine callas, some of the flower stems measuring over six feet in height. Carl Fugleberg is on deck after a siege with the grip.

Sharon, Pa.—John Murchie is prepared for a banner Easter. Everything is in tip-top shape. Ed Murchie takes care of the store. Fischer & Schenck succeeded M. I. O'Brien, who, with his side partner, is recuperating in Florida.

Raleigh, N. C.—Spring is opening rapidly and business is excellent. The new downtown store of J. L. O'Quinn & Co. is proving a success. They will replace the wood walls in their greenhouses with concrete as soon as the rush is over.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The firm of J. M. Phillips' Sons has been incorporated, with a capital of $10,000, to deal in florists' tools and supplies. The incorporators are: E. Heckman, of Glenwood; E. H. Phillips, E. V. Phillips and M. W. Rigdon, of Pittsburgh, and F. J. Tyrrell, of Homestead.

New Castle, Pa.—J. Hennon & Son find ready sale for the whole of their stock, grown at Wampum, in the city store. Butz Bros. are among those who are looking for desirable locations outside the city, owing to the rapid rise in values of real estate. Fischer Bros. have sold their plant and purchase all stock needed for the store.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Flower Shop, heretofore conducted by Norval N. Kline at 312 North Main street, is now established in elegant new quarters at 14 North Main street. E. H. Kline recently came here from Lawrence, where he had charge of a flower store, and the two brothers will unite in the management of the two stores, with headquarters here.

Springfield, O.—G. Schneider has been a heavy advertiser in the two best local newspapers, often using half and full page spaces. One of his most successful advertisements showed a bunch of Paper Whites with a picture of "36 cents' worth." He sold 3,500 on the ad. He says that he grew 150,000 Paper Whites this year and will force 250,000 next season, as he was all cleaned up by February 10; all but about 10,000 were retailed.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—P. L. Larson, owner of the greenhouses which have been conducted for nearly five years, under lease, by R. P. Atwell, has sold the four lots on which the greenhouses are situated. The price was said to be $10,500. Mr. Atwell's lease will expire July 1, and it is Mr. Larson's intention to remove the greenhouses then to another site and resume the operation of them himself. He has not decided just where he will go, but will choose one of two locations—either on Fifth avenue, south, where he has some lots, or on his farm, one mile northeast of the city limits. In either case he will also have a downtown store.

Austin, Minn.—A. N. Kinsman, of the Austin Greenhouses, has been making some notable improvements, including the erection of a residence, an office and another greenhouse.

Aurora, Ill.—The W. B. Davis Co., with capital stock $43,500, has been incorporated by Walter B. Davis, T. Otto Fisk and Mildred A. Davis. Although the plant is devoted to vegetable forcing, the company is classed as "object, florists."

The Southwestern Market.

According to reports from the various retailers and wholesalers, business was good last week, but all will be glad when the Lenten season is over. At the wholesale market anything in season could be had of quality and in quantities. Prices were reasonable on all grades of stock. There is hardly a scarcity of anything except fancy Beauties. Only a few of these are coming in at any of the markets. The shorter grades are more plentiful. In other roses, the market has had a good supply. The Killarneys, Richmond, Bride and Maid are of exceptionally fine quality. The glut has been in violets and sweet peas. Every consignor from Kirkwood comes in each morning loaded down with these flowers, and they have to be unloaded at cheap prices to attract the big buyers, who purchase in thousand lots. There are plenty of good carnations, with top price at $3 per hundred. There should be a good demand for white by the end of the week, for greening for St. Patrick's day. The bulbous stock is excellent and the demand is brisk. Tulips, valley, Von Sions and Easter lilies have had the greatest call. Smilax, asparagus and galax had the best demand in greens during the week.

Various Notes.

J. Schreiber, representing the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, has been calling on the greenhouse men in and around St. Louis, as there is much building of new houses contemplated.

Dan Cupid and Mr. Stork got busy among the force at Smith's wholesale house. been unusually good, which will help some of the local growers in having their lilies in for Easter. Lilies will be exceptionally good this year, in spite of Easter being so early, and there will be plenty of them. Spiræas, potted roses and other potted plants are exceptionally good and there is plenty of stock to supply the demand. There is still a shortage of American Beauties. Other roses are in good demand and the supply from the wholesalers is meeting the demand for the first time in six weeks. Richmonds are good and Killarneys are improving a great deal. Carnations continue to arrive in good shape. While there has not been an exceptionally large cut from any of the growers, the quantity has been sufficient to meet the demand. Bulbous stock is plentiful, but no oversupply is known. Violets and sweet peas are still plentiful.

Various Notes.

Henry Kusik & Co. had a fine week, especially on out-of-town orders. They have sold great quantities of Easter supplies.

A. F. Barbe expects to have 1,000 lilies in for his Easter trade and they look exceptionally well.

Patrick Larkin reports business as good for this time of the year.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports that its stock looks promising for Easter, both in plants and cut flowers.

E. H. Frandsen's place suffered from an accident last week. A boiler blew up, causing great damage. One house was frosted and they are afraid their Easter stock will be a little late unless the weather gets warmer. They have only one boiler to heat the place.

R. S. Brown & Son report that the spring business has opened up for this year.

Charles Thomas, of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., received a visit last week from the stork, which left a fine baby boy at his home. This firm is making big preparations for Easter.

E. D. Ellsworth had a heavy run on funeral work last week and reports business as good.

Mr. Kane, of the Peterson Floral Co., has been on the jury for eight weeks. Mrs. Kane is hoping that he will be off the jury by Easter, as it is difficult for her to attend to the increasing business.

It is Very Important to Order

are known all over the country. They are in greater demand each year. Having increased our glass stock, we are in a position to meet our fast-increasing business. The fact that Easter falls on March 23 will make absolutely no difference to us as to finishing our stock. Our entirely new plants at Norwood, Pa., has been of great assistance to us.

Our stock for the Easter season is superior in quality to any we have ever grown, notwithstanding the standard we have maintained for years. We are now the largest growers of Easter stock in America, and any seeking quality will be repaid by inspecting our immense stock at our Philadelphia and Norwood plants.

To give our customers an idea of just what we intend offering, we enumerate the following: 25,000

LILIES.

Our stock of this grand Easter plant is exceptionally fine this year, and having 25,000 plants we can positively please the most critical buyers. Plants with from 4 to 10 flowers....12c per bloom. Made up pans from 15 to 25 flowers....12c per bloom. Plants with less than 4 flowers....15c per bloom. Cut Lilies, medium.....$12 per 100 blooms. Cut Lilies, long.....$15 per 100 blooms. All plants have been grown moderately cool.

RHODODENDRONS.

Our stock is large, the plants being exceptionally well budded and shapely, including all the best varieties in all colors. Prices.....$1.50, $2, $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4 each. Very large plants.....$5 and $6 each.

The seed trade has enjoyed the winter; it has been so mild that retail seed selling scarcely has ceased at any time and a good many houses are ahead to date in aggregate sales.

AMERICAN seedsmen who have visited the trial grounds of Watkins & Simpson, at Feltham, Middlesex, England, will learn with regret of the death, February 17, of W. Davis, B. C. Parker and E. J. Renstrom.

The western states are quarantining against the alfalfa weevil. California has put an embargo on all alfalfa products from Utah, Wyoming and parts of Idaho. Alfalfa seed from the infested districts can only be shipped into California when tightly sealed and in care of a quarantine officer, who will test and disinfect at the expense of the consignee or owner.

If the Congress of the United States harkens to the voice of the South Dakota senate the custom of distributing garden seeds will go into disfavor along with other "pork barrel" perquisites. The joint resolution on this subject was introduced by Senator Dailey, a democrat, and received the votes of nearly all the members.

THE business of the Cleveland Seed Co., at Avon, N. Y., has been purchased by A. V. Smith, manufacturer of Pearl Barley, at Marcellus Falls, N. Y.

JAMES CARTER & Co., Raynes Park, London, had eighty-four electric pea-picking machines in operation and assert that they are the only ones in England. In describing the machine they say: "Each operative has absolute control of her machine. She may run it at varying speeds, and may stop it at any point in an instant. She may even regulate the flow of peas; she may have six in a row or sixty, or may have the traveling 'platform' almost covered. The advantages of this facility of control are obvious: no two samples of peas are precisely alike; the machine must be run at lowest speed with a scantily covered platform for some crops of peas, while the more perfect crops may need but little picking, and can therefore be passed through quickly."

IMPORTS OF VALLEY PIPS.

The cultivation of lilies of the valley in Germany is one of the oldest branches of commercial horticulture in that country, and since about 1850 shipments of the pips have been made to the United States in increasing quantities. The total German production runs annually to from 50,000,000 to 60,000,-

SEED GROWING IN CALIFORNIA.

Those who read with interest the notes on onion seed as grown in California, published in this department of The Review for February 27, may like something more from the pen of F. G. Cuthbertson. Mr. Cuthbertson is the son of W. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, and he views seed growing in California from the vantage point of a lifetime in the trade and a couple of years' experience in the west. His notes originally were written for European consumption:

"California is a wonderfully productive state and has a marvelous climate, but the farmer, seed grower or orchardist has more scope for his practical ingenuity than in many other countries. The real estate man will tell you that California will grow anything with a minimum amount of trouble. Don't you believe him. In California one can find valleys with widely different climates and widely different soils, and yet only a few miles apart. One valley may grow good seeds and the next one be impossible. Another valley may grow good hay and another not. It seems as though each valley specializes and in every instance of that kind the best can be produced.

"The present article will deal with seed growing in California. Even in this line it is impossible to secure one spot where all classes of seeds will do well. Where culinary peas do well it is almost impossible to grow sweet peas, and where sweet peas do well other flower seed crops are almost a failure. We find onion and carrot seed doing well in one location, yet a few miles away a crop twice as great can be produced.

"There are many different soils in California, ranging from the heavy adobe (clay) down to a sand. The climate of California is not immune from frost and during the winter months in many sections it is common to get even 10 degrees. The greatest trouble the seed grower has is perhaps the short rainfall and its lateness in arrival. Occasionally a wet season is experienced, but that is the exception. Last year in San Juan valley less than ten inches of rain fell, and this season to January 7 only .78 of an inch has fallen. Anyone interested in seed growing can appreciate what this means when a large acreage has to be put in. Such seeds as sweet peas, radish and a few others must be put in before the end of the year to secure a good crop. Onion bulbs, carrots, parsnip and salsify should all be in before January. The practical man, then, will realize what the California seed grower has to do when rains are few and far between, before January.

"Of course the land has to be dry plowed whenever the crop is off.

a tremendous lot to the carrying of the crop till harvest time.

"Of course, there are weeds in California, too, and there is much hoeing to be done. It is comforting to know, however, that after hoeing has been done in April there is little chance of more rain coming to start a fresh crop of weeds. Consequently a seed farm in California during summer has always a clean, tidy appearance.

"This brings me to the labor question. This is one of the biggest items with Californian seed growers. Many people imagine that there are plenty of Chinamen to be had at a cheap rate to do hoeing and unskilled work on the ranches. Years ago this may have been the case, but now it is getting almost impossible to get sufficient help during hoeing and harvesting seasons. The Chinamen are no longer allowed to come into the state and the white man does not seem to care for laboring on a ranch. Seed growers are getting anxious as to the outcome. Last year the common laborer, whether Chinaman, Japanese or Hindoo, had to have his $2.25 a day. Even at that money they were hard to get and one had to travel the country to make up the number, and then they had to have their railway fare paid. It may be that the opening of the Panama canal will bring about a solution of the labor question for the seed grower and fruit grower.

"Yet, in spite of these difficulties, California is the greatest country in the world for the production of first-class seeds. It is a splendid country to work in and when the difficulties have been surmounted and the plants are well under way, the grower has the great consolation that he will have results superior in quality to any other country. The seeds grown in California stand alone for high vitality and before many years have passed Californian seeds will have a name unquestioned the world over. Most of the growers, are striving after, and I can say have attained in numerous instances, perfection in quality. It is not to be wondered at, then, that the Californian seed grower is proud of his state and the achievements it has enabled him to attain."

One of the largest growers at Irondequoit, the great aster center of New York state, says: "Our best Crego blooms usually sell at about $1.00 per dozen, retail, about twice as much as can be got here for any other variety." (See "Asters at Irondequoit" in Florists' Review, April 25, 1912.) Both wholesale and retail, when properly handled, the Crego Aster has always maintained its position at the top of the market.

BUY YOUR SEED DIRECT FROM THE ORIGINATOR.

With its enormous blossoms, long stems and vigorous, healthy plants, this Aster is becoming more valuable to the florist from year to year, and its remarkable success is due to the fact that it has had the benefit of twelve years of the most rigid and painstaking selection, every effort having been directed toward developing its commercial qualities—toward making it a money-maker for every florist who handles it. Growing no other seed of any kind, I am able to give this the closest possible attention.

I am offering the Crego Aster in four colors: White, Shell-pink, Rose-pink and Violet—all fully up to Crego grade, with immense, fluffy blooms 4 to 6 inches in diameter and of splendid color.

acres at the Gardena ranch of his firm and the abundant rainfall of a week or so ago has filled the soil with moisture, so that the prospects for a full crop are excellent. This is a different state of affairs from last year, when the long continued drought gave growers such an anxious time, and also different by all accounts from conditions obtaining with growers in the northern part of the state. The asters are also going into the ground in fine shape, the soil working splendidly. The prospects all around are excellent.

M. L. Germain, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and L. L. Morse, of San Francisco, were in attendance at the office of the horticultural commissioners at Sacramento February 27 to oppose a pernicious seed bill, requiring, among other things, a guarantee of germination. It is well within the possibilities that such a law would be set aside as unconstitutional, but it is expected that the seedsmen's protest will lend to the modification of the bill along the lines of the state legislation approved by the American Seed Trade Association. The general feeling is that Messrs. Morse and Germain are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts and deserve the thanks of the trade for the trouble they have taken.

SEED TRADE ADVERTISING.

J. L. Farmer, of Pulaski, N. Y., notes the lack of seed advertising in the general magazines and makes the following interesting comparisons with olden times:

"I cannot help but notice how fashions change even in advertising. As I was looking over some old magazines the other day I came across the February issue of Century Magazine, issued in 1891. This was twenty-two years ago.

"The magazine contained thirteen pages of seed and nursery advertising and, compared with this, the Cosmopolitan of February, 1913, which magazine claims the largest circulation of any now published, has less than two pages of seed and nursery advertising. Other lines of advertising have increased in

GLOXINIA ERECTA SUPERBISSIMA

Having during the past season been requested to secure some specially fine Gloxinias for exhibition purposes, we have made arrangements with a noted Gloxinia specialist in England to reserve for us some of the most distinct types. The bulbs are not so large as the Named Varieties, but this is a characteristic of most Erecta superbiissima varieties.

BODDINGTON'S IDEAL PRIZE GIANT MIXED. Great variety of superb colors.

CYCLOPS. Velvety carmine, shading to a broad white border, throat dotted with dark red.

DUCHESS OF YORK. Flowers of a rich dark blue, each petal being edged with a broad band of white. A most striking and lovely variety.

SPOTTED HYBRIDS. Whenever exhibited, they create intense interest. The delicate markings, in an infinite variety of forms, add a special charm to the flowers.

SUTTON'S WHITE. A giant white flowered variety.

DUKE OF YORK. Large scarlet Gloxinia with deep white edge to each petal. A magnificent flower.

HER MAJESTY. This exquisite Gloxinia is still unsurpassed by any other white variety. The flowers are as pure as newly fallen snow, and are borne on short stems, just clear of the elegantly recurved foliage.

READING SCARLET. In color this is the most brilliant Gloxinia in existence, being an intense glowing scarlet variety of the true Crassifolia habit. An admirable companion to Her Majesty.

GOLIATH. Violet and white, fine variety.
Per doz. $1.50, per 100 $10.00

The "SPENCER" Type of Sweet Peas

Burpee's Unequaled List for 1913—Arranged Alphabetically. Choicest Re-selected Stocks Grown on "Floradale Farm."

SPENCER SWEET PEAS are a great specialty with us! We were the first to grow the seed in America—the stock having been entrusted to us before introduction, even in England, of the original Countess Spencer. We have grown "the original Beauty" and its many "sportive" children with painstaking care each season since. There are but few other growers, either in England or America, who can supply an equal assortment of True RE-SELECTED "SPENCERS" that are uniformly of such choice quality. Seedsmen and planters generally can see how superior our stocks now are by the trials at FORDHOOK FARMS next June or July, while those who may be in California are invited also to inspect the growing crops at our FLORADALE FARM in the beautiful Lompoc Valley. Every planter's garden, however, is really a trial ground and we shall be quite content if any "Doubting Thomas" will send us only a portion of his order and note the difference in character of flowers produced!

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913

The most complete catalogue published for Market Gardeners, Truckers and Florists. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye ☉ placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913 contains 148 pages with hundreds of halftone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalogue we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalogue, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

"SEEDS THAT GROW"

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

My Original SILVER PINK SNAPDRAGON

is a money-maker, being a grand variety indoors and out. Aside from a possible sport, it has never varied from the soft, silvery pink which is best in full sunshine, making it an ideal bedder. Plants like cut can be grown in three months, which, in 2½ or 3½-in. pots, will make double the money that geraniums or any other bedding plant will, from the fact that you can grow 16 plants to the square foot in 2½-in. pots and 9 plants in 3½-in. pots. Use pencil and figure profit at 75c to $1.50 per dozen. It requires 9 months for geraniums to do half so well, and a year of good growing for carnations and many other plants to equal it. Clean up a corner anywhere and fill with SILVER PINK. You can't keep it from growing.

Price of seed—my own growing—$1.00 per packet of over 500 seeds; 8 packets, $2.50, delivered. Can still supply plants for MEMORIAL DAY flowering at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000, by express. Cash must accompany all orders.

Report of Judges, Novelty Night, Cleveland Florists' Club, Feb. 10, 1913:

"G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H., a vase of Silver Pink snapdragon, a beautiful variety and highly recommended by the committee."

sions: That book-shaped (small sized page) magazines are not so popular for seed and nursery advertising as they were twenty or more years ago. The tendency is to small copy during the last few years. The largest advertisement carried in the February Cosmopolitan for this year is Henderson's, which occupies one-third page.

"In the old Century, the seed and nursery ads are all concentrated together, and in running over its pages it does not take long to find them. This style is followed by most of the magazines today, including the Cosmopolitan, and I believe it is better than to scatter ads of different kinds through the book. The two small pages of seed ads are hard to find in the Cosmopolitan, however, unless you turn every page of the magazine.

"In that old issue Henderson was advertising to pay $250 for a name for his big tomato, which was afterwards named 'Ponderosa.' Burpee was featuring pansy seed, Childs the moonflower, Maule the Marguerite carnation, Scott the Ivory chrysanthemum, Vaughan the Yellow Peach tomato, Blanc the Queen of Night, Henderson the Mrs. De Graw rose, and Reeser the Bruant geranium.

"Our replies from advertising this year are much better than last. We are getting more replies by the use of one-half the appropriation. Last winter it was so cold that people spent their time in keeping warm, instead of reading papers. If they do not read the papers they do not answer the ads."

Under the new Plant Quarantine Law the importation of Azaleas, Palms, etc., is more difficult than ever before. Certain conditions must be complied with before the plants can enter this country. Are you sure the man you buy from knows this? Will he comply with the new law? Furthermore, the importer must have a permit from Washington to import such plants. Have you such a permit? If you don't wish to run the risk, and bother with all this, you can buy from us, or any other reliable American house. Horseshoe Brand Azaleas come from Petrick's, the most reliable Azalea firm in existence. Prices reasonable for good plants—sent upon request. Order early.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Eatonville, Wash.—Fred Kipper has gone out of the greenhouse business here and catalogue houses should strike his name off their mailing lists.

Olympia, Wash.—H. E. Rees, formerly carnation grower for Van Slyke & Seamons, at Tacoma, Wash., has leased the greenhouses of Mrs. J. M. Billings, in this town, and will continue the business. Mrs. Billings has retired from the trade.

Sacramento, Cal.—A. Duehm, who recently opened a retail store under the name of The Flower Shop, at 1105 Ninth street, dealing in seeds, bulbs, plants and nursery stock as well as cut flowers, reports trade more than satisfactory.

MONTEREY CYPRESS FROM SEED.

Will you kindly inform me in detail as to the best method of starting Monterey cypress seed? I have tried to raise the trees from seed here, in northern California, but with little success. Only a few seeds germinated. Please state what is the best time to plant and what soil is best. Should the seed be planted in the open or in a hotbed? What should the treatment be as to shading and water? W. W.

As W. W. asks for the details of the entire operation, I shall commence with the gathering of the seed. The Monterey cypress is peculiar in the fact that the seed cones do not open on the tree until they are several years old. As each year's growth produces an abundant supply of seed cones, it is obvious that there must be seed of several years' standing on all large trees. This is an important point, for the ripeness of the seed, provided the cones are allowed to remain on the tree, the better germinative qualities it has. Consequently, seed should only be saved from cones of the oldest growth on the trees. The young cones, although they appear to be ripe, do not give seed that will germinate easily. Although the seed keeps well on the tree, it does not do so after picking and seed that is older than one season is of little value.

Take the seed and put it in a vessel, covering it with water that has been heated to about 150 degrees. It is not necessary to change this water, but the seed should be left in it for about three days. Early in April is the best time to start cypress in California, and no heat, either above or below, is of any value. Make a bed outside, of light sand, and cover the seed about one-eighth of an inch with still finer sand. Put a shading over the bed, preferably of laths, both as a protection from birds and from the bright sunshine. Keep the bed wet by plenty of light sprinkling. The seeds should begin to germinate in about a week and in eight weeks the plants are ready to prick off into flats. By this time they should be about one and one-half inches high, which is the proper size in which to handle them. They can be boxed in heavier soil than that in which the seed has been grown and must then be shaded for several weeks in the same manner as was the seed bed.

Plants grown in this way will be ready for sale the following winter, but can be kept in flats for several seasons. The seed can be planted rather thickly in the seed bed, which must be carefully leveled and lightly tamped both before and after the seed is covered with sand. See that the bed is in such shape that it will hold the water evenly, and if the entire bed is made of light soil there is little danger of giving too much water when the seed bed is made outdoors. I am inclined to think, from the remarks made by W. W., that he had his trouble either because the seed grown was not fresh or because it was saved from young cones. As California is the native habitat of the Monterey cypress, there should be no trouble to grow it successfully in this climate, provided the foregoing rules are followed. G.

YET ANOTHER QUARANTINE.

The California authorities have issued Quarantine Order No. 20, prohibiting entrance to the state for alfalfa and some other articles said to carry alfalfa weevil, Phytonomus posticus, from certain nearby states. One paragraph hits the trade as follows:

"It is hereby further ordered and declared that all nursery and ornamental stock and other plants imported into the state of California from the aforesaid states of Utah, Wyoming and portions of Idaho must be packed in fresh shavings, excelsior or other suitable packing (excepting tulle, hay and straw) and the box containers and cars must be disinfected by fumigation with chemically pure cyanide of potassium, using three ounces to each 100 cubic feet of space, such fumigation to be given both at the point of shipment and at the point of delivery. LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Stock has been arriving in large quantities, both from local and northern growers, but it seems to clean up well. The fashion show always calls for a lot of cheap, showy flowers, as well as plants, and this year was no exception. Daffodils are arriving in great quantities, the variety being greater and the quality better than usual. Funeral work has been plentiful, using up large quantities of these. Grand Monarque narcissus has been fine. Freesias are everywhere, both the outdoor and indoor grown; the latter are much the better sellers. Stock Beauty of Nice sells well.

Roses are fine in every respect, the weather being all in their favor. Easter lilies, cut and in pots, are good, but there is likely to be a shortage for Easter in good pot stock. A number of hyacinths in pans are in; also pretty forced wistaria plants. Keizerskroon tulips are grand now. Violets are plentiful; so, also, are valley and orchids. The wearing of artificial flowers as corsage bouquets is greatly on the increase here; about every other woman on the street is adorned (?) with these monstrosities.

Various Notes.

Jacob Dieterich, of Wall street, almost had his place cleaned out of plants during fashion show week. He supplies most of the department stores and handles immense numbers of bay trees, kentias and similar stock.

Tom Wright has broken out in a new place—as an inventor. He is working on a time clock and call arrangement that has all the ear marks of an excellent thing. It is not complete yet, but is nearing completion and I hope to refer to some of its good points later.

The usual monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was given over to the discussion of the prevention of frost damage in the orange groves. William Woods, horticultural commissioner, was the first speaker and he was followed by several of his deputies. William Hertrich, gardener on the Huntington estate, spoke on his own recent experiences and was of the opinion that heat and not smoke was needed, warming the air being more important than the time-honored "smudge." Geo. M. Garland, of Des Plaines, Ill., spoke in favor of using steam, bringing the Big orders for the fashion show were reported by the H. N. Gage Co. The quality of the Grand Monarque daffodils has been elegant here and the poetic varieties are just coming in.

There is great consternation among the damsels of Fourth street. Fred C. Doxtal, the elusive blonde Beau Brummell of the J. W. Wolters force, is engaged to be married; hence the weeping and wailing among the unsuccessful lassies. "Alas, poor Freddie! I knew him well."

PORTLAND, ORE.The Market.

Business is holding up wonderfully, considering the weather. Spring seems to be here to stay. The sunshine for the last few weeks has worked wonders in bringing out the stock. Foliage is coming out rapidly on the rose bushes and shrubbery. Daffodils are bursting into bloom on all sides. Carnations and roses, especially Maids, are showing the effect of the bright days. On the whole, the florists are delighted, as the lilies are rather backward. If everything goes well for the next two weeks they will be just right, but not in an oversupply. Daffodils, freesias, tulips, sweet peas and mignonette are the principal spring flowers. Ramblers, azaleas, rhododendrons, genistas and lilacs are much in evidence in the windows.

Various Notes.

SEATTLE.The Market.

Business is slightly better in all departments of the flower trade. The Lenten season usually brings quietness, but this year it seems to have been more pronounced than formerly. The last two weeks, however, have shown improvement and, with Easter almost upon us, flower sellers are showing brighter faces. Stock of most varieties is fairly abundant. Roses are about the only item showing any scarcity. Carnations are plentiful and bringing poor prices for mostly poor quality flowers. Bulb stock is selling well and pot plants, ferns, etc., are moving nicely. There will be a shortage on flowering plants

THE NOVELTY OF THE SEASON"RAMONA" THE NEW RED CHEROKEE ROSE

This sensational and magnificent new climbing rose occurred as a sport from the well-known Pink Cherokee (Rosa Sinica, var. Anemone). It is a stronger and more rampant grower than its parent, and produces during the spring and early summer months flowers in such profusion as to entirely cover the plant; in autumn there is a secondary crop of bloom. The flowers are much larger than either the pink or white forms, with brilliant golden-yellow stamens and broad petals of a glorious carmine-crimson color; an unusual shade, wonderfully striking and effective; the foliage is absolutely mildew-proof, a rich, glossy green, so bright that it appears as though varnished. The life-like illustration in our advertisement in The Review of February 20th, showing blooms and foliage natural size, pictures its beauty stronger than mere words.

The original sport occurred on the nurseries of Messrs. Dieterich & Turner, at Montebello, California. They, realizing its value and great beauty, propagated over one hundred thousand plants, from whom we acquired the entire stock. This is indicative of our faith in its value, and its coming popularity is attested by the fact that we have already booked orders for many thousands of plants, hence we feel that we are safe in stating that "RAMONA" will have the largest first season's sale of any new rose ever offered to the American trade.

"RAMONA"

will be of special value as a garden rose to the entire Pacific Coast, the Southwestern, Gulf and South Atlantic States; it will prove hardy as far north as Philadelphia. For planting on pergolas, pillars, porches, etc., it is a rose of unique and beautiful effect; in addition, it makes an elegant hedge plant if properly trained and pruned, affording a relief from the stereotyped privet hedges, with the added value of a rich display of color.

We are offering plants of "RAMONA" at the following prices, cash with order:
 In lots less than one hundred: From 2-inch pots, 35 cents each, $3.50 per dozen; from 3-inch pots, 50 cents each, $5.00 per dozen; from 5-inch pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per dozen.
 In lots of one hundred to five hundred: From 2-inch pots, $20.00 per one hundred; from 3-inch pots, $30.00; from 5-inch pots, $60.00.
 In lots of five hundred to one thousand: From 2-inch pots, $125.00 per thousand; from 3-inch pots, $150.00 per thousand.

Parties desiring to list "Ramona" can be supplied by us with copies of the colored plate shown in The Review of February 20th, at the rate of $3.50 per hundred, $30.00 per thousand; larger quantities at special rates.

The Market.

There is still an excess of flowers and a scarcity of business. Never have violets and bulbous stock been so plentiful or so cheap. The prevailing sunshine and warm days and nights have had the effect of bringing into bloom everything that is seasonable. Roses, however, are not quite so much in evidence as they have been. Carnations are a glut and are likely to continue so for several weeks, provided the present sort of weather continues for that length of time. Easter lilies are in good supply and move well. Valley is good, but moves slowly. Freesias are not as strong as they have been. Hyacinths of the Dutch sorts, both potted and cut, are seen everywhere. Tulips do not move as quickly as they should. From general appearances, there will be quantities of flowering stock in pots for Easter. Azaleas, cyclamens, lilies and rambler roses look well.

ate, and hundreds of thousands of achyranthes, geraniums, alternantheras, alyssums, centaureas, lobelias and ageratums are in the cutting beds. For heavier effects, enormous quantities of veronicas, escallonias, myrtles and other hardy evergreens have already been started. For groves and large groups still larger evergreens are already well under way. Deciduous trees that will be in full leaf during the season of the exposition will also be largely used.

NAMING MEDIOCRE GLADIOLI.

"I would like to rap some of the named varieties of gladioli," said W. E. Fryer, of Mantorville, Minn., in a paper prepared for presentation before the last meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association. "Our list is too long and no more should be named unless they have extra good qualities and are different from any we now have. Let one of experience take any catalogue that lists 100 varieties. They are described in such a way that all appear to be good. Let him try to select the best from the descriptions and he will fail. If the experienced fail, how is it with the average planter? I have turned over a new leaf in regard to varieties I am not familiar with: I buy a few bulbs and grow them one year before I catalogue them; if they are poor, I have enough; if good, I can get more. This season I am going to make up a mixture of some of the named varieties, but I am sure it will not compare with some of the mixtures I already have."

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of Nathan D. Pierce, well known in the nursery trade in Rhode Island, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

HENRY AUGUSTINE, of Normal, Ill., was killed by a train March 8. A brief sketch of his career appears in this week's obituary column.

THE western states are quarantining against the alfalfa weevil and several of them have barred nursery stock that comes packed in alfalfa.

EACH season greater numbers of suitably located florists are taking up landscape work and are handling nursery stock. They rarely fail to find it profitable.

DR. W. S. REGAN, who is in charge of the nursery stock inspection work in Massachusetts, recently told the New England Nurserymen's Association that eighteen new pests have been received on imported stock so far this season.

J. JOHANNES, who formerly ran greenhouses at Rockford, Ill., but who has been spending the winter at Paris, Ill., has returned to Rockford to execute the landscape work at the new Dr. James Sanitarium on Corey's Bluff.

QUALIFIED IN WYOMING.

The law in Wyoming permits no nursery to ship stock into the state unless it holds the license of the state board of horticulture, such license not being obtainable until the nursery has filed a bond and a sworn copy of its certificate of inspection. The nurseries which have complied with these requirements for the year 1913 are as follows:

Arlington Nurseries, Marshall Bros., proprietors, Arlington, Neb.
Barteldes Seed Co., Denver, Colo.
Biltmore Nursery, C. D. Beadle, manager, Biltmore, N. C.
Bismarck Nursery, O. H. Will & Co., proprietors, Bismarck, N. D.
Colorado Nursery Co., H. A. Gooch, secretary, Loveland, Colo.
German Nurseries, C. Sonderegger, proprietor, Beatrice, Neb.
Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., C. W. Gurney, president, Yankton, S. D.
International Nursery Co., Denver, Colo.
The Jewell Nursery Co., J. M. Underwood, manager, Lake City, Mich.
The R. M. Kellogg Co., F. E. Beatty, president, Three Rivers, Mich.
L. L. May & Co., F. H. May, St. Paul, Minn.
Meneray Crescent Nursery Co., Council Bluffs, Iowa.
The Montana Nursery Co., D. J. Tighe, manager, Billings, Mont.
Northern Colorado Nursery Co., N. R. Kilburn, president, Loveland, Colo.
Northern Nursery Co., Denver, Colo.
Oregon Nursery Co., Orenco, Ore.
Plumfield Nurseries, G. L. Welch & Co., proprietors, Fremont, Neb.
Salem Nursery Co., Salem, Ore.
The Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.
The Sherman Nursery Co., E. N. Sherman, president, Charles City, Iowa.
The Stark Bros. Nurseries Co., C. M. Stark, president, Louisiana, Mo.
State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont.

NEW YORKERS ARE RELIEVED.

As has been reported in this department of The Review, New York nurserymen have been much perturbed over the introduction in the state legislature of a bill that would impose well-nigh intolerable conditions on those in the business. Last week's issue told of a large delegation going to Albany to oppose the bill in committee. So determined was the opposition that the delegation was assured that this so-called Vert bill would not be reported for passage and that it will be materially modified before it is heard from again. The provision particularly objected to was one making the original seller responsible in the sum of $5 for the truthfulness to name any time within five years of date of sale.

THE STARK FAMILY TROUBLES.

William P. Stark, president of the Wm. P. Stark Nurseries, Neosho, Mo.,

has filed suit against the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., and Edgar W. Stark, president, Lloyd C. Stark, vice-president, and Eugene Duncan, treasurer, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the company. He bases his petition on the following allegations: "That Edgar W. Stark has never learned the fundamental principles of the business; that he is not familiar with the scope or with the details of the business; that he is incompetent to run the business, and yet he dictates to the other officers all of their official acts in connection with the business."

Stark, who was appointed his guardian upon her application to the probate court to have him declared of unsound mind, fraudulently conspired and confederated together to deprive W. P. Stark of any office in the management or control of the business, and without regard for the welfare of the company took control of the affairs of the company and placed it in the hands of persons who were under the domination of Edgar W. William P. Stark asks the court to appoint a receiver to take charge of the affairs of the company, and for a decree of dissolution.

SO DOES THE PUBLISHER.

In a recent issue of The Review a subscriber was given advice as to evergreens to use as windbreaks in a cold climate. Here is his answer:

Your answer to my question received, and I thank you. I have not been able, though, to locate an ad of small nursery stock where I could get such stock in the seedling size. I hope to see one soon.—C. H. Lothrop, Lexington, Mass., February 26, 1913.

So does the publisher hope to see such an advertisement soon. It is the belief that The Review reaches more buyers of nursery stock, in trade quantities, than are reached by any one other publication in America. But nurserymen have been educated away from efficient, economical trade paper advertising and to the use of wasteful, inefficient circulars.

These men had the temerity to stand directly in front of the stores of the legitimate dealers and offer their wares to the passing public, much to the chagrin of the dealers. An effort is now on foot to seek the enactment of suitable laws, to prevent an occurrence of this sort in the future. The Retail Merchants' Association has long been endeavoring to find a way to circumvent itinerant merchants of all kinds, although thus far without success. Cer-

Potted ramblers and white lilacs are being shown in the stores in preparation for the Easter business, which bids fair this year to eclipse all others. A FEW REMINDERS.

There are some customers who have the habit of sending 4-cent, 5-cent and 10-cent postage stamps with their orders. These stamps can not be used since the parcel post has gone into effect; it must be parcel post stamps and large denominations of the other kind can not be exchanged, which makes it a loss. Customers could just as well send a paper dollar or two or even a five dollar bill instead of stamps; one will go just as safely as the other.

The next thing is that many will send a postal card asking for a price list in such a hurry that there is one thing or another forgotten. I receive them in all styles; one that contained my address and nothing else. Sometimes the man's signature is missing, but the most common thing omitted is the city and state of the sender.

H. W. Koerner.

Plainview, Tex.—The Plainview Floral Co. has completed an addition, 10x100 feet, to its greenhouses, and will still further enlarge, Mr. Jeffries says; as increasing business may demand. The firm has also devoted some outdoor space to the growing of vegetables, and has secured twenty-eight lots of adjoining ground, in which shrubbery will be planted. E. S. Keys is connected with Mr. Jeffries in the business and will aid in its development.

Dorner's Novelties

For Spring of 1914, we offer Three Tried and True Commercial Varieties:
Champion, scarlet; Yellowstone and Yellow Prince, yellow.

CHAMPION—bright scarlet, large size, good form, bright color and strong stems; an extraordinarily early, free habit that will never fail to give a heavy Christmas cut. Champion was only one of eight good scarlet varieties in a test; its superior qualities over the others made it an easy winner.

Prices, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000;
$237.50 per 2500; $450.00 per 5000.

YELLOWSTONE and YELLOW PRINCE. The only two Yellow Carnations that we have found profitable commercial varieties in their color. Size, stem, color, growth, earliness and freedom of bloom are all of the commercial standard. The want of good yellow carnations will cause a big demand for this stock, and with the orders already booked, we expect to be sold up long before the close of the 1914 season.

Price, $6.00 per 50; $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000;
$187.50 per 2500; $350.00 per 5000.

We have booked quantities of Champion, Yellowstone and Yellow Prince for Spring 1914 delivery, and to secure early stock, we advise you not to wait, but to place your order now.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The supply is large. There is, however, an active demand that for the last week has been taking up most of the offerings.

Judging from present indications, this market will have a fairly good supply of elegant stock for Easter. Roses are being cut in larger quantities than a fortnight ago. Carnations are holding up better than was expected. All colors seem to be moving nicely. A good many of our local growers have large lots of bulbous stock that will make Easter nicely. There will also be a nice lot of lilies, but it cannot be ascertained as yet whether or not the supply will be adequate.

Double violets were the one bad proposition in last week's good market. They simply could not find enough buyers at any price. Neither orchids nor valley found a good market.

The offerings of green goods are of high quality. Both plumosus and Sprengeri are in good supply. There is a good call for wild smilax for the decorations for the spring openings.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports that this year has been by far his best in Mexican ivy.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co., of Lockland, is sending some of the best carnations of the season to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

Clarence Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., is consigning excellent plumosus to E. G. Gillett.

Geo. J. Ball, formerly of Terrace Park, near this city, but now of Glen Ellyn, Ill., was a visitor last week.

Both Sydney Wertheimer and Sam Seligman were in the city at the close of last week. Other visitors included Mrs. Norval Kiger, of Marietta, O.; C. G. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.; C. P. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky., and Mr. Leedle, of the Leedle Rosary, Springfield, O.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

Best 100 Scarlet at Cincinnati show, November, 1911

Best 100 Scarlet at St. Paul show, November, 1912

Best 100 Scarlet at Cleveland show, November, 1912

Color:—Brilliant scarlet, good even shade.

Form:—Large 3 to 3½-inch, well rounded flowers, full center, scalloped edges, outer petals standing out well, showing the flower off to good advantage.

Calyx:—Strong, large calyx; never bursts, very much on the order of Harlowarden.

Habit:—Ideal, upright growth; deep green colored foliage, breaks readily from the base, making a rapid growth and producing flowers in remarkably short time. Easy to grow and propagate.

Stem:—Long and strong, not heavy, always stiff enough to hold the large flower perfectly erect.

Guarantee

We guarantee this variety to fill a long felt want for a good all-around commercial scarlet; one that will produce high grade flowers with long stems right from the beginning of the season to the end.

The Herald is the Best Commercial Scarlet for you to grow, because it will produce more perfect flowers in a season than any other scarlet and bring a higher price than any other; because the flowers are all perfect; stem stiff and keeps the longest. Compared with Enchantress it will produce one-third more blooms. No culls; no splits; no weak stems. All rooted cuttings guaranteed strong, well rooted and satisfactory in every respect.

Robert Miller, president of the Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah, who spent several days here last week on his way home from a trip through the east, said January 22 that of all the novelties seen on his travels he was specially pleased with Carnation The Herald. He made a trip to Joliet to see it growing and said it looked to him like a good money-making proposition for his shipping trade in cut flowers. He is shipping over a wide radius in the intermountain territory, where there is a good market for red carnations, and he left a good-sized order for cuttings of The Herald for delivery March 1.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

A few spring-like, balmy days gave the last week a cheerfulness that was radiated on all sides and found substantial reflection in increased trade among the florists. More cut flowers were sold last week than for some time past, violets finding special favor. The near approach of Easter is causing some activity among the retailers to find stock for the occasion, and already inquiries are being made in the interest of churches, for decorations and potted plants as well as cut blooms.

Various Notes.

E. H. Dickey, superintendent of the Union Cemetery Greenhouses, at Woonsocket, has nearly 3,000 Easter lily blooms coming along in fine condition and also has a fine showing of bulbous stock.

The Providence Horticultural Co., of which E. M. Pope, 105 Burnett street, is proprietor, reports great activity in orders for spring work.

At the annual meeting of the New England Nurserymen's Association, at Worcester, Mass., last week, V. A. Vanicek, of Newport, was elected treasurer. Daniel A. Clarke, of Fiskeville, was appointed on the membership committee, and C. H. Groaton, of this city, on the executive committee.

J. Camuel recently completed a small house, 10x40, at Pottersville, for starting tomato and cabbage plants.

Louis D. Pierce has been appointed a member of the building committee of the Norwood Library Association.

George McWilliams, gardener for George M. Whitin, of Whitinsville, has been selected as one of the judges at the National Show in New York, April 5 to 12. W. H. M.

WE'RE AHEAD considerably when it comes to a comparison of SNAPDRAGONS

Unlike the several strains advertised as the well known New England Silver-pink Snapdragon, we have named ours as this favorite rose is its nearest comparison as to color.

Every grower who has tested this strain pronounces it the best yet. Will you be among the number to buy a stock of this sterling Snapdragon that knows no enemies but makes friends wherever it finds a home? 10,000 strong plants, ready April 1. Price, $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. Cash with order, please.

G. E. BUXTON,

NASHUA, N. H.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

There is hardly any change to be reported in the market. Stock of all kinds seems plentiful, especially violets. There are plenty of home-grown violets to be had at 25 cents per hundred. Roses, lilies, sweet peas, carnations, valley, etc., are equal to the demand and of a splendid grade. The outlook for Easter is fine. From present indications prices will not take that enormous rise, giving the retailer an opportunity to dispose of lots of stock at a fair price.

Various Notes.

The last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was honored by the attendance of one of Louisville's oldest florists, John Skrobanek. The establishment of Mr. Skrobanek, while modest, shows splendid care and lots of skill is displayed in producing about the best stock sent to the local market.

The cheap carnation sales continue, only they have become still cheaper, a local department store offering them at 20 cents per dozen.

E. J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., was a recent caller.

G. E. S.

Cresco, Ia.—W. B. Perry, proprietor of the Garden City Greenhouses, has added one new house and installed a new boiler.

Bargain In Silver Pink Bedding Stock

This entire lot of splendid plants of Silver Pink snapdragon at a small price. Shipment March 10, when they will be sturdy plants with 2 to 6 branches. They are offered at a bargain because we can afford it. We will have used this bench space three times in one year and can make the low price with still a good margin of profit. The price is only cash, by express. These plants will make strong stock in 8 1/2 and 4-in. pots for early bedding sales, and should sell more readily and make you more money than any bedding plant. We have been short of stock for two seasons and have had so many advance orders and inquiries that we cut our geranium stock in half. The only advertising done was a bed of Silver Pink in our home grounds.

Snapdragon is destined to become as popular and profitable for bedding as it now is under glass. Get in line and pick up some of the easy dollars and a lot of new customers. Use these plants to show blossoms and sow seed for 2 1/2-in. stock. See my smaller display ad. for figures. Price of seed, my own growing, $1.00 per pkt. of over 500 seeds; 3 pkts., $2.50, delivered.

Be prompt with plant orders. This is my last lot for spring sales. Can supply a few larger plants for immediate delivery at $4.00 per 100.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Roses continue scarce, although the cut has improved in the last few weeks and indications are for a good crop for Easter. Carnations are about the same as before—enough to go around at the buyer's own price. Bulbous stock is of fine quality and is equal to all demands. Valley has been plentiful and of fine quality.

Easter lilies are coming in every day. There should be enough to go around at Easter. Some growers will have giganteum in at that date.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. will build a new range at Newton Falls, O., this spring, beginning with two houses 48x400 of King material. Service buildings and heating plant will be installed to provide for the rapid extension of the plant. A plot of seventy-four acres has been acquired close to the depot, with three railroads, giving good express service to the city; also the plant will be located on a direct coal road, being within nine miles of the coal fields. A switch direct to the boiler house will eliminate all hauling of coal, etc. Good soil and water both prevail in this section, the country in and about Newton Falls being highly productive. Killarney and White Killarney will be grown the first season, under the management of Guy Bate, who has charge of the old plant. Herbert Bate will take charge of the present plant until such time as the entire greenhouse establishment is removed to the new location.

The first rambler roses of the season were seen in the stores last week. Baby Rambler, Phyllis, Jessie, Hiawatha and Crimson Rambler all were good and retailers and the public welcomed them.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is showing Spanish iris, a novelty for so early in the season.

Adam Graham is inspecting the Panama canal.

All greenhouse firemen have boiler operators' licenses now, thanks to the efforts of the Florists' Club's committee.

New American Beauty Geranium

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 the New American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on this wonderful new Geranium for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. It originated from a novelty collection and has stood the test now nearly three years.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color—

1. In brilliancy of color.
2. In size of its large blooms.
3. In earliness of bloom.
4. In constancy of bloom.
5. In vigor, strength and stocky plants.
6. In propagating quality.
7. In number of large clusters of blooms.
8. In selling quality.
9. In a wonderful ability to retain its color in cool or the hottest weather.
10. In a Geranium that has come to stay as a money maker.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is semi-double, of the purest American Beauty color. It is so distinct that no difference can be detected in the color of an American Beauty Rose. The only Geranium of its color ever introduced. It flowers freely the entire season. It grows compact, medium dwarf, of stately shape with lustrous green foliage, slightly corrugated, with a brownish circle. It produces gigantic flower heads very freely the entire season. We claim it to have larger flower heads than any other variety of its kind. The individual blooms measure $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches across and have as many as eight fully opened, gigantic flower spikes and several half open and more in bud, in eight-inch pots.

If you wish them shipped by Parcel Post, enclose stamps.

WE GROW PLANTS

Our special line is the growing of Geraniums and other Bedding Plants in large quantities, taking the place of a supply house, from which the Florist may draw his raw material from which to manufacture the finished article for his retail trade. We have a large stock of the following for immediate or future shipment. We shall be especially well fixed on CANNAS in 3-inch pots, by April 1st.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubes, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2 1/2-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

After a week of the coldest weather of the season the conditions changed; the sun broke out and brought a thaw. I believe it is welcomed by most of the growers, as the general conditions seem to be late stock, especially in lilies. We will have good lilies in the city, but not the quantity that is needed.

Business conditions remain about the same throughout Lent, with the exception of the most welcome funeral work, of which the stores had a good run last week. Week-end sales have moved a tremendous quantity of stock that otherwise would have gone to the barrel.

Club Meeting.

The big event of the Florists' Club was held Tuesday, March 4. The attendance was gratifying to the committee and naturally a good time followed. A short meeting preceded the banquet, the principal business being the election of officers. William Legg, the pioneer florist, was elected president. No better choice than Mr. Legg could have been made. As one of the speakers of the evening said, "we have had a reign of the younger element; now let the older men have the rule." While Mr. Legg is considerably older than the other members, he is just as young in spirit and will keep the business lively during his career as president. Mr. Brown was elected vice-president and in his little response he said that he objected to being classed as an older man. This brought hearty applause from the members. The other officers were elected as follows: E. Savage, secretary; E. C. Brucker, financial secretary; Wallace Eiss, treasurer. Without flattery, I can safely say that a better set never held office.

After the meeting the banquet was held in the dining-room of the hotel and the usual good feed followed. L. H. Neubeck was appointed host and any who know or ever heard of Mr. Neubeck in business or pleasure know that he was the ideal one for the head of the table. Mr. Kasting was the first speaker and the members of the club listened to some mighty good advice. Before the party adjourned nearly everyone in the hall responded to the call of his name.

and plants of every variety

The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

PREPARE FOR EASTER!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply? From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need, found in one place to grow.
The Lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter Day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.

The Araucarias, matchless are the Ferns all green,
With bulbs and plumed Spiraeas, the best you've ever seen;
And Aschmann gives a challenge: "Let every florist hear!
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear;
If you wish to gather dollars like Violets in the Spring,
Then send your largest order—his plants the cash will bring."

Specialist in Araucaria Excelsa.

PALMS.

We are well provided this Easter with a big stock of Kentia Forsteriana Palms. To make room for the new importation coming in from Belgium in April, we will be able to give you excellent good value in them. Just look at these low prices—a bargain seldom offered: 6-in. pots, 30, 35, 40, 50 inches high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00; 7-in. pots, made up, a large one, about 45 to 50 inches, in center, 3 smaller ones around, $3.00, $3.50 to $4.00; single plants, 5 to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana combination plants, made up of 3 plants, 20 to 25 inches high, 6-in. pot, 75c to $1.00; single plants, bushy, 5½-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c; 4 to 4½ and 5-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c.

Cocos Weddelliana, large, 4-in. pots, 18 to 20 in. high, 35c, 40c and 50c.

Primula Chinensis, in bloom, 5½-in., $2.50 per doz.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Mitchell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Carnation rooted cuttings and plants. We are situated this spring so we can give you better stock for the money than ever before. We now have an ideal propagating house in which we have almost perfect control of light, heat and water, and so arranged, that when cuttings are rooted we can give them full light to harden them up and give much stronger roots. Also, place your orders early for 2-in. stock for April and May delivery.

We have an extra large stock of White Enchantress and are offering them for a time a little under the regular price.

CARNATION CUTTINGS.

I can supply the very best carnation stock on the market. What you need is not the cheapest stuff you can buy but stock that will produce the most and best flowers next fall and winter. I use stock plants selected each year as the most vigorous ones in the field, I grow them cool and flower very little; all the vigor of the strongest plants goes into the stock you buy from me. This is my specialty. All stock is grown and shipped under my own eye, I stand back of every shipment that leaves my greenhouses, guaranteeing satisfaction absolutely.

Send for my list of varieties and prices, also my special proposition to grow your stock on until your field is ready.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE." This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as the plebian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales 1913. Send for both of the booklets.

Our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

...NEWS NOTES...

New Castle, Ind.—That Patrick J. Lynch, owner of the Heller Bros. Co., will resist the condemnation of a right-of-way through his property on South Fifth street by the city to provide for a fuel switch to the waterworks, was indicated in the city council February 17. Mr. Lynch and his attorney appeared before the body and registered their protest against the condemnation proceedings.

Muncie, Ind.—R. Webb, of the Muncie Floral Co., says there is a bright outlook for Easter business. His firm and the Williams & Clark Floral Co. gave special attention to the decoration of their stores for St. Valentine's day, and the volume of trade on that occasion was much larger than in former years. Cut flowers sold well and there was a genuine rush in pot plants.

Northampton, Mass.—The Hampshire-Hampden Florists' and Gardeners' Club will hold a banquet at Boyden's restaurant, March 4. A program of entertainment will be arranged by Messrs. Barnard and Tichey. The next regular meeting of the club will be held at the greenhouses of H. W. Field and an address will be delivered by Professor Waugh, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Allentown, Pa.—Ernest Ashley will move April 1 into his new store, which will have the advantage of larger size and finer appearance than his present quarters. Mrs. Ashley has charge and intends to have a most attractive place. The greenhouses are located about two miles from the center of the city, on land that is rapidly increasing in value. John F. Horn & Bro. are in a similar position and are now debating the question of moving their range of houses farther back, where there is plenty of room, as well as freedom from the dust of travel.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE coal market continues easy, but from the principal cities comes the word that cars on tracks are not so burdensome as they were a few weeks ago and that prices are, as a consequence, a little firmer. The coal trade is one of which "you never can tell" may well be said; the opposite of what is generally expected frequently happens. Last autumn there was every indication of an approaching fuel famine, but except for a sharp flurry at the time fires were started there has been exactly the reverse of the conditions that were anticipated. Look out for the year when it looks like an easy winter market; that will be the year everybody will get pinched.

A PENNSYLVANIA RANGE.

I have recently come into possession of a greenhouse or houses, 75x120 feet, with five ridges or gables. It is heated by steam, with one sixty horse-power boiler and one twenty-five horse-power boiler. The twenty-five horse-power one will heat the house except on a few of the coldest nights, when the thermometer is 20 or 30 degrees below zero. Now I am asking for advice on the heating of this house. It now has for piping one 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch head or feed pipe running the width of the house, and 2-inch flows running the length of the house in each ridge and then reduced to 1-inch coils and a 2-inch return to the boiler. In several places in the coils the piping is reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch, I suppose to save the cost in throttles or shut-offs. The system does not heat satisfactorily. The larger boiler takes too much fuel to run it and I am thinking of throwing out the whole system and putting in low pressure steam or hot water.

If low pressure steam and hot water will increase your heating capacity, because you will have complete control of your draft, which means less fuel, time, labor and trouble.

The mash finger grate admits air through every air space and is the only perfect design. It is impossible to avoid this construction and receive the best results.

They are the only rocker grates that will handle Pocahontas coal and not waste it in the ashpit.

They are adapted to the tubular, fire box, internally fired or sectional boilers.

They are supported the same as stationary grates. No changes in the furnace whatever and no tools are required when installing them.

You can use a cheaper quality of coal. An evenly distributed draft, completely controlled, burns cinders until they are brittle and are easily rattled through the grate.

The particular construction of these grates relieves the cinders without molesting the fire bed. Many of our grates have been in constant use during the winter which is now drawing to a close, and we are receiving many testimonials telling of the satisfaction and pleasure our customers are deriving from the Travis Rocker Grate.

GALESBURG, ILL., Feb. 7, 1913.

G. E. TRAVIS CO., Henry, Illinois.

Gentlemen:—We have now given those grates a good trial, and I believe they have increased the heating capacity of my boiler about one-third. I am pleased with them.

Yours truly,

are used, what should be the size of the opening in the twenty-five horse-power boiler, the size of the feed line, the size of the flow pipes and the coils, and the size of the return to the boiler and the opening in the bottom of the boiler? Where should the check valve be placed, at the front or back of the regular valve? The boiler has a steam dome. Would it be all right? The large boiler is to be taken out and I will add some other one for a reserve supply.

The house contains solid beds and will be used for lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes—the tomatoes in early spring. Part of the house will also be used for flowers. It has all been used for flowers. A glass partition runs the length of the house. The boiler house, potting shed and packing shed extend entirely across the north end of the house, with the boiler house at the northwest corner. The ridges run north and south. Please give me your opinion as to the best plan for heating this house.

W. S.

From the description it would appear that the range consists of five houses, each 15x120 feet. The description also would indicate that the main is too small, but the data are not definite enough to determine whether the radiation in the returns is sufficient.

If hot water is to be used, it will be well to run three 2½-inch flow pipes in each of the houses to the end farthest from the boiler and connect each of them with two 2-inch returns. Place one flow on each plate and the other under the ridge. In case low pressure steam is installed, run a 2½-inch flow under each ridge and connect them with six or eight 1¼-inch returns. Of course, all of the pipes should have a slight fall. Place a shut-off valve on each flow and return pipe where it enters the house.

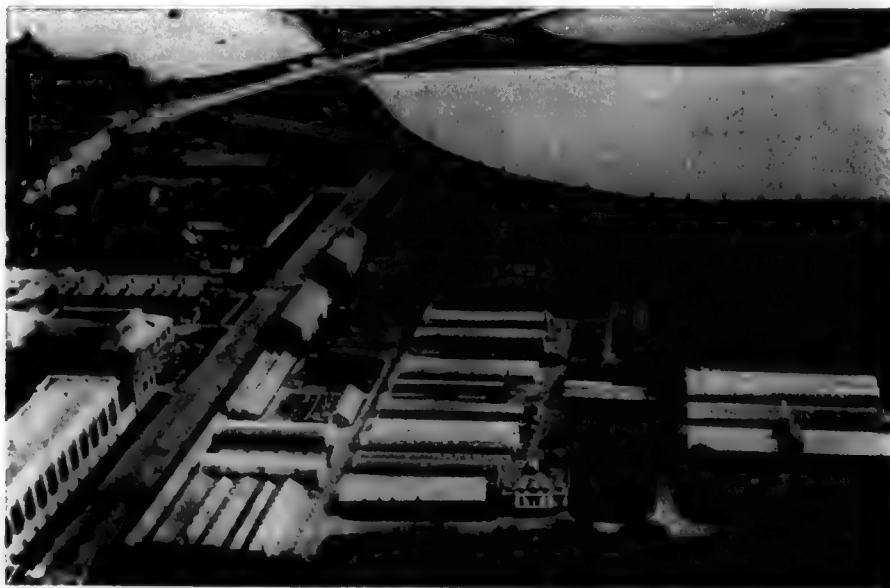

AN L-SHAPED STRUCTURE.

I am enclosing a diagram of my two greenhouses, so that you may inform me as to the best arrangement of the piping. You will note that one of the houses is already in use and contains 400 feet of 2-inch pipe. This piping, however, does not furnish sufficient heat. How much more piping will be needed to heat the house to 60 degrees in this part of New York state, where the outside temperature sometimes falls as low as 20 degrees below zero? The flow and return pipes for the new house will pass through the older one; will that raise the temperature sufficiently? What piping will be required for a temperature of 60 degrees in the new house? I can not find a plumber in this vicinity who has ever piped a greenhouse. What do you think of generators? Do they pay for themselves in the saving of coal? S. H.

The sketch submitted shows that the older house is 16x50 and the new house 15x60. The new house is built across the end of the older one, so that the two houses form an L-shaped structure, with the older house as the upper part of the L and with the boiler shed at

For the house 16x50—the upper part of the L—run a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each of the plates and connect these with two coils of four 2-inch pipes, one coil being on each wall or under the side benches. Where There Is Condensation the walls or under the benches. When the coils reach the other end of the house they should be joined to a 3-inch return pipe and this should be connected with one of the return ports of the boiler. The returns should, of course, be given a slight fall.

If the highest part of each of the flow pipes is connected with the expansion tank, there will be no need of air valves. By using generators one is able to heat the water to a higher temperature, and this would make it possible to get along with two less returns in each house.

STEAM IN SMALL HOUSES.

I am having trouble with my heating plant. I took out hot water and installed steam last year, so I could heat my residence from the greenhouse boiler. I am using the old pipe under my benches. I have found the pipes are scaly and stop up my pot trap, so that the pipes fill up with water. I am going to take all the pipes out this summer and clean them well. I would like you to tell me the proper way to pipe my house. I want to install a No. 1 Morehead return steam trap. Will it operate on fifteen pounds of steam? That is enough to heat my place. I have three houses, 20x60, running north and south. How many lines of pipe are required in each house to heat to 50 and 70 degrees, zero weather? We often have zero in this section of Ohio. Any information will be received with open arms by me.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

The location of the Dillon greenhouses was changed last fall to a new site nearby. The newer houses were removed and a new plant erected on a sidehill with a corridor at either end of the range, making it complete, with packing room, office and ice vault. The verbena, which made the place famous, is still largely grown, but more attention is paid to roses. Radiance is popular. A few Perles are still grown. J. L. Dillon, Jr., has taken charge and promises to make good.

Wm. Ahlers has purchased the plant formerly owned by the Bloomsburg Floral Co. and has it running in fine shape. Roses are the main crop.

TO CLEAN GREENHOUSE GLASS.

Can you tell me what is a good solution to use in cleaning glass in greenhouses? I have seen an advertisement of some sort of mixture for this purpose, but it would cost too much to purchase it in Chicago and have it shipped to this part of Oklahoma. W. W.

Without knowing what substance it is that you desire to clean off the glass, it is not easy to state what would be the best cleanser. If you wish to remove soot or something of that character, it will be necessary to use either a solution of lye or of caustic soda, both of which are easy to get and are not costly. But keep these solutions away from the putty as much as possible, and also from the hands of the operator, as the potash and soda are both injurious to putty or to the skin of the hands. W. H. T.

New Ulm, Minn.—George Dill, of St. Paul, has made arrangements for the construction of greenhouses here. Last fall he purchased three lots, one block west of the fair grounds. On that site he intends to erect two houses, each 18x100, and expects to be ready for business about April 15. His son, John Dill, who has been employed as an expert florist in one of the largest St. Paul establishments, will have active charge of the greenhouses here and the firm name will be Dill & Son.

The Market.

Trade has been extra good for the last week or so, with stock rather scarce; at times it was hard to get enough to go around. Funeral work has been heavy. Roses have been in fair supply and the quality is good. Killarney and White Killarney have been most in evidence, with quite a few Richmond and Beauty. Mrs. Aaron Ward has been coming in more freely and has been finding ready sale. This variety has been off crop since the holidays, but the outlook is for a heavy cut from now on, and it will certainly be welcome. Carnations have been good, but the cuts are not up to the records of previous seasons. Sweet peas are in good demand for corsage work. Violets are quite plentiful; the demand is about as usual. Bulbous stock is much in evidence, although narcissi are about done. Tulips are fine and the demand is good. Murillo is coming in quite plentifully now and stems have improved of late. Daffodils also are plentiful, with good demand.

Pot plants are selling well, mostly azaleas and bulbous stock, with a sprinkling of ferns and fern dish stock.

Various Notes.

Lloyd Woodrow, son of G. H. Woodrow, attended the inauguration at Washington. Mr. Woodrow, who has been seriously ill, is slowly convalescing. J. M.

Chittenango, N. Y.—A. R. Ellis, who started here five years ago without previous experience in the business, has had such good success that he has doubled his original plant and is thinking of building four or five houses 21x150. He has some calla bulbs the history of which can be traced back 100 years in this town.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business was much better during the last week and the Lenten season so far has had little or no effect in the cut flower trade. Roses and carnations are coming in more plentifully and are choice. Violets and sweet peas have been in good demand. Azaleas and bulbous stock sell well. Funeral orders continue to be quite heavy.

Various Notes.

Champion & Co. report funeral orders as being heavy. This week they have several wedding decorations.

At Jas. Bruce's range on Kensington street everything is in fine shape. He is cutting choice carnations just now and by next week his roses will be in full crop. Bedding stock is thrifty.

There always is an attractive window display in the store of the S. H. Moore Co. Funeral orders are reported as being heavy.

At the plant of the Doolittle Floral Co. stock is in fine shape for Easter. The lilies will just be right and the house of azaleas is right on the dot. Roses are coming along nicely and will be in heavy crop around Easter. Bedding stock, which is grown in immense quantities, is strong and thrifty.

Charles Munro reports funeral orders as exceptionally heavy and sweet peas and violets in special demand. This week he has two large decoration orders, one for Malley's, New Haven's largest dry goods store, and one for Mendell & Freedman's spring opening.

Andrew McCrea reports business as being entirely satisfactory.

Thos. Pattison, the West Haven florist, is shipping exceptionally choice callas. He reports a heavy demand for bulbous stock. He is cutting choice White Wonder carnations at present. Roses will be in heavy crop at Easter and he expects the larger percentage of his lilies to be on time.

At Jos. J. Sokol's plant everything is in good shape. His houses of lilies are exceptionally fine and the Spiraea Gladstone is certainly a grand lot. Carnations continue in heavy crop.

At Johnson's plant in Whitneyville stock is coming along nicely. For his Easter trade he has a nice lot of lilies, spiraeas, azaleas, cinerarias and primulas. Business is reported as being quite satisfactory. Mr. Johnson disposes of all the stock he can grow in his local retail trade.

THE COST OF GLASS.

Before the congressional committee considering tariff changes H. R. Hilton, secretary of the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers, testified that skilled labor in the industry in Belgium costs only 37½ cents for every dollar that labor costs in the United States, and unskilled labor 35 cents for every dollar that that labor costs in the United States. He declared that all materials used except coal are cheaper in Belgium and demanded an increased duty against foreign window glass. He said that sixty per cent of the cost of making window glass is in labor and salaries, twenty per cent in raw material and twenty per cent in overhead costs. He said that no dividends had been paid in the industry in recent years, but he attributed this to the fierce competition at home rather than to the competition from abroad. Mr. Hilton conceded that ninety-eight per cent of the window glass used in the home market is domestic and two per cent foreign. The democrats on the committee contended that this fact showed that the present rates were practically prohibitive of importations.

Asked whether or not the wages of glass operatives had not been reduced during the years of the Dingley and Payne tariff bills, he said it was, indeed, true, the reductions having been from twenty-five to forty per cent, but he contended this was due to the use of patented machinery in the making of glass. The hand manufacturers of glass, he added, all suffered from the introduction of the patented machines for making glass, and additionally there has been much overproduction. "The competition between the hand and the machine has been fierce," he said. "The machine men have been able to undersell us."

Independence, Ia.—John P. Murphy recently added two new greenhouses and he is now constructing cement benches throughout his range.

Menominee, Wis.—Joseph Wolff has a seedling carnation, something on the Winsor shade, that is a healthy grower, strong wooded and which possesses remarkable keeping qualities. The blooms are large and full.

Wagner Plant Boxes are the best and cheapest in the market for Palms, Boxwood, Bay Trees, etc. They are attractive in design, strong and durable, suitable for either indoor or outdoor use. Made of cypress, which gives them a lasting quality. We manufacture various styles and sizes. Write for prices. WAGNER PLANT CONSERVATORIES Sidney, Ohio

Two Neighbors' Experiences

BOTH of these are actual photographs of neighbors. By the merest coincidence our photo man happened along at just the right time to snap them. Are you like the man on the left, who bought roof bars that cost less than ours, and when he came to untie the bundles, the bars jumped all out of shape because of the unseasoned cypress?

Or are you "the happy folks" kind, like the man on the right, who paid more for our bars, because they were worth paying more for?

When he untied his bundles they lay as straight as when they left the mill machines.

There are no two ways about it, cypress is not fit to go into a greenhouse until it has air-dried for not less than two years.

Ours always is!

Then another thing—a grower doesn't expect to get as good a price for "the run of the cut" in his roses, as he does for his long-stemmed, selected ones.

Neither can you expect to buy sap free, sorted cypress as cheap as you can the "run of the mill" kind.

We sell only the one kind; and it's the only kind worth putting into your house.

Send for prices.

QUINCY, ILL.

Gentemann Bros. say their retail business has been steadily growing and the last year was one of the best in their career. The business was started by their father, C. F. W. Gentemann, over thirty years ago and the business has been conducted on the same site, although on a constantly expanding scale, ever since. The present members of the firm are Philip and Herman A. Gentemann, who are assisted in the business by their sister, Miss Minnie Gentemann. Their plant at 636 South Eleventh street recently has been remodeled and is now one of the best and most completely equipped in this section of the country.

In the year 1901 the two brothers assumed charge of the plant and had it thoroughly remodeled. The present plant is 80x200. The houses are steam heated. The firm not only does a good wholesale trade, but an extensive retail business. The wholesale end covers a radius of 150 miles.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The United States Cut Flower Co. is breaking ground for the addition to be built by King Construction Co. Richard King, the superintendent, says the returns for stock this season have been far above the average, which vouches for quality. Easter stock is promising; a large batch of lilies are just right. The method of transplanting carnations from the cutting bed to the bench and replanting outdoors has proved such a success that the entire stock will be treated thus this season. Mr. King expects to attend the National Flower Show with a special exhibit of Richmond roses.

H. N. Hoffman says it has been a banner season for his nursery business. While the price of fruits is much lower, really first-class stock holds its own.

John Rudy, the carnation specialist, is giving considerable attention to violets, of which there are not many grown in this section. He has a thrifty stock.

Get your plants out early

With Sunlight Double

Glass Sash you can have your plants and vegetables weeks ahead of the season

It's the $\frac{1}{2}$ inch air space between the two layers of glass that enables you to get earlier—sturdier plants.

There may be a hard frost outside, but no cold will penetrate the $\frac{1}{2}$ inch layer of enclosed air and your plants will have all the warmth and light that they need. The result is a quicker, sturdier growth, and you get the high prices of the early market.

Sunlight Double Glass Sash double your profits

They save you the expense—the labor—the worry of having to cover and uncover your sash with heavy covers of boards and mats. You can attend to twice as many Sunlight Sash as you can ordinarily sash. It is good business to have them. Write for these two books today.

You cannot afford to miss seeing them. One is a book by Prof. Massey, an authority on hot bed and cold frame gardening and the other is our free catalog.

They tell you how much more profitable you can make your gardening, and give some useful, instructive information on the care of beds. Send in your name and address, we shall send you our free catalog—for 4c in stamps we shall send you both books. Write today.

should appreciate the value of the fine points in good construction. Here are some of the fine points in the construction of GARLAND Trussed Iron Frame Houses

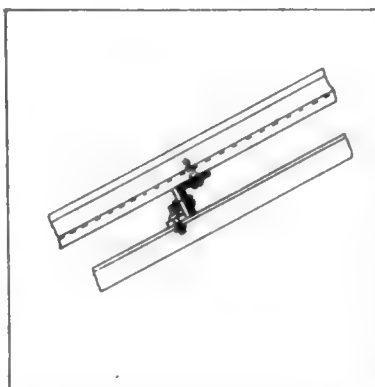

The Garland Semi-malleable Cast-iron Gutter and Drip Conductor is used in all our Iron Frame construction. The Garland Semi-malleable Cast-iron Eave and Drip Conductor is the only cast-iron eave on the market today. Both the gutter and the eave carry a continuous glazing strip and glass stop, as well as a large drip conductor. The wooden rafters are secured to gutters and eaves by brass screws.

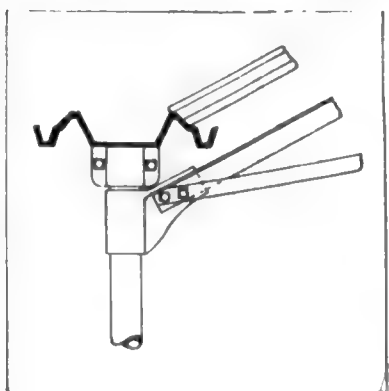

The Ridge Casting is made of the best grade of iron and is so constructed that it not only serves as a lock joint for the T-iron rafter, but also serves as an excellent support for the ridge.

The Angle Iron Purlin is securely of a small section of angle and four is punched for glass spacing. Rafters brass screws and not clips. The T-iron house structures. The T-iron has a angle because of its shape, and is therefore better able to resist buckling than other shapes of steel of like weight and size.

The Post Top, made of best grade of iron, holds the T-iron rafter in its socket joint and supports the gutter or eave plate. It is threaded to receive the post, making a solid joint throughout. The casting is counter-bored, so that thread is protected from corrosion.

The Cast-iron Down Spout is used for draining the roof water and consists of as many pieces of 4-inch cast-iron pipe as are needed and a 4-inch double hub cast-iron tee. Note that the drip conductor and pipe is tapped, into which nipples are screwed. Drainage of drip conductor is thus secured by connecting the nipples with a short piece of hose. Downspouts may be placed at any position or number of positions desired in the run of gutters. All downspouts are arranged to come inside the house.

The Cast-iron Footpiece not only serves as a good footing for the post, but also protects the post from corrosion. The Garland Cast-iron Footpiece is cheap insurance for your houses.

The Strike Is not Affecting us

Customers are no doubt aware of the serious strike of the ribbon weavers. Owing to our ample preparation and large stock we are giving our usual good service with no advance in prices, in spite of the general scarcity of some goods. Many, who have not tested our facilities before, will find it to their advantage to do so now.

We will not advance our prices until absolutely compelled to do so.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A MT. CLEMENS WEDDING.

The accompanying illustration shows a wedding supper decoration done recently at Mount Clemens, Mich., by August Von Boeselager, of that city. The table was seventy-five feet long and thirty-two feet wide. In the center was a pool of water 9 x 16, having in its center a pretty fountain. A strip of water five inches wide bordered the whole table and in this were arranged Winsor carnations and Paper White narcissi. Twenty-five bags of natural moss were used on the table, as well as 150 Lorraine begonias and 2,000 Romans, the begonias being supplied by Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia; twenty-five cases of smilax and 300 Christmas trees also were used in the decoration. In the center of the room was suspended a large bell and around this were a number of small bells, each of which represented a month in the year. At midnight the bells rang. Sleigh bells under the table also rang, while a large electric sign changed from 1912 to 1913, as it was a New Year's eve wedding. The bells and lights, 5,000 extra ones being used, were all controlled by one man.

H. S.

THE TREND OF THE TRADE.

Problems of Distribution.

There are those of the more thoughtful of the men observing the progress of events in the flower business who believe that the greater enterprise has of late been manifested among the producers rather than among the distributors—in other words, that the growers have outstripped the retailers. If the condition is as these persons believe it to be, some interesting developments are sure to ensue.

If it be true that the problem has become one of distribution instead of production, it follows that the retailers will be called on to take prompt action; that if, as a body, they do not keep up with the times, then some close-thinking, far-seeing, daring members of the retail branch will come out in front with new ways of merchandising the material at hand—either that or the retailing of flowers will pass into other hands. It will be another case of the survival of the fittest. If the stock is here it must be sold. How and by whom?

Mass Immobility.

The nature of the retail trade as it has been conducted has made it difficult to change as conditions change. It is not easy to teach old dogs new tricks, and it is even less easy, after a man has made at least a living in a certain way for many years, to turn him to a course almost the opposite of the one pursued so long. It would be difficult to change if we were so located that changing would do any good, but the majority of retail florists are outside the busy downtown centers and in the quiet backwater of business life. They don't know how to meet the competition of the man, possibly not himself a florist, who opens a flower store on the main street and applies department store methods to its management.

For the older florists who have followed the established methods, dealing principally with regular customers, giving the best service that was within their ability, charging fair fixed prices the season through, doing about so much business all the time, the increased production of cut flowers, when it began to be apparent a few years ago, meant little more than the easier filling of orders. Later it meant a little lower cost price and a little better profit. It did not mean much increase in volume of sales.

Then the price cutter came.

But the mass of the trade was immobile; it could not easily adapt itself to the new conditions. A few, it is true, have gone out after a big volume of sales at prices that made the profit depend as much on the buying as on the selling. In the big cities the department stores have either gone into the flower business or leased space for outsiders to run flower departments.

The Disparity in Prices.

At first the big buyers were given an indifferent reception. Some thought them an aid, others a menace. Then as production continued to increase they

But he uses only a small part of the stock that must find an outlet. So the big buyer steps in. He stands ready to take what most needs a market. Today he will have a rose sale; tomorrow, orchids; next day, violets; Monday, carnations; it is all the same to him. He must have a full line, but he works principally with the flowers that are most plentiful.

Of course the buyer who isn't particular what he buys, and will take the lot, gets a better price than the man who wants just certain varieties, grades and quantities. And the increasing proportion of the production that is being sold to the department store class of retailers, or to those who are trying to compete with them, is steadily pulling down the average returns to the growers. The only saving clause is that it is only in a bad glut indeed that much stock goes to waste.

Will Wholesalers Retail?

Much as the retailers are disturbed by the changing conditions, the wholesalers are in many instances still more discontented. Some of the growers and wholesalers feel that the retailers have not been sufficiently alert to broaden the outlet for flowers; they feel that the retailers have held prices up in the face of the rising tide of production and thereby added to their individual profits for the moment at the expense of the whole industry. It probably is not true that the retail florist has been enjoying a better margin of profit, all things considered, than has his neighbor, the butcher, grocer or dry goods man, but he may not have seen just how to increase his sales in just the way the grower would have liked.

At any rate, some growers and wholesalers think it may shortly be up to them to deal direct with the consumer.

Already several experiments are in progress in various parts of the country. This does not refer to those wholesalers who gradually added to their retail came to be an important factor. But all is not well.

The retailer who follows the old method, as nearly all still do, and who buys only selected stock, the kind his orders call for, not the kind the wholesaler wants to sell, pays a fair price.

sales until, when they found they could not well handle both, they preferred to let the wholesale end take second place rather than relinquish their retail customers. But it refers to those who, after relying for years on a wholesale outlet, have opened retail stores for the sale of their stock direct to the public. These experiments will be watched with keen interest. If they succeed, others are sure to try the plan, and if they fail it is by no means sure that the reason for failure will be rightly appraised. One of the peculiar things of this world is the number of people who can put their finger right on the weakness in the other fellow that caused him to fall down, who are sure they can succeed where the first man failed.

The growers who are going into re-tailing are not, it is thought, trying to take the retailer's occupation or profit away from him. They merely are saving their own bacon, as the saying goes. They see their returns decreasing while their expenses are going up and they fear that the facilities for production have increased faster than the facilities for distribution. They think they can see the day when the old methods will no longer serve their purpose and they want to figure out a new method before that day dawns. One grower has a chain of three stores, and several others have two retail stores each. It is simply going back to the beginning, selling, as thousands of successful florists in the smaller cities sell, the product of the greenhouses in one or more downtown stores.

THE GRAND ARMY EMBLEM.

The illustration on page 9 shows an especially good reproduction of the G. A. R. badge in flowers. It is the work of C. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan. Some who have made the badge will note certain variations here from the ordinary design. It is because this was the reproduction of the badge worn by an officer. From the florists' point of view the excellence of the design is that it was made on a broad green background. Usually the florist makes it without a background and he has his troubles in reproducing the flag in flowers and getting any sort of recognizable form. Here an actual flag was used, with only the metal parts of the badge in flowers and chenille. The cypas leaves add to the striking character of the illustration, though many will question the effect in the design itself, thinking they stand too far from the piece.

HYDRANGEAS.

C. G. Anderson, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., is not one of those who think that the new French hydrangeas will drive Otaksa out of the running as an Easter plant. In support of his contention that it takes something pretty good to displace Otaksa he presents the photograph reproduced to accompany this note. It shows one of the hydrangeas flowered for Easter by Mr. Anderson.

LISTEN TO 'ARRY!

This is from the Horticultural Trade Journal (British) of March 5:

"H. E. Philpott, florist, Winnipeg, Canada, who left Kent thirty years ago, is now on a visit to England, and attended the R. H. S. show yesterday. In the evening he was the guest of C. Engelmann, at the Horticultural Club, and afterwards attended a meeting of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, where he received a cordial welcome. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Philpott said he arrived at his destination in Canada with fourpence in his pocket, and had now retired from business with £25,000 to his credit."

CYPRESSENE.

Dr. Allan F. Odell, assistant professor of chemistry in the Louisiana State University, has undoubtedly performed a distinct service to humanity in his successful isolation of the essential oil, which he named Cypressene, as the result of a series of experiments with sawdust from cypress lumber and shingles. He claims, and other well known chemists agree with him, that this is the peculiar quality in the wood, cypress, that gives to it the lasting properties for which it has been famous since the earliest times.

It is now more than two years since Dr. Odell began his search for the property of endurance in this wood, and after trying other methods, he took as the last one available to chemists the "destructive" process. He placed 275 gallons of sawdust in a large iron retort and subjected it to a roasting, distilling the gases and steam. This process produced 125 gallons of distillate—a tar-like liquid composed of wood alcohol, creosote, acid common to all woods, and the much sought Cypressene. This latter constituent has never been found in the by-products of other woods when submitted to a like test, and he declares it is the peculiar property of cypress. He thinks it is the presence of this oil that gives to cypress its endurance when exposed to trying climatic conditions and the "wet and dry" of boat-building and greenhouses.

In a paper read before the Louisiana section of the American Chemical Society, Dr. Odell said: "Consider for the moment one use to which this tar oil might be put. In the creosoting of crossties and the like, oil from other woods is used, thereby quadrupling the life of the tie. Now, the crude tar oil from cypress, in addition to the creosote, contains a large amount of the sesquiterpens (which he named Cypressene) and this pressed into the tie would prolong the life of the tie indefinitely—for example, it should give to a hard wood, such as oak, the everlasting properties of the softer cypress."

If Dr. Odell is correct in his conclusions, and there seems to be no doubt among scientists that he is right, his discovery of the vital principle of longevity in cypress wood means much to those who are forced by business conditions to use lumber and timbers in exposed places. If hardwood may be given the unequalled properties of endurance known to be present in cypress a valuable discovery has been made.

It raises then the question of supply, and that is one for the cypress mills of the south to settle. At the present, as we understand it, not a large percentage of them are equipped for extracting the by-products of the wood, but no doubt they will properly equip to meet the demand, so far as possible, for this new wood product, Cypressene.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is a little improvement noticeable in cut flower conditions. Prices as yet show small advances only in certain lines, and no striking rise in prices seems probable for Easter. Usually Saturday is a good cleaning up day, but March 15 proved an exception to this rule, trade being excessively dull, and many flowers remained unsold. Roses are decidedly soft and prices are, if anything, lower than a week ago. High grade American Beauties are likely to be a scarce article for Easter. Hardly any are now to be seen and the demand for the short-stemmed stock is poor. A few of the newer varieties, such as Sunburst, Taft, Ward, etc., sell fairly well, but the older sorts are druggy. The demand for White Killarney, which has been good, has fallen off. Carnations are in a little better condition than roses. As most flowers are now off crop, it seems unlikely that there will be any decided advance in price even on these.

Violets have been having a hard time of it, but better things are looked for at the end of the current week, and the same is true of sweet peas, which are likely to sell well. Cut lilies sell all the way from $6 to $10 per hundred. Callas are going slowly. Bulbous stock has been quite a drug of late and prices have been unprofitable. Snapdragons are more abundant. Pink shades have the call over all others. The dark shades are hard to sell. Valley is doing a little better, and is likely to be in active demand for Easter. The call for cattleyas has been rather disappointing of late. Trianae is much more popular than Schrøderæ. Gardenias have been going rather slowly. The quality is exceptionally good. Quite a variety of miscellaneous flowers arrive. Sales on these are uncertain. For green stock the demand shows a decided improvement.

Pot plant trade is booming, and every local grower is pretty well sold out. It looks like a plant Easter again. Lilies are likely to be sufficient for all demands. Prices are $10 and $12 per hundred flowers and buds. Ramblers in many varieties seem to come second in popularity, but the sales of genistas, azaleas, bulb pans, acacias, etc., are all excellent.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 150 at the meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 18, in spite of the proximity of Easter. Several new members were elected. Edwin Jenkins gave a splendid lecture on sweet peas, which was followed by an animated discussion. Wm. Sim was awarded a cultural report of merit for grand vases of Christmas Pink, Mrs. Smalley and Florence Denzer sweet peas. There was considerable discussion on publicity, good progress being made. Arrangements were completed for the trip to the New York show, a large delegation being assured.

Various Notes.

The trade will learn with regret of the death, March 18, of the youngest child of E. Allan Peirce, a girl of 2 years of age.

F. W. Fletcher has renamed his new snapdragon, Melrose, finding that an English variety named Aurora was already on the market. Mr. Fletcher has several pink snapdragons with true veiled flowers, a great advance on the hooded type.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market will hold its flower show at the market on Park street, April 12. W. H. Elliott is chairman of the exhibition committee and an attractive lot of prizes has already been secured, including several silver cups.

Shamrocks were quite a feature in many retailers' windows this year. Galvin had one of his large windows attractively arranged with them. While there was a large sale of shamrocks, the supply was more than equal to the demand this year.

John Barr is one of the most successful of our local growers of carnations and no better kept commercial place is to be found in this vicinity. In addition to his fine variegated seedling, Mrs. B. F. Cheney, he grows White Wonder, White Perfection, Pink Delight, Gloriosa, Beacon and Winsor. His last Lord & Burnham house, 35 x 300, is now a grand sight, and he hopes to build more like it before long.

Penn, on Bromfield street, has been making a special line of rambler roses in baskets at $1.50 each and has had a great demand for them.

Geo. E. Buxton has a remarkable sport on his Killarney pink snapdragon, which he describes as having more the appearance of a hyacinth spike than anything else.

Great interest is being taken in the coming New York show and a large attendance from Boston and vicinity is assured.

F. J. Dolansky & Co. have a grand crop of cattleyas and gardenias for Easter. On the latter they have the field practically to themselves, as other growers seem unable to flower the plants in winter.

In Sydney Hoffman's window displays, which included a fine assortment of beautifully grown plants, some fine specimen dendrobiums from J. T. Butterworth's were noted last week.

G. A. R. Badge in Flowers by C. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kansas.

Thomas J. Grey, who retired from the firm of T. J. Grey Co., and sold out his interest in the business, has accepted a position with Joseph Breck & Sons, the firm with which he got his first insight into the seed business. Mr. Grey is one of the best known seedsmen in New England and is well and favorably known by a host of private gardeners, as well as by those in the trade.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy will be among those attending the New York show. Mr. Tracy reports the demand for gladioli as being remarkably good.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, and Mann Bros., of Randolph, are each cutting some fine Spanish iris.

Local growers and retailers are hoping that the weather at the end of the current week will be as mild as last week. March 15 we had a minimum of 58 degrees, a maximum of 68 degrees, and a real summer thunderstorm, for variety, at night.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. have the greenhouses at their Roslindale establishment entirely devoted to the raising of new Chinese plants, of which they have an immense stock. These will be grown at their new nursery on Cape Cod, where hybrid rhododendrons also are being finely grown.

Among visitors the last week were R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.; J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Thomas Knight, New York; John Ash, Pomfret, Conn. W. N. Craig.

Carnations

PETER OLSEM'S PET.

In Carnation The Herald Peter Olsem has carried forward the work begun by the late James Hartshorne. He began where Mr. Hartshorne left off. The Herald is the result of a cross between two of Mr. Hartshorne's unnamed seedlings, one of them having also been one of the seed parents of Harlowarden. The illustration on page 11 shows the house of The Herald grown this year by Mr. Olsem at the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill. The house contains 6,000 plants, from March struck cuttings benched in the first part of August. The house was in good crop October 1 and it was on the bench shown that the blooms were taken that won first premium in the classes for red at the St. Paul and Cleveland flower shows in November. The photograph was taken in January, when 15,000 cuttings had already been taken from the plants. To date 75,000 cuttings have been rooted and shipped, going into every state in the Union, which insures The Herald receiving a thorough trial next season. Orders on hand assure a sale exceeding 100,000 before the season is over. Both Mr. Olsem and Mr. Pyfer are well pleased with the way the trade has taken to The Herald and they say that the behavior of the variety in their house this season leads them to believe that it will have an even larger sale next year.

CARNATION BREEDING.

[A paper by William Stuart, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, read at a recent meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, at Washington, D. C.]

When I was invited by the chairman of your program committee to give you an address on some phase of carnation breeding, my first impulse was to plead a lack of ability, as well as of time to accept such an undertaking. The persistence and winning persuasive powers of your chairman, however, were of such a nature that I could not well do otherwise than accept his invitation, but with this understanding, that I would not be expected to occupy much of your valuable time.

It may not be inappropriate at the outset to say that my first interest in the carnation dates back nearly a quarter of a century, when as a young man I began a three-year greenhouse apprenticeship. This was prior to the day of the long-stemmed carnation, when such varieties as Boule de Neige and Alegatiere were in their zenith. Carnation breeding was little practiced in those days. The writer first became directly interested in plant breeding some nine years ago, when, as horticulturist at the Vermont Station, carnation breeding was indulged in partly as a diversion and partly to study some problems connected with the work of breeding. The results of some of these studies were presented in the twentieth annual report of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station in 1908, pages 355 to 358, under the caption of "Seasonal Influence in Carnation Crossing Relative to Seed Production." The conclusions arrived at from this investigation were that the early crosses—that is, those made in October and November—seemed to give a considerably higher percentage of successes, a much larger number of seeds per capsule; a higher percentage of germination and apparently heavier seed. The probable reason for better results from the early crosses was assumed to be the greater vigor of the plants rather than seasonal influence.

Norton's Theory.

In the winter of 1907-08, investigations were undertaken looking toward the corroboration or disproval of Norton's theory, expressed in December, 1904, with respect to the possibility of our commercial carnation being an unfixed hybrid between a single and a true double. Carnation seedlings were classed into three groups, singles, semi-doubles and doubles. The semi-double represented the commercial florists' type, and the double, what is known as the bullhead.

These investigations were pursued at the Vermont Station during the winters of 1907-08 and 1908-09, and in the greenhouses at the United States Department of Agriculture, at Arlington Farm, in 1910-11. The results of this inquiry are now embodied in a report soon to be issued in bulletin form by the Vermont Experiment Station.

The crosses which were made may be classed under five groups:

1. Single x single.
2. Single x double.
3. Commercial x single.
4. Commercial x commercial.
5. Double x double.

In the first group twenty-two crosses netted 354 flowering plants, of which all were single.

In group 2, single x double, forty-four crosses gave 1,004 flowering plants, of which four were single, 988 commercial and twelve double; percentages, respectively, of .4, 98.4 and 1.2.

Six crosses in group 3, commercial x single, resulted in forty-one flowering plants, of which twenty-one were single and twenty commercial; percentages, respectively, of 51.2 and 48.8.

Twenty-four crosses in group 4, commercial x commercial, netted 260 flowering plants, of which sixty-two were single and 198 semi-double and double; percentages, respectively, of 23.8 and 76.2.

In group 5 all efforts to cross double with double were unsuccessful. This is in direct corroboration of similar efforts by Norton. It does not necessarily prove, however, that such crosses cannot be effected.

In order that we may fully understand the significance of the above results, it seems desirable to enter into a brief discussion of the principles of heredity as exemplified in Mendel's law of inheritance.

Mendel's Law of Inheritance.

While you are all more or less familiar with the Mendelian theory of inheritance, it may not be amiss to present at this time a brief interpretation of it, in order that we may better understand the discussion which is to follow. In 1900 Hugo de Vries rediscovered an old paper by Gregor Mendel, which had been presented before a scientific society in Brunn, Austria, in February and March, 1865. This paper contained a detailed account of carefully conducted investigations with the garden pea, in which the inheritance of certain definite characters was noted. Only such varieties of the garden pea were selected for the work as had been proven by several seasons' culture to reproduce themselves absolutely true from seed. Another desideratum in their choice was that they possess opposing pairs of unit characters.

Mendel studied seven pairs of these opposing characters, one of which will be sufficient to illustrate the method he pursued. This pair of characters were round and wrinkled seed. These, being well defined characters, were easy to study and to interpret in the resulting progeny. It was found that the hybrids of this cross, or the F_1 generation, gave all round seeds and this character was therefore called the dominant one. In the F_2 generation, from self-fertilized plants, he found that there was a splitting up of these characters in a fairly uniform and definite ratio. On an average this ratio approximated seventy-five per cent round and twenty-five per cent wrinkled. The wrinkled pea was then said to be recessive to the round. In the subsequent generation, wrinkled seeds produced all wrinkled, while twenty-five per cent of the round gave all rounds and the remaining fifty gave wrinkled and round in the same proportion as the F_2 generation. From these data Mendel formulated the following numerical ratio for the F_2 generation of hybrids: 1:2:2, or twenty-five per cent dominants, fifty per cent dominant recessives and twenty-five per cent recessives.

Explanation of Terms Used.

To facilitate further discussion along this line, the algebraic expression $R + 2RW + R$ will be used to denote the numerical value of the hybrids, R denoting round, and W wrinkled, and RW the hybrid between R and W . In the hybrid RW the recessive W is written in the lower case, thus Rw . Such an expression always denotes an unexpressed or recessive character. For the purpose of further discussion, it seems desirable to introduce other terms which are inimical to brevity and to clear expression of thought. The first term to be considered is that of the gamete. This term is employed by the biologist to denote the sexual cells of a plant. It is supposed to contain all of the heritable characters of a plant or animal. The fusion of a male and female gamete results in the formation of what is technically known as a zygote. If the fusing gametes are of a similar constitution—that is, possessing identical unit characters, as in the case of pure strains of plants—the resulting zygote is called a homozygote, because it possesses a homogeneous constitution. On the other hand, if gametes of unlike constitution fuse with each other the resulting union is called a heterozygote, because it contains unlike opposing characters. Therefore each ovule and pollen grain developed in plants produced from the Rw seed would theoretically contain the R and W characters, and, according to the law of chance, would combine in about equal proportions. This may be best illustrated in the following manner:

Ovule

$R = - - - - - R$
 $W - - - - - W$

Equals $R + 2RW + W$, or the expression of 1: 2: 1.

It is important, however, to remember that Mendelian inheritance only gives such an expression as the above when the plants employed are gametically pure; that is, in which two opposing or contrasting characters do not exist in the same gamete. With this conception of Mendelian inheritance and the factors which govern its expression, we may now redirect our attention to the data previously submitted with reference to the results secured from crosses in groups 1 to 4.

In group 1 singles were crossed with singles, and it will be remembered that the resulting progeny were all single-flowered. In this case it is evident that the ovules and pollen grains of the single flowering carnation only contain the S unit character, and for that reason it is only possible for the parent plants to transmit the S unit to their progeny.

Singles Crossed With Doubles.

In group 2 we have an entirely different proposition. Here the female seed parent possesses the S unit, and the pollen or male parent the D or double character. By combining these we get the hybrid Ds , as follows:

Ovule

Pollen

Equals Ds . S being recessive, it is unexpressed.

Theoretically, then, the first generation hybrids all produce flowers of the commercial type. The data presented show that, while this was closely approximated, it was not absolutely attained. Of the 1,004 seedlings which were flowered, four produced single flowers, 988 commercial, and twelve were classed as doubles. In the light of our present knowledge there is some reason to doubt the accuracy of the observation upon the twelve doubles noted. It is quite possible that they may have been rather full-petaled bursters of the commercial type. However, be this as it may, the evidence seems to overwhelmingly support the idea that the single and double unit characters of the carnations are separate and distinct entities. The presence of a single plant in each of four crosses may be accounted for by assuming that, through some accident in making the cross or in emasculating the flower, a pollen grain from a single may have been transferred to the stigma from the forceps used in performing the operation. The percentages of singles, commercials and doubles from group 2 were respectively .4, 98.4 and 1.2. Theoretically, there should not have been any singles or doubles. As already explained in the case of the doubles, it is not at all certain that they were true doubles.

In group 3 a different set of factors are involved. Here we have the Ds hybrid ovules crossed with pollen from the gametically pure single. This cross is expressed in the following manner:

Ovule	Pollen
D - - - - -
S - - - - -	S

Equals D s + S.

While the data obtained from this cross are too meager to permit of much generalization, it nevertheless closely approached the Mendelian ratio. Theoretically, fifty per cent of the seedling plants should have produced single flowers and the remaining fifty per cent those of the commercial type. The figures actually obtained were 51.2 per cent single and 48.8 per cent commercial.

Slightly different factors were involved in group 4. In this cross we are dealing with the unfixed hybrid in both parents, and in consequence have the opposing unit characters in both parents as shown in the following diagram:

Ovule	Pollen
D - - - - -	D
S - - - - -	S

In this, according to the law of chance, the probable combination would be D + 2Ds + S, or 1:2:1. The diagram shows how these characters may combine. The data obtained from such crosses show that of the 260 plants flowered, sixty-two produced single flowers and 198 commercial and double, or percentages respectively of 23.8 and 76.2. The theoretical percentage should have been 25 per cent single and 75 per cent commercial and double. No attempt was made to distinguish between the double and the commercial.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A dull week was enlivened by a brisk business March 15, Saturday, when West Twenty-eighth street showed refreshing activity. There are, of course, calamity howlers who decry the market as "the worst ever," but an accommodating and statistical dealer, referring to his sales for the last few years, found that his sales for the corresponding week of 1912 were just 63 cents smaller, indicating that conditions are about the same as for the corresponding season of previous years.

American Beauties took a further tumble to 40 to 50 cents for specials, with no great business even at this low figure. The lower grades have also weakened. Teas are in good supply at 10 cents for choice blooms, down to 2 cents for culls. Choice long-stemmed Chatenays and Richmonds bring as much as 12 cents. Dark cattleyas bring 20 to 35 cents, or even 40 cents, and move off well. Schrøderæ continues dull and may be had at almost any price. The quotations range from 10 cents up. Carnations are looking up somewhat and for choice white as much as 5 to 6 cents was demanded on the eve of St. Patrick's day. Commission men who have been firm at these figures have sold some, but carried over more than they sold. Many, however, have sold at 4 cents. Despite the early Easter, lilies are plentiful and of good quality; 8 cents was the top notch for choice blooms last week. Valley shows a slight improvement, but is still far from strong; fine, long, freshly cut valley can be had at 3 cents and good flowers at a shade under that. Gardenias are quiet. Choice blooms are not plentiful. The run of the market brings $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are plentiful, particularly in the lower grades, which go as low as 10 cents per dozen bunches. For choice Spencer sorts as much as $1 or even $1.25 is paid. Violets are a little firmer, Governor Herrick bringing 10 to 20 cents, Marie Louise 20 to 30 cents and Princess of Wales 30 to 40 cents for long-stemmed flowers. The supply is abundant. Narcissus poeticus ornatus is a drug on the market at 75 cents to $1.25 per hundred. Paper Whites are less plentiful, the supply beginning to fall off. They bring $1.25 to $2. Callas attract but little attention, sales being made at the previous quotation of 60 cents to $1.25 per dozen. Hyacinths are giving out, but demand is correspondingly slack. Daffodils sold at 50 cents to $2. Southern supplies are arriving and go for a song. Tulips are quoted at $1 to $3 per hundred. Stocks are plentiful at 25 cents. Daisies bring 75 cents to $1.25 per hundred. Mignonette is in ample supply at 75 cents to $1. Supplies of antirrhinum exceed the demand at 50 cents to $1 per bunch.

The prospects, a week before Easter, were for an abundance of stock of all kinds and no specially high prices were in sight.

Various Notes.

The most interesting feature of the March exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, held at the American Museum of Natural History March 15, was a collection of cut orchids, the first prize for which was awarded to W. H. Waite, gardener for Samuel Untermyer. Mr. Waite was also awarded first prizes for an oncidium, a Dendrobium Wardianum and a Cattleya Trianae, all in bloom. M. Anderson, gardener for George W. Perkins, won two special prizes for displays of schizanthus and of primulas. A. Anderson, gardener for Mrs. F. B. Van Vorst, was awarded a special prize for a hybrid orchid. A handsome lot of Christmas Pink, Mrs. Alex. Wallace and Snowbird sweet peas shown by John Canning, gardener for A. Lewisohn, also won a first prize.

The New York seed houses uniformly report the "best season ever." And there are ample evidences of the accuracy of their characterization of the situation.

Peter Henderson & Co. are shaving off six inches of their Cortlandt street front in compliance with the requirements of the Bureau of Incumbrances, which has been rectifying the building line throughout the city.

James Daly's Sons have a fine show of bulbous plants of their own growing at their greenhouses, Nineteenth street and Ninth avenue, at the entrance to Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn. They have grown this year 20,000 lilies and 65,000 other bulbs and have had practically no failures. It has been a banner year with them. They grow other things besides bulbs; in fact, they grow everything they sell.

Frank McKee, of the Fulton Street Florist, was elected a member of the board of directors at the meeting of the Greater New York Florists' Association March 12.

Among the visitors last week were Frank K. Lamereaux, of Port Jervis, N. Y., and E. W. McLellan, of San Francisco. Mr. McLellan returned to New York from a New England trip, during which he visited the establishments of Thomas Roland, at Nahant, Mass., the Montgomery Rose Co., at South Hadley, Mass., and A. N. Piereson, at Cromwell, Conn.

Walter R. Siebrecht says that notwithstanding the depression in sweet peas, he is getting $1.25 to $1.50 for Spencers and other special lots. He also showed some fine bouvardia, which is scarce in this market.

The wife of James J. Hart, Jr., of West Twenty-sixth street, died March 14.

Sidney Bayersdorfer, Paul Berkowitz and Martin Reukauf, all of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, were in New York March 15 and looked over the floor at the Grand Central Palace with Secretary John Young, selecting a location for their exhibit at the National Flower Show.

A meeting of the ladies' entertainment committee for the flower show was held at the call of Mrs. Traendly, the chairman, at the Hotel Woodstock, Tuesday afternoon, March 18.

BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

An Excellent Exhibition.

Any fears held that the coming International Show in New York would adversely affect the exhibits at the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's spring show March 14 to 16 proved groundless, for few finer exhibitions have been held by the society. Messrs. Roland, M. H. Walsh and one or two other large commercial exhibitors were not represented this year, but groups from several large private estates made up these deficiencies. The show was well arranged, by James Wheeler, and the quality of the exhibits was unusually good.

For three Azalea Indica J. L. Smith, gardener to A. W. Preston, was first, and M. Sullivan, gardener to Wm. Whitman, second. Duncan Finlayson, gardener at Weld Garden, had the best pair of palms. George Page, gardener to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, was second, and William Whitman, third. For six ericas Mrs. F. Ayer was first, also for group of acacias covering 100 square feet. For specimen acacias Weld Garden won, with splendid specimens of A. longifolia and A. pubescens. For six hard-wooded plants of other varieties, second went to Weld Garden and third to Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner. For a group of rambler and other roses W. W. Edgar Co. took first prize.

Cyclamens were splendidly shown. For twelve plants W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, led, followed by Weld Garden and Mrs. J. L. Gardner.

First Prize Group of Cyclamens in Foreground of the Boston Spring Show.

For six specimens in not over 10-inch pots competition was close. E. H. Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, won. Weld Garden was second and Mrs. E. G. Weld third. For six Cineraria stellata, William Whitman was first and Mrs. J. L. Gardner second, the latter being first for six Cineraria grandiflora. Mrs. Lester Leland showed the best six schizanthus, immense specimens, with Weld Garden second.

The prizes for Dutch bulbous plants brought out an excellent competition. The leading prize winners were Dr. C. G. Weld, Wm. Whitman, A. W. Preston, Geo. Barker, gardener to A. F. Estabrook; R. G. Chamberlain, gardener to Francis Skinner; Mrs. J. L. Gardner and J. T. Butterworth, and in the amateur classes H. S. Rand and Miss M. A. Rand. Dr. C. G. Weld had the best twelve amaryllis and Francis Skinner won for six pots of longiflorum lilies. For general display of spring bulbous plants Mrs. J. L. Gardner took first and second with two fine collections.

For a group of orchids Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, was the only exhibitor. Some choice hybrids were included. For specimen orchid W. A. Manda won, with a finely flowered Phalænopsis Schilleriana. Mrs. Lester Leland was second, with Cattleya Percivaliana. Weld Garden was third.

The rose classes, as usual, were rather lightly contested, for, with liberal prizes offered and roses hard to sell in the markets, local growers should have made a better showing. For four varieties, twelve blooms each, W. H. Elliott won. He also was first for twenty-five Lady Hillingdon, first for twenty-five pink, with C. Miller, and second for Killarney, the Waban Rose Conservatories being first. They also took the silver medal for the best new rose, with Mrs. Charles Russell.

The carnation men made a good showing, the flowers being of uniformly high quality. For 100 blooms of one variety A. A. Pembroke took first and second. For fifty crimson W. R. Nicholson won, with fine Pocahontas. Scott Bros. were second, with British Triumph. For white A. A. Pembroke took first and third with White Wonder and White Enchantress, and C. S. Strout second with White Wonder. For fifty dark pink A. A. Pembroke took first with Rosette, and S. J. Goddard second with Helen Goddard. In the Enchantress shade class S. J. Goddard, C. S. Strout and A. A. Pembroke won in the order named, all showing splendid Pink Delight. For variegated A. A. Pembroke was again in the lead with Benora, James Wheeler being second with the same variety. In the Winsor shade class A. A. Pembroke and S. J. Goddard took first and second with Gloriosa.

Edward Bingham took first for both single and double violets. William Sim captured all the firsts for sweet peas, with superb flowers, being in addition awarded a cultural certificate for them. There were fine lots of antirrhinums shown. For twenty-five spikes prizes went to F. W. Fletcher, James Wheeler and Geo. E. Buxton.

There were eight entries for best table decoration laid for six covers. Mrs. Duncan Finlayson took first, having a lightly arranged centerpiece of Christmas Pink sweet peas. Wax Bros. took second, using a mixture of yellow marquerites and blue cornflowers. H. R.

Comley was third, using yellow roses.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits William Sim had a grand display of pansies and was awarded a silver medal. He also received a silver medal for an artistic display of Princess of Wales violets. Knight & Struck Co. showed a nice collection of ericas and other hard-wooded plants. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a general display. F. W. Fletcher had a table of antirrhinums, including his new waved type. Thomas Q. Watt showed orchids, strelitzias and statice. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received a silver medal for a fine lot of cyclamens. They also had a group of the yellow Jasminum primulinum.

Joseph Breck & Sons Co. received a silver medal for a collection of narcissi and tulips, including a number of the newer varieties. The Breck-Robinson Co. had a nice collection of evergreens and was awarded honorable mention. E. B. Dane received a silver medal for Brasso-Cattleya Rowena. T. D. Hatfield, gardener to Walter Hunnewell, had a large group of palms and Erica melanthera and was awarded a silver medal. W. A. Manda showed several novelties: Anthericum Mandaianum, Begonia Mrs. Kimball and Nephrolepis tuberosa plumosa received honorable mention.

S. J. Goddard received honorable mention for a seedling crimson carnation, No. 59, and H. A. Stevens the same award for his new shrimp pink seedling, Eleanor. F. R. Pierson Co. showed nephrolepis in variety. A. N. Pierson had Adiantum Farleyense and Rose Milady. Charles Sander had a beautiful display of single azaleas, crosses between A. Hinodigeri and other small-flowered azaleas, which attracted much attention and were awarded a silver medal. Eric Wetterlow had a nice basket of trained genista. W. C. Rust showed a nice collection of dendrobiums and foliage plants.

M. A. Patten had a fine vase of Carnation Princess Dagmar. Cottage Gardens Co. received a first-class certificate for the new white, Matchless. C. S. Strout had a fine collection of carnations, including Beacon, Benora, White Wonder, White Enchantress, Melody, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Winsor. Peter Fisher received a silver medal for Carnation Gorgeous. W. W. Edgar Co. had a display of genistas. W. N. C.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was rather quiet last week, as is always the case before a rush. The outlook for Easter is good and, with the present fine weather, this year will be a record-breaker. There is enough stock to go around, but no over-supply. For some time the growers have been forcing their stock and when last week we had exceedingly warm weather it looked as though considerable stock would be lost, but March 15 it turned cold and saved the day.

Azaleas will not be any too plentiful this year, as many came blind. The cut flower market is well prepared for the rush and when this is in print the local commission houses will be heels over head in flowers of every description.

Various Notes.

It appears as though the florists of the state of Michigan will win their fight against the two bills affecting greenhouse heating, which were presented at Lansing recently. The Detroit Florists' Club's committee has had this matter in hand on behalf of the florists of this vicinity and about all that remains to be done now is to pay the bills. Many growers locally and throughout the state have already responded to the call for funds sent out by Secretary Hugo Schroeter.

Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., is enthusiastic about Philadelphia carnation. Its beautiful color especially appeals to him.

A baby arrived at the home of Robert Klagge, in Mount Clemens, last week. The mother, who was formerly Miss Hattie Holzhauer, is doing nicely. With both of its parents florists, this little one will surely become a lover of nature.

H. G. Dreyer, of Dreyer & Sons, Cleveland, was a recent visitor in Detroit, where he showed many novelties in the way of plant stands.

Among the Detroit florists who will attend the New York show are Chas. H. Plumb and wife.

Taepke's have a fine stock of forget-me-not plants for Easter, which have met with a rapid sale.

Breitmeyer's had the decorations for the spring opening at J. L. Hudson's, which was more elaborate than ever before. Spring flowers were used.

Mrs. E. A. Feters is a strong advocate of woman's suffrage and is taking an active interest in furthering the equal suffrage cause.

Wm. Brown is mourning the loss of his chauffeur, who has been driving his delivery cars since their installation, but who now has gone into another line of work. H. S.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business last week was not quite so brisk as it has been, partly on account of the fact that most of the days were rainy. Funeral work, however, has kept the stores quite busy and there have been some few good dinner decorations. Everything is in readiness for the Easter business, which is expected this year to break all previous records. There is little doubt that there will be plenty of flowers to fill all demands and the probabilities are that the quality of the majority of stock will be good. The regular forces in the stores are being augmented by the addition of, in some cases, from fifteen to thirty bicycle delivery boys, and any stray decorators who happen to be in town toward the end of the week will be impressed into the service.

Club Meeting.

The annual election of officers, plans for a banquet to be held next month and the trip to the show in New York were the main items of business at the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club. As a result of the election Otto Bauer, of the Washington Florists' Co., will serve as president during the ensuing year, having defeated O. A. C. Oehmler by one vote. On motion of the latter, the election was made unanimous. The name of President David G. Grillbortzer had also been placed in nomination, but he declined a reelection. George Cooke was made vice-president, William F. Gude, treasurer, and Elmer Mayberry, secretary. After two ballots David Bisset and William Earnest were declared elected as trustees, from a field of six.

The annual banquet will be held shortly after the return of the members from the New York show. It was decided to have this affair open to ladies also, and to it will be invited the heads of the District government and other prominent men. Mr. Gude, chairman, reported his committee would have some good surprises in his "menu" of entertainment on that evening.

James Wilson, former secretary of agriculture, was elected an honorary member of the club.

The firm of J. R. Freeman had on exhibition a collection of about fifty carnations of standard varieties. The amaryllis presented by Mr. Burns, superintendent of the propagating gardens, elicited considerable admiration because of their size.

Various Notes.

S. Kann, Sons & Co., at their department store, are again holding a sale of rose bushes, vines and flowering shrubs, having in all a stock of over 10,000 plants, representing fifty varieties, all of which are being offered at 10 cents each. The plants are all two years old.

George H. Cooke has just returned from a vacation spent in Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

F. B. August, formerly with the Rosery, Winnipeg, Man., is now with F. H. Kramer. Mr. August, prior to going to Canada, was with Ratcliffe, in Richmond, Va. C. L. L.

Polo, Ill.—H. D. Davis is now sole proprietor of the Polo Greenhouses, formerly conducted by Davis & Cheeseman.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The weather of late has been almost too springlike and warm for the best interests of either the plantmen or the cut flower growers. The plantmen are exceedingly busy and the stock in general is just about right for Easter; some of the stock is a little "previous," but not more than usual. The wholesalers had their own troubles last week, trying to dispose of the quantities of bulbous flowers coming in, and not with the best success. Other stock is moving fairly well, except violets, which have been somewhat of a drug on the market. Easter orders are about as usual so far this year, though for some reason the retailers hesitate more each year about placing their orders early.

The retailers were favored with considerable funeral work last week, and in most cases they needed it, as there was not much going on socially. There has not been much special effort for Easter business so far, as the combination baskets of plants have not made their appearance, so that one does not appreciate the nearness of Easter. Palm Sunday does not affect trade much, if at all. Some southern daffodils have been coming in, but are not of much value; just the same, they help to keep down the price of home-grown stock.

Various Notes.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor in the city, drawing attention to a few lines of his stock, including his new red carnation, Commodore, which shows up so well that he disposed of a good number in this vicinity.

The thermometers registered 70 degrees above zero on Friday, March 14—the warmest March 14 on record.

The annual Easter show at the Phipps Conservatory, at Schenley park, will undoubtedly be finer this year than ever before. The earliness of Easter and the peculiar weather conditions caused Superintendent George Burke to give up the idea of forcing everything into flower at one time, and as a result the show will last longer than in other years. His arrangement of the display will undoubtedly please better than ever, as he has divided the large house into gardens. One room is a Dutch garden, which will contain all kinds of Dutch bulbous flowers. Another feature is a children's garden, containing all kinds of old-fashioned flowers. For the amusement of the children, there will also be chickens, rabbits, Guinea pigs, fish and canaries. A rose garden will contain over 2,000 plants, such as ramblers, Hiawatha, Tausendschon and a general collection of the hybrids. The collection of tropical plants and ferns is conceded to be the finest in this country. The show this year is the result of years of experience and reflects great credit on Superintendent Burke and his foreman, John Jones.

The Phipps Conservatory at North Side park, also under the management of Superintendent Burke and his foreman, James Moore, is ready for Easter. This show, though not so immense as the other, is the pride of the north siders. Among the special features are: A children's garden, somewhat after the style of the Schenley park one; immense rhododendrons in bloom; bananas in fruit; an immense Azalea Indica, nine feet in diameter, covered with bloom; fine effects with cinerarias, including the grand new scarlet one, Matador. Another house will contain forced shrubbery. Pittsburghers are certainly favored in having two such conservatories.

The duck pin team of the McCallum Co. defeated the team of the A. W. Smith Co., and the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. team defeated the Randolph & McClements team on Thursday night, March 16, but there will be no more bowling until after Easter. The scores will be found on another page, under the head of Bowling. The Street Fakers have issued a challenge to the Wholesalers. The team of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has won the last eleven games. Joe Byerly is the champion "south paw" bowler. John Sisley is the comedienne bowler. Billy Hall bowled three down the gutter and quit.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Harris on Sunday, March 16, a son. Mr. Harris already has quite a fatherly look and everybody is smoking.

There were a great number of visitors last week, including Thomas Murdoch, Titusville, Pa.; G. A. McWilliams, Natrona, Pa.; Miss Agnes Wells, Steubenville, O.; Miss Jane McDowell, Steubenville, O.; Mrs. M. R. Hill, Waynesburg, Pa., and Mrs. Winkler, Ellwood City, Pa. Clarke.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business for the last week has shown some improvement, largely due to an increase in funeral work, of which every florist had his share. There is enough stock to fill all orders, but no surplus. Roses are in crop again and are good, especially Killarneys and Richmonds. The Beauties, so far, are not as good as expected, but are improving each day. Carnations are also improving daily in quality and there will be plenty of them for Easter. Bulbous stock is more plentiful and seems to be ahead of last year's stock; this is probably due more to the open winter than to anything else. Pot plants are much in demand; the retailers are looking in every direction for them and orders are coming in unusually early.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has an enormous stock of pot plants for Easter and they are exceptionally good. The stock includes 3,000 lilies and a large variety of other plants. This firm has an exceptionally fine dark red seedling carnation, believed to be ahead of any other of its color, and will later place it on exhibition in New York.

Arthur Newell had a good run on funeral work last week and he reports that he is making big preparations for Easter.

E. H. Frandsen has a large portion of his Easter stock ready, although his roses were stunted on account of a boiler accident several weeks ago.

W. J. Barnes furnished the Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co. with 1,100 pot plants; 525 of these were blooming plants and 575 were ferns and palms. They were used for the spring opening.

Samuel Murray is making large prep-

SIDNEY BUCHBINDER.

WHEN the younger generation enters into things, new ideas and new energy usually crop up—then we say that "new blood has been injected into the business." So it is in this case, for Sidney Buchbinder is one of the members of the generation that is fast taking hold. He fairly lives with his business and his every thought is of it. Sales are first, last, and all the time with him, so it is hardly to be wondered that he writes "Salesmanager" after his name when addressing the trade. Being a member of the firm of Buchbinder Bros., Chicago, is second consideration to being salesmanager with him.

arations for Easter and he expects to sell a large quantity of pot plants at his greenhouses. He has a fine lot of Harrisii lilies.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is cutting a fine lot of flowers. The firm's pot plants are extra good, but the supply is only sufficient for the store in this city. Mr. Parker went to St. Joe last week.

R. S. Brown & Son report that their shipping trade in spring stock was extremely heavy last week. Mr. Brown has recovered sufficiently to be able to be at the greenhouses and he is slowly regaining his strength.

The Alpha Floral Co. had a heavy run on green carnations on Saturday and Monday. They received thirty-nine cases of extra fine lilies last week.

The W. H. Sawvel Floral Co. is cutting a fine stock of carnations and Asparagus Sprengeri.

Mr. Kane, of the Peterson Floral Co., expects to break away from jury service in time to be at the store for the Easter rush.

Jas. A. Biggam reports that he has been surprised by the large amount of decorating that he has been asked to do during the Lenten season. He has just had a busy week in funeral work.

Biedermann & Son have plenty of bulbous stock and pot plants for their Easter business, but are short on lilies.

Harry Smith has completed a new greenhouse, 25 x 150 feet, and expects to build two more immediately.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley reports that business was good last week and consisted mostly of funeral work. W. J. B.

Allentown, Pa.—Sawyer & Johnson are troubled with dust from a distant cement plant at their branch at Nazareth. They depend upon the home plant for the bulk of the stock carried in their handsome store in town.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The boiler house at the greenhouses of J. W. Smith, on Palmer boulevard, Knob Hill, was recently destroyed by fire. The report does not state the amount of the damage to the greenhouses or stock.

Rugby, N. D.—N. P. Lindberg, proprietor of the Rugby Greenhouses, has just completed a new boiler house and store. The boiler house is 20x60 feet, of reinforced concrete construction and thoroughly fireproof. The store is said to be one of the best west of the Twin Cities. The double task of superintending these building operations and attending to a heavy trade has made the season an exceedingly busy one.

La Grange, Ill.—The La Grange Floral & Seed Co. is now established in its handsome new quarters at 9 South Fifth avenue and already reports a gratifying increase in business.

San Antonio, Tex.—The local florists had the heaviest hail losses in their history a few weeks ago. At the nurseries and greenhouses of George C. Baker, Paul Poppe, San Antonio Floral Co. and the Mission Floral Co. the losses were heavy. In glass alone the florists have lost about $8,000. On top of that, many plants were beaten to the ground and destroyed. The hail was so heavy that it broke tile roofs on residences.

AFTER Easter, the National Flower Show.

STUART LOW is another Englishman well known in the trade who will attend the New York show.

IF the growers had to hustle to get their flowering plants ready after Christmas, before Easter, the bedding stock men will now have a long, leisurely course to Memorial day.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

A DETROIT society paper that carries a great deal of advertising for retail florists, in its Easter issue has a full page handsomely illustrated advertisement for the L. Bemis Floral Co., of which Albert Pochelon is proprietor. Mr. Pochelon is secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

How generally the trade is using the parcel post is shown, perhaps, by the frequency with which subscribers send The Review samples of their stock. The man whose carnations are in specially good shape cuts a dozen, puts them in a paper box, affixes a few cents in parcel post stamps and, as a consequence, the Editor's desk seldom is without flowers.

OBITUARY.

George W. Love.

George W. Love, of Unionville, Pa., died March 6, at the age of 78 years. His death was due to an attack of bronchial pneumonia. He was born at Kennett Square, Pa., in 1835, and was in the carpenters' trade for some years before engaging in business as a florist. He is survived by his wife; also by a daughter, Laura; a son, Charles, and a grandson, Harold Love. George W. Love was a member of Gen. Henry R. Guss Post, No. 1, C. W. V., of West Chester; Kennett Lodge, No. 475, F. & A. M., and Eastern Star Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he was secretary for forty-three years, having resigned lately. The Odd Fellows had charge of the funeral.

Philip Einsman.

Philip Einsman, treasurer of the New York Cut Flower Exchange, who had been in failing health for the last year or more, died at his home in Astoria, L. I., N. Y., March 13, at the age of 42 years. He was buried March 16. Mr. Einsman was vice-president of the New York Florists' Club for 1912 and was a member of the Society of American Florists. He leaves a wife and nine children.

ONE of the manufacturers of nicotine extract for greenhouse fumigating has announced that the increased cost of the raw material and the increased cost of manufacture have necessitated advancing his price to the point where the consumer will pay $17.50 per gallon.

GETTING THEIR MONEY'S WORTH.

The aim of every successful editor is to see how great a value he can give his readers. That The Review is succeeding in giving a rather better value for the money than the trade ever has had, there are visible signs; but the letters that come into the office, with subscription renewals, often mention this point:

Don't stop the paper; it is too valuable to miss for $1.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co., Raleigh, N. C., March 5, 1913.

We could not get along without The Review.—Lanning's Seed House, Nowata, Okla., March 5, 1913.

Here is your dollar; I can not get along any longer without The Review; I honestly think it is the best florists' magazine I ever have had the pleasure of reading.—R. A. Culbertson, Meadville, Pa., March 5, 1913.

The Review never likes to lose a subscriber, yet the paper is stopped promptly when the subscription has run out. An expiration notice is sent, but no subscriber is annoyed by the mailing of bills after the time for which the paper was ordered has elapsed, or by offers to settle for half the arrearages when the post-office regulations compel the stopping of the paper, as they now do, after a certain more than liberal limit has been reached.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

With Easter approaching, business for the last week has been steadily on the increase. While demand has been no more than normal, stock has cleaned up more readily than heretofore, with the exception of one or two items, including violets and the bulbous flowers that have been overplentiful all winter. The activities around the market, however, were those that are to be noticed when a big holiday rush is near and the decks are being cleared for action. Up to the time the first Easter orders were to be shipped the one idea was to have everything in shape for the rush when the time rolled around for the bulk of the stock to be moved out. Most of the wholesalers reported a fair number of advance orders on their books; in fact, the general opinion was that there were more orders filed early this year than for some time, owing to the belief that because of the early Easter lilies would be hard to get in the longer lengths; hence the out-of-town buyer was more anxious to get his order on the books than has been the case in previous years. The habit of waiting for the last minute to order has been growing and it was a welcome change for the wholesalers to have the orders on file. Monday saw a big rush of the out-of-town mail and each delivery brought in the demands from all sections. St. Patrick's day orders had just been disposed of and it made plenty of work in sorting the orders and putting them in shape for attention when the stock is to be shipped.

The great shortage reported is in American Beauties. Of these there are nowhere near enough to supply the demand. While good crops are not far off, there are few coming in at present and those that are being shipped are not a credit to the market. Indeed, the quality of most of the Beauties is so poor that the out-of-town retailers have largely cut them off their standing orders and have not ordered many for Easter.

Other roses are in big supply, the crops with many growers being at about the highest point. Killarneys are especially strong and of fine quality in both color, size of bud and foliage. There is every indication that there will be enough of these to go around. Although prices had not been stiff up to the opening of the week, there was a tendency to advance as the week grew older. Carnations likewise are in good supply. For St. Patrick's day there were large quantities cut, but there were not enough whites to satisfy the demand for flowers to color. Of the pink and other colors there were more than enough, for there was hardly any demand outside of the white. Bulbous stock was still moving slowly with the start of the week, but began to sell better as Easter approached.

Violets have been and are in tremendous supply. The grower who has not a full crop is the exception to the rule and the Chicago market seems to be doing rather better than others, for there never was a time when so many growers were shipping here. Sweet peas are not so plentiful as they were and poorer flowers are making better money. Orchids are not plentiful and prices are advancing. Stocks are in, but do not sell specially well. Callas are more plentiful than at any time this season; they are expected to sell well if lilies prove short.

Smilax has become scarce and southern floods are interfering with the shipments of wild smilax.

A Difference of Opinion.

At the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club March 6, it was voted to lay on the table the matter of designating an official route to the next S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis. But under date of March 10 postal cards were mailed to members, stating over the name of the chairman of the transportation committee that the Great Western had been selected by the club. At the meeting March 6 the sentiment appeared to be strongly opposed to the Great Western and in favor of one or the other of the standard lines, the Northwestern or the St. Paul. The Cook County Florists' Association has already chosen the latter. "It was a surprise to me," said President Guy French, March 14, "that such a notification should be sent out before the members of the club had voted on the proposition. The club ordered the matter held open and until the next meeting no choice will be made. It was not my understanding that the committee was vested with power to make a choice, but was merely to make a recommendation. If it has been the custom in the past for the committee to make the choice I believe that it would be to the interest of the club to make a change in this regard; in fact, the action taken at the last meeting shows how the members look upon the matter. Whatever road is selected at the next meeting of the club will be the official route and invitations to eastern and southern clubs and individuals will be sent out asking them to join us."

Over the signature of Ed. C. Toepel as secretary pro tem the following notice was sent out March 17:

"Special Order of Business of The Chicago Florists' Club. President French announces that the special order of business for the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be: The election of a secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Wilder S. Deamud, who is leaving the city permanently; to receive the report of the transportation committee, and to decide on the official route to the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis. A full attendance is desired."

W. N. Rudd, president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, and R. J. Haight, secretary of that organization, have their shoulders to the wheel in preparation for the spring show that opens at the Art Institute April 1. President Rudd announces that Mr. Shehan, of the Evening Post, has been appointed press agent. In the midst of the Easter work the trade has given little attention to the show, but it is expected that interest will develop with a rush as soon as the Easter business is over. The society is figuring on a peony show in June, a gladiolus show in August and an aster show later. Handsome posters announcing the spring show were distributed last week. The Art Institute people are counting on the show attracting the largest crowds in the history of the institution.

N. J. Wietor says that a big week's business comes just in time, for Monday morning's mail brought notice that Wietor Bros. are assessed $4,100 as their share of the cost of a sewer to be laid in Devon avenue, on which the greenhouses front.

A. L. Randall is preparing to leave shortly after Easter on a European trip. He plans to visit all the principal centers for florists' supplies.

Al Fischer, the well-known bowler and north side retailer, was arrested St. Patrick's day for failure to show the license number on his delivery car. He had thoughtlessly slung an extra tire where it obscured the number. The boys in the market think it an excellent joke.

Winterson's Seed Store has a unique window display. It is the Barney lawn sprinkling system working away full force, each nozzle being covered by an inverted goldfish globe.

John Poehlmann spent the greater part of St. Patrick's day going through the greenhouses of his company at Morton Grove.

Frank Johnson, sales manager for the A. L. Randall Co., is receiving congratulations over the arrival of a daughter, March 14, at his home in Rogers Park.

John T. Muir has opened his downtown retail store, in the new building at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street. He occupies a fine store on the Monroe street side. The Williams' Flower Shop is in the basement of the same building.

C. W. McKellar says that, far from losing popularity, green carnations were in greater demand this year than on previous St. Patrick's days.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says that violets will be the wholesalers' Easter problem, the crops far exceeding those of any other Easter.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg's big motor truck has an even greater advantage than the hour it saves each trip from the greenhouses to the store—the opportunity it gives for calling in an extra load of stock whenever late orders find the store ice-boxes empty.

The most remarkable carnation blooms ever seen in Chicago attracted a steady stream of trade visitors to the store of C. W. McKellar March 14 and 15. There were eight flowers. The exhibitor was H. Roth, of Lafayette, Ind. Each bloom measured a full five inches. It is a big, full, fringed red seedling, about the color of Beacon, the boldest and most striking carnation thus far seen here. Mr. Roth said he has about 300 plants, and that it is so vigorous a grower that he can propagate a large quantity any time he gets ready to sell the stock. Most of the local growers had a look at it the two days the vase stood on Mr. McKellar's counter. Mr. Roth stated that it is not a chance seedling, but the result of breeding up from a cross made twelve years ago, the variety being now in its sixth generation. He says he has received several offers for the stock, but has not yet decided on his course. He is building this year.

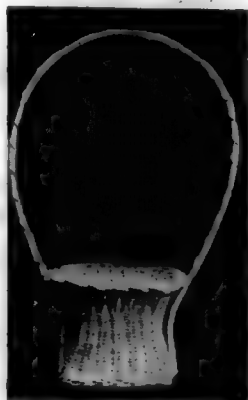

Paul M. Bryant, formerly with E. H. Hunt and the Foley Mfg. Co., now is associated with the Paine Co., in the Corn Exchange building.

W. E. Lynch, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., says the present indications are that the wild smilax shippers will be hard pressed to fill orders after Easter.

Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, was walking around on crutches for a couple of days last week as a result of injuries received from a fall. He was storing boxes on top of the ice-box when he missed his footing and fell.

Harry Manheim, of Hoerber Bros., said the advance orders on file for Easter shipment were heavier than usual this year. Long-stemmed lilies were featured on most of them, it apparently being the opinion of the out-of-town customers that there would be a shortage in these.

Allie Zech and William Lorman won the special prize offered to the two Cook County Florists' Association bowlers making the highest scores in open competition.

roses as was expected a few weeks ago.

The demand for pot-grown roses for Easter has not been so heavy the last two or three years as formerly in our city; nevertheless, there will be a good supply of Crimson Rambler and a few other varieties. Spiraea, both pink and white, is growing in popularity and there will be a good supply of these. A few hydrangeas will be ready for Easter.

There is a heavy supply of carnations of all colors, but there will be no surplus, as American Beauty roses are scarce and there are none too many Killarneys. Our growers have timed their lilies just right this year, and everyone seems to have a good supply of strictly high grade stock. Violets are abundant, and the supply of out-door stock that is handled by the drug store and peddled on the streets has not caused the price to decline as yet. The sweet pea supply is abundant, perhaps the most abundant of any time this season. Valley is in fair supply. Hyacinths are abundant and are selling well. In more protected localities they are blooming nicely outdoors. Daffodils from the open are being sold as low as 5 cents a dozen on the street corners. Good Emperors, properly grown, are still selling in the flower shops at 50 to 60 cents per dozen, and seem to be pretty closely cleaned up.

Various Notes.

T. H. Joy spent two or three days visiting the rose growers in the vicinity of Chicago, exhibiting his new rose, a sport from Killarney. He reports great interest in this rose. He is propagating several thousand and intends to introduce it to the trade next season. Mr. Joy means to grow one full house for cut flowers the coming season and says that he will exhibit it at all the flower shows. We understand that one grower is favorably enough impressed with the rose to place an advance order for 12,000 plants.

Joe Browne, proprietor of the Lischey Gardens, has been keeping several crews busy the last two weeks planting hedges and ornamental shrubs. His nursery grounds look as if a cyclone had struck them, so much of the stock has been moved.

Hillcrest School Farm has completed a 60-foot propagating house, principally for perennial plants and hardy ornamentals.

E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was a Nashville visitor last week.

Geny Bros. have a heavy stock of fine lilies for the Easter trade. We understand that they are having a good out-of-town trade in these.

Haury & Sons have had a wagon on the street with some good plants, and their store has been unusually attractive. They have a full crop of prime lilies for Easter.

McIntyre Bros. are cutting a heavy crop of sweet peas. They have had their place looking like Easter for a week and if they do not get their part of the trade it will not be because they do not have a good display. F. B.

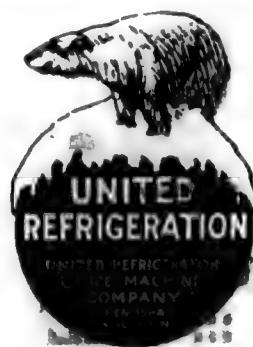

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The business the first day of this week was just fair. There was a good demand, but everyone seemed to be resting on his oars, awaiting the strenuous times at the end of the week. Locally, however, the week, even without the holiday business, promises to be a good one, for many flowers will undoubtedly be used at the funerals of some well known folks who died the first part of the week. With the Easter demand to top off, the market should be kept cleaned up the entire week.

Roses continue of a good quality and in quantity should prove adequate for the Easter demand. American Beauties and Richmonds, however, are none too plentiful. For the last few days the carnation market has tightened considerably. It cannot be told as yet whether the growers are holding for Easter or the crop is going off. The call for white for March 17 was good, but the wholesalers could not quite realize the price they had figured to get. Easter lilies will be in large supply, but the chances are they will clean up in a jiffy. All of the offerings so far have been good. Many good callas are coming in. Small bulbous stock, such as tulips, hyacinths, jonquils and daffodils, is in large supply. Practically all of the stock is good. Sweet peas have been selling well. Now and then a wholesaler loses some, but an occurrence of this kind is the exception rather than the rule. Other offerings, none of which, at the time of this writing, are selling any too well, are valley, orchids, excellent gardenias and single and double violets. Some fine stocks are offered.

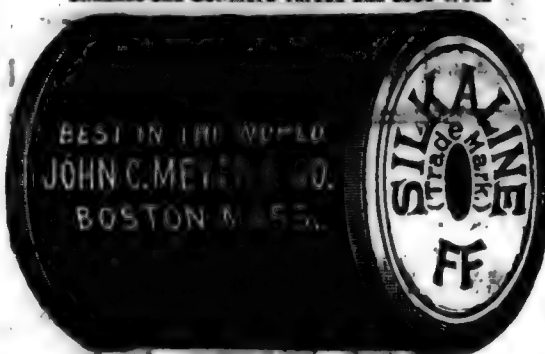

The supply of greens is adequate. Owing to rains in the south, some dif-

A FEW FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW

CIRCULATION OF AIR

Do you know that the circulation system in our refrigerators is the most perfect of any on the market; that the air is kept in continuous motion; that it casts the greater amount of chilled air in the compartments; melts the ice evenly and works like a clock in extracting out all odors, without permitting the pent-up cold air to escape (a remarkable feature of our trap) and keeps the flowers fresh?

INSULATING MATERIAL

Do you know that the insulating material we use is (mineral felt) the most reliable and satisfactory, and that it is glued on each side of a dead air space; that it has many advantages over other fillings, as it cannot settle in the walls, leaving the ice chamber unprotected?

BUCHBINDER CONSTRUCTION

Do you know that our refrigerators are noted for high quality, from the treatment of the lumber to the posts, joints, etc., of our construction—from our linings to the heavy brass hardware and lasting finish?

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market is quite active when the immense quantity of plants now absorbing the interest of the buyers is considered. There is not a heavy supply of flowers and the demand has been sufficient to take most of them at fair prices. St. Patrick's day caused a slight advance in white carnations, which found their way, dyed an Irish green, into many a coat lapel. Southern daffodils continue to arrive without making much impression; they are in quite a separate class from the magnificent blooms of Emperor and Sir Watkin that are produced under glass. The weather has been erratic, often quite unfavorable to production and lasting qualities, many flowers arriving too open.

Indications for Easter point to an unusually good supply of violets. It is thought that the Hudson river district Marie Louise will stand first, then the singles and the Hightstown doubles. Sweet peas also promise well. There will be more short and medium-stemmed roses than fancy stock. Carnations are not likely to increase in numbers. There will be an excellent supply of cut Easter lilies, a heavy cut of valley and a moderate cut of callas. Cattleya Schroederæ is likely to be unequal to the demand. No other cattleyas are in bloom here. Beauties will be scarce. A funny condition exists: the only Beauty grower hereabouts who has a real crop obtained it in two houses by aiming for Christmas! Not a good shot, you will say, yet he is one of our best growers and he has certainly hit the mark squarely.

The Floracraft Greenhouses.

A model range, neat, light, airy, filled with Easter stock in prime condition. That is Floracraft. The hydrangea is the principal Easter plant. These are a gorgeous sight, the soft pink of Otaksa harmonizing with the creamy white and contrasting agreeably with the deep lavender of the French varieties. They are so even and so well flowered that just to see them is a pleasure. One block of French varieties reserved for a certain buyer was especially beautiful. There are 20,000 tulips for Easter, three-fourths of them Murillo, exquisitely pink, the remaining fourth divided between the Prince of Austria, the American-Beauty-colored tulip; Couronne d'Or and Flamingo. They are all well grown. The lilies are multiflorum of good height. Edward Ross has reason to be proud about the condition of the place. There are good spiræas, ferns and, last, perhaps best of all, an immense quantity of lily of the valley. Barney Malloy, who brought the valley king's crown and scepter to Walter P. Stokes, is in charge. The flowering of the pips has been reduced to a fine art, with wonderful results.

EASTER

GREETINGS

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO.

1129 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.

The Market.

Everything is in readiness for Easter. There is an abundance of plants for the occasion and cut flowers are all that can be desired. Roses are plentiful, with the exception of Wards, American Beauties and Richmonds. Killarneys, Tafts and Hillingdons are extra fine. Sweet peas are overabundant and it is difficult to dispose of all of them. Carnations are the best they have been this year and will bring a good price for Easter. Violets are only fair; there will be an ample supply for the Easter trade and the price will remain moderate. Valley is fine. Cut white lilacs, cut deutzias, mignonette, marguerites, forget-me-nots and Narcissus poeticus are prime favorites now. Daffodils, bicolors, Thomas Watkins and Golden Spur, are plentiful and excellent in quality. In flowering plants, azaleas, lilacs, rose bushes, Easter lilies, spiræas, rhododendrons and fancy plant baskets are to be had in great numbers and the demand for them is strong. Hardy ferns and asparagus are somewhat scarce.

There was quite a demand for St. Patrick's day novelties, green carnations, shamrock arrangements, etc.

Various Notes.

M. Aitken's greenhouses at Agawam were open to the public on Sunday, March 16, to give the residents of Springfield and vicinity an opportunity to see the magnificent Easter display of azaleas, spiræas, deutzias, lilacs, rose bushes, lilies, hyacinths, etc. He has a great many Easter lilies of good quality, which will all be disposed of at Easter.

Nelson F. Higgins had a fine window of spiræas and Tausendschon rose bushes last week, which made an attractive display.

Miss S. Fischer was on the sick list recently.

J. W. Adams & Co. report that the spring nursery trade looks quite promising and that, since the season is so far advanced, business will begin about March 20.

Easter Ribbons---Chiffons

Buy them from the manufacturer and at the lowest market prices.

Pine Tree ribbons stand 'way out ahead of all other ribbons; the finish, the weave and the silk stock stamp them ribbons of character. The prices are no higher than common, ordinary ribbons.

Our new booklet is ready for you and we will be very glad to mail you copy.

Do you know of any reason why you should not have the best ribbons and chiffons for Easter? The best line is the Pine Tree line.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

An indication of the Easter activities was given last week in the increased call for potted plants in bud, and in the inquiries concerning the prices for cut flowers for Easter week. Business on the whole showed a big improvement during the week, with the usual amount of funeral work. The advent of St. Patrick's day so close to Easter had its effect upon the situation, as large quantities of white carnations and roses were used for "greening." Shamrocks were much in evidence and sold well.

Various Notes.

F. Macrae & Sons had several thousand fine lilies, which they handled to excellent advantage.

L. Dimond & Sons, Inc., purchased the entire stock of plants from the greenhouses of Edgar L. Nock, at Roger Williams park, for Easter offerings.

Frank Buffington, of Fall River, Mass., was in the city last week, making purchases or arranging for his Easter supplies.

G. A. Harwood, representing Giblin & Co., Utica, N. Y., was in this vicinity last week, talking boilers to the greenhouse men and others.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was a visitor at Boston last week, looking for specialties for the Easter trade.

The material for the new greenhouse to be erected by Albert Holscher at his range on Hartford avenue arrived last week from the Lord & Burnham Co. Work will be commenced in a few days.

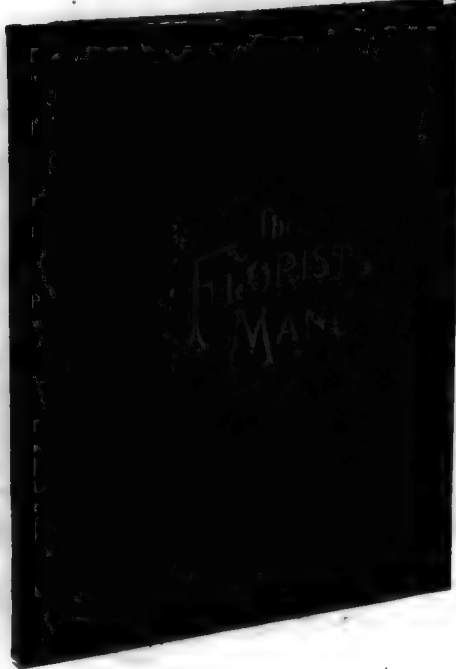

L. R. Harden, with the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, was a recent visitor in this city.

Richard M. Bowen, treasurer of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, was elected vice-president of the New England conference on rural progress at the annual meeting at Boston last week.

Frank L. Budlong has just added a forty-four horse-power Pope-Hartford touring car to his private garage.

A visit was received last week from Harry P. Hodgkins, representing the Moore Seed Co., of Philadelphia.

The funeral of Dr. John C. Parker, a surgeon in the state militia, and of William A. Copeland and Charles G. Bloomer, prominent manufacturing jewelers, accelerated the demand for flow-admiration, were entertained by the greenhouse quartette and orchestra, composed of greenhouse employees. The crowd of flower lovers were drawn from practically every walk of life. And the fact that every one was welcome, regardless of condition, brought out a mixture of persons equal in contrast to the colors of the flowers on display. This is a noteworthy event in Denver, being one of the few free large flower shows, and the courtesy shown by the greenhouse management to the public in giving them this opportunity to enjoy the flowers just before Easter is evidently appreciated.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 30%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 30% allowed senders	113.20
Net value of orders	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

The Southwestern Market.

The market showed a lot of activity last week, some days being rushing. The supply of stock was large and all orders were filled in full. The cold wave, with snow, which came along March 15, hurt the transient trade considerably. The prospects are excellent for this week, should the weather be fine.

During the last week I found the market had plenty of extra fine quality roses in all varieties, the great bulk of them being the Killarneys. American Beauties of fancy quality were scarce. Carnations were abundant in all varieties. Whites had a big call to be used for greenery for St. Patrick's day. Sweet peas and violets continued in oversupply and cheap prices prevailed on these. Lilies, valley, tulips and Von Sions are among the best sellers in bulbous stock. There will be plenty of Easter lilies and callas this week. Asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengerii, had a big call, also leucothoe sprays and wild smilax.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, March 13, this being the annual carnation meeting. The attendance was unusually large. The meeting was held at the club's meeting rooms, in the Odd Fellows' building, and the exhibition of carnations was staged at the store of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. The meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock by Vice-president Charles Young, with an attendance of nearly fifty members. The trustees and the publicity committee made their monthly reports. The publicity committee came in for a vote of thanks for the good work for Valentine's day. There were a great many communications read by the secretary, which were ordered answered and filed. W. S. Wells, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, and Alexander Waldbart were elected to membership. M. Mundt, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., made application for membership. All delinquent members were given until next meeting to pay last year's dues.

A discussion came up as to the advisability of inviting the American Carnation Society to hold its next meeting here. On motion it was decided that the club was not in position to extend an invitation. The trustees

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

 Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders	113.20
Net value of orders	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

W. E. Trimble

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market showed a lot of activity last week, some days being rushing. The supply of stock was large and all orders were filled in full. The cold wave, with snow, which came along March 15, hurt the transient trade considerably. The prospects are excellent for this week, should the weather be fine.

During the last week I found the market had plenty of extra fine quality roses in all varieties, the great bulk of them being the Killarneys. American Beauties of fancy quality were scarce. Carnations were abundant in all varieties. Whites had a big call to be used for greening for St. Patrick's day. Sweet peas and violets continued in oversupply and cheap prices prevailed on these. Lilies, valley, tulips and Von Sions are among the best sellers in bulbous stock. There will be plenty of Easter lilies and callas this week. Asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengerii, had a big call, also leucothoe sprays and wild smilax.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, March 13, this being the annual carnation meeting. The attendance was unusually large. The meet-were instructed to start preparations for the club's annual outing and report at next meeting if it is to be a boat excursion or a picnic as usual.

Alex. Geranios spoke for the Retail Florists' Association on "Publicity." E. W. Guy spoke of the Peoria meeting of the Illinois Florists' Association. The treasurer's report showed a good balance on hand. The meeting then adjourned and the members in a body visited the carnation exhibit at Smith's. After a thorough inspection the members were invited to a fine spread. There was plenty to eat, drink and smoke for the big crowd, which stayed until closing time.

The following consignors to this market made exhibits:

Vennemann Bros., of Kirkwood, Enchantress and White Enchantress.

Adolph Ahner, of Kirkwood, White Enchantress, Sangamo, Beacon, White Wonder and Ward of extra fine quality.

O. C. May, of Kirkwood, White Enchantress.

The new plant range that is being erected by the Pierson U-Bar Co., of New York, at the Missouri Botanical Garden, is nearly completed. It will be turned over to the directors early next month. The garden will exhibit several novelties never before displayed, at the National Flower Show, and has offered $500 to be awarded for the most meritorious plant, either flowering, foliage or economic, which is absolutely new to commerce. Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-first annual convention at Cleveland, June 24 to 26, 1913.

FIELD peas are reported short, something not usual.

VISITED CHICAGO: Ralph M. Ward, of Ward & Co., New York.

SEASONABLE weather from now on will cheer the hearts of the counter trade people.

SOME short varieties of beans, that were to come out in decent force, have failed to arrive.

JOBBERs of the navy bean report a depressed market, but their guess is that it will not last long.

GOOD rains in southern California have brightened the seed crop prospects there, especially on sweet peas.

WE hear no complaint from Rockford as to lack of orders. R. H. Shumway reports that his people are about snowed under with them.

THERE is no longer a chance for cheap onion sets until this year's crop comes in. The market at all points is up and this spring's prices are likely to be as high as last year.

THE Northern Seed Co., which was organized last fall at Cass Lake, Minn., is greatly pleased with the volume of trade already secured and is planning to go into the business on a much larger scale.

MANY of the onion growers of the central west are intending to plant a good proportion of bulbs for seed this season. Last season's good prices for market onions cut the seed acreage down considerably; as a consequence, seed of the Globe varieties, especially of the Red Globe, is in shorter supply than usual this spring.

THE waste in the 1912 onion set crop has completely reversed the early indications. Instead of there being a surplus, with low prices, the loss has been such that there is no oversupply and strictly first-class sets are held at steadily stiffening prices. Cars that do not grade up to the requirements of the best trade may still be had, however, at prices that look cheap until the stock is inspected.

ALEXANDER FORBES, for twenty-six years vice-president and general manager of Peter Henderson & Co., having purchased the controlling interest in the firm of J. F. Noll & Co., Newark, N. J., has opened a stand in the Cortlandt street terminal, New York, and will make a special feature of the filling of orders for commuters. Orders left in the morning will be ready for the suburbanites to pick up on their way home at night.

It is beginning to be questioned if the trade is not in wrong on the parcel post. When the law was forming it was the general opinion that the zone system would prove cumbersome and that the trade would be better off under the old arrangement. The regulations for package mail do not, however, give the seedsmen the advantages they expected to retain and, in the middle west at least, the idea is gaining ground that seeds and plants should come under the parcel post.

EVERYONE seems to be satisfied with the business of the year so far.

Is the California climate changing, especially with respect to rainfall, or is it merely the common experience that seasons run in cycles, several dry being followed by several wet, and vice versa? At any rate, the San Juan and Santa Clara valleys again are considerably behind in necessary precipitation this season.

WHILE the peas grown for seed last season in Montana and Idaho did not turn out in every respect as well as had been hoped, unusual weather conditions are held largely responsible and the acreage will be materially increased for the 1913 crop. Practically all the large growers have been active in the new territory almost all winter.

THOSE FREE SEEDS.

The government asks for the lowest bid,
And the seedsman quotes the price.
Now, who shall be first to sit on the lid,
Is the question that cuts the ice.

The spring poet puts it right, for the seedsman is not blameless so long as he continues to quote prices when he knows that the bid he is pricing is for the purpose of the free seed distribution. It is quite proper to insist that the government has no right to distribute ordinary seeds free of charge, but as has been heretofore stated in this column, the seedsmen are putting themselves at a disadvantage by quoting, and being seemingly anxious to get the government order. It is not overlooked when a seedsman is urging everybody to "write your congressmen to oppose free seeds," and his name appears at the same time in the list of those who are bidding for the order.

FORBES' NEW VENTURE.

The following is from a Newark, N. J., paper of March 8: "With changes just made in the firm of J. F. Noll & Co., Inc., local seedsmen, at 115 Mulberry street, the management of the business has been taken up by Alexander Forbes, for twenty-six years connected with the firm of Peter Henderson & Co. He was vice-president and general manager of that concern. Mr. Forbes has been the most active spirit in the effort to put an end to the practice of free distribution of seed by the federal government at Washington."

EXPERIENCES WITH NOVELTIES.

Every year I try out the current novelties, and I shall here report some of my disappointments, for other growers may be as greatly interested in a list of the varieties that failed as in a list of the successes. Of course, it is not considered that my trials serve as an ultimatum or final decision, for soils and seasons differ. However, prospective cultivators may be so warned by others' experiences as to proceed more cautiously with reference to certain red-letter novelties than they otherwise might.

First, the Davis cucumber was disappointing to me. On sandy, clay loam soil, although it produced good vines, the fruit was slow to set and it was not till late in August that marketable quantities were picked. I ransacked the seed catalogues, and while nearly everyone recommended Davis' Perfect for outdoor planting, still I found at least one catalogue that did not advise its use for such planting, but only for forcing. I think Vickery's suits my ideas of a forcer better than Davis' Perfect.

Three sweet corns tested out poor in flavor. It is possible that many people would like them, but not our household. The three delinquents are Burpee's Catwaba, Bell's Maple Sugar and Henderson's Golden Rod. Among all the varieties we tried last season, we and our epicurean friends were most pleased with Golden Cream, which is a variety resulting from crossing Golden Bantam and Country Gentleman. Early as Golden Bantam, luxuriant in growth and prolific of ears, with a quality of grain that is superb, it is an ideal variety of sweet corn.

The Early Prolific Bush Lima was weak in growth, with small seeds. Burpee's Bush Lima is much better.

One of my great disappointments last year was in the Early Detroit tomato. The vines grew vigorously, much like Dwarf Champion, but the crop came on late and was quite inferior. For early red tomatoes give me a select strain of Earliana; in purple fruited, Livingston's Globe; in late red, the Coreless.

Breadstone Swede turnip showed up rather inferior with us. Bell's World's Fair turned out to be the best of all we tried. Burpee's Neckless rutabaga is fine and of rapid growth.

Among radishes, Crimson Giant Turnip, while growing large, as seedsmen claim, is uneven in contour and off in color. The Scarlet Globe and White-tipped Scarlet Turnip radishes are favorites in Detroit markets.

As a planter loses a whole season generally by making a mistake in the choice of varieties for his planting, he may be thankful that a knocker now and then warns him of varieties that may "act up."

Since the element of time is so pronounced in his affairs, it behooves every trucker to set aside a plot for the testing out of promising varieties under the local conditions on his own soils.

PALMER WINS AGAIN.

In the case of William J. Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y., against the state department of agriculture, to recover the value of 2,260 azaleas and rhododendrons destroyed by order of Calvin J. Huson, commissioner of agriculture, because gipsy moth egg-masses were found on one of the plants, Justice Pound March 13 handed down his decision directing that an appraisal be had of the value of the plants destroyed and that Mr. Palmer be paid for the same.

Some time ago the case was tried before Justice Marcus and a jury on the

Boddington's Quality Cannas

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option. Remember, you may deduct 5% if cash accompanies the order.

Stocks of Cannas are getting very low everywhere. We advise ordering immediately, to avoid disappointment.

issue raised and the court directed the jury to find a verdict that Mr. Palmer was entitled to the peremptory writ of mandamus. The matter then came before Justice Pound on an application for the appraisal. In his decision he says:

"The commissioner had no facts before him upon which he could decide that every plant was infested with gipsy moth. He could, on the facts, only decide that there was reasonable ground to believe that they were so infested. Destruction without compensation is the rule where the facts may be shown with certainty. In other cases an appraisal should be had. So ordered."

Some time prior to October 16, 1911, Mr. Palmer had received a shipment of azaleas and rhododendrons from Belgium and they were at his greenhouses in Lancaster. October 16 two inspectors from the state department of agriculture visited the greenhouses and found an egg-mass of the gipsy moth on one plant and evidence that another plant had been similarly infested. They telegraphed to the department asking for instructions and some days later got telegraphic instructions to destroy the whole ship-

GLOXINIA ERECTA SUPERBISSIMA

Having during the past season been requested to secure some specially fine Gloxinias for exhibition purposes, we have made arrangements with a noted Gloxinia specialist in England to reserve for us some of the most distinct types. The bulbs are not so large as the Named Varieties, but this is a characteristic of most Erecta superbissima varieties.

BODDINGTON'S IDEAL PRIZE GIANT MIXED. Great variety of superb colors.

CYCLOPS. Velvety carmine, shading to a broad white border, throat dotted with dark red.

DUCHESS OF YORK. Flowers of a rich dark blue, each petal being edged with a broad band of white. A most striking and lovely variety.

SPOTTED HYBRIDS. Whenever exhibited, they create intense interest. The delicate markings, in an infinite variety of forms, add a special charm to the flowers.

SUTTON'S WHITE. A giant white flowered variety.

DUKE OF YORK. Large scarlet Gloxinia with deep white edge to each petal. A magnificent flower.

HER MAJESTY. This exquisite Gloxinia is still unsurpassed by any other white variety. The flowers are as pure as newly fallen snow, and are borne on short stems, just clear of the elegantly recurved foliage.

READING SCARLET. In color this is the most brilliant Gloxinia in existence, being an intense glowing scarlet variety of the true Crassifolia habit. An admirable companion to Her Majesty.

GOLIATH. Violet and white, fine variety.

LILIUM FORMOSUM.

Many lily growers do not favor this variety, owing to the trial they probably gave it when it was comparatively new and unselected.

But right here let us say that it is impossible to get better lilies from any kind of lily bulbs, for winter flowering, than you can get from the right stock of Formosum.

There is more difference in Formosum than most people realize. The process of assortment is now going on, in fields where attention is given to quality.

Horseshoe Brand Formosum, size 9/10, which have bloomed this winter, have given from eight to eighteen flowers. That is, the selected stock. Next fall's delivery is expected to be as good, if not better.

Any florist who cannot make money on Horseshoe Brand Formosum 9/10, had better put on a kilt and take in washing for a living.

The price of a single case of this selected stock is $20, and it is the best investment in lily bulbs today that any man can make. Order now—don't wait until it's too late.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The bulbous stock is about at its height now, immense numbers of daffodils, hyacinths and other kinds being sent in. The whole of the stock is good and, if fresh when shipped, will carry well to all points. A number of letters shown to the writer during the present week indicate that both the service and the quality of the flowers shipped from Los Angeles are excellent. Violets are plentiful and sell fairly well. Good roses from indoors sell well at fair prices and are in good supply. Large rhododendrons, cyclamens, primulas and ferns are the best plants to be had now, with a few good Japanese azaleas. Easter lilies are scarce. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Luis F. Carrillo, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., paid a flying visit to the city March 8 to 10 and left again on the Southern Pacific for New York, via New Orleans, on the evening train at the latter date. Mr. Carrillo expressed himself as delighted with the country hereabouts. He leaves for an orchid collecting trip to South America, March 19.

A new propagating house, 18x60 feet, has been built at the Palmyra Nursery by the Lanns brothers, in addition to the new lath house and office.

G. Rossi & Co., of San Francisco, are about to open a wholesale house here. Several locations have been considered, but at the time of writing none had been decided on.

W. W. Felgate, gardener for Dr. Barlow, Sierra Madre, grows some of the finest antirrhinums in this vicinity. He was in town with some grand varieties March 10, the yellow forms being especially good.

Howard & Smith opened their new store, at Ninth and Olive streets, March 8, with a fine display. The immense floor space was almost entirely covered with fine palms, azaleas, beautiful forced wistaria plants and a number of the fine amaryllis for which the firm is famous. A fine location and perhaps the finest store building in the country, with the resources of this well known house behind it, seem to forecast great success.

C. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, has received his new automobile, a fine Buick.

W. Armacost & Co. sent in a first consignment of Easter lilies to the Los Angeles Flower Market March 10. It was fine stock, well flowered and finished.

The Star Nursery, of Montebello, is sending in large, well flowered plants of Japanese azaleas, daphnes and Wistaria Sinensis.

Rhododendrons formed the principal window decoration at the store of the Hayward Floral Co. last week, arranged with baby roses and Moutan peonies. H. Reeve Darling has purchased a No. 36 Chalmers-Detroit.

The H. N. Gage Co. is always to the front with anything likely to be of interest to the retailer, and a fine showing of orchids of other kinds than the ubiquitous cattleya has been made here during the last two weeks. I noted good Lycaste Skinneri and Dendrobium nobile, both fine and well colored.

Polder & Groen are shipping fine pansies and myosotis to this market.

Fred R. Hills has bought a new Reo car and is already quite an expert in handling it.

The new rooming house for the help is now completed at the Dieterich &

Turner place at Montebello. This will add considerably to the comfort and convenience of the men.

M. L. Germain has made another trip north on business connected with seed legislation. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

From all accounts, business is going to be good at Easter. Lent has been quiet, aside from funeral orders, which

THE NOVELTY OF THE SEASON "RAMONA" THE NEW RED CHEROKEE ROSE

This sensational and magnificent new climbing rose occurred as a sport from the well-known Pink Cherokee (Rosa Sinica, var. Anemone). It is a stronger and more rampant grower than its parent, and produces during the spring and early summer months flowers in such profusion as to entirely cover the plant; in autumn there is a secondary crop of bloom. The flowers are much larger than either the pink or white forms, with brilliant golden-yellow stamens and broad petals of a glorious carmine-crimson color; an unusual shade, wonderfully striking and effective; the foliage is absolutely mildew-proof, a rich, glossy green, so bright that it appears as though varnished. The life-like illustration in our advertisement in The Review of February 20th, showing blooms and foliage natural size, pictures its beauty stronger than mere words.

The original sport occurred on the nurseries of Messrs. Dieterich & Turner, at Montebello, California. They, realizing its value and great beauty, propagated over one hundred thousand plants, from whom we acquired the entire stock. This is indicative of our faith in its value, and its coming popularity is attested by the fact that we have already booked orders for many thousands of plants, hence we feel that we are safe in stating that "RAMONA" will have the largest first season's sale of any new rose ever offered to the American trade.

"RAMONA"

will be of special value as a garden rose to the entire Pacific Coast, the Southwestern, Gulf and South Atlantic States; it will prove hardy as far north as Philadelphia. For planting on pergolas, pillars, porches, etc., it is a rose of unique and beautiful effect; in addition, it makes an elegant hedge plant if properly trained and pruned, affording a relief from the stereotyped privet hedges, with the added value of a rich display of color.

We are offering plants of "RAMONA" at the following prices, cash with order:
In lots less than one hundred: From 2-inch pots, 35 cents each, $3.50 per dozen; from 3-inch pots, 50 cents each, $5.00 per dozen; from 5-inch pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per dozen.
In lots of one hundred to five hundred: From 2-inch pots, $20.00 per one hundred; from 3-inch pots, $30.00; from 5-inch pots, $60.00.
In lots of five hundred to one thousand: From 2-inch pots, $125.00 per thousand; from 3-inch pots, $150.00 per thousand.

Parties desiring to list "Ramona" can be supplied by us with copies of the colored plate shown in The Review of February 20th, at the rate of $3.50 per hundred, $30.00 per thousand; larger quantities at special rates.

have been numerous. The weather has changed somewhat from that of last month, and while not as much stock has been brought to town, the general quality of it has been better. Carnations are a shade higher in price; so, also, is most of our bulbous stock. All the early varieties of narcissi and daffodils are over, but we still have the later sorts. Freesias are scarcer than they have been. There are plenty of Dutch hyacinths and valley, which move fairly well. Tulips are still plentiful and sell at low prices.

For the Easter plant trade there will, apparently, be an abundance. Azaleas, although not as plentiful as last year, are in good shape. Cyclamens, begonias, hyacinths, genistas, wistarias, lilies, lilacs and various ferns and palms are seen everywhere. Easter lilies, though not abundant, will be in sufficient quantity to supply everyone. They cost the retailers from $2.50 to $4 per dozen for the cut stems and about twice that price for the pot-grown.

L. Randall Co., called on the local retailers and those of the bay cities last week.

Word comes from Ukiah, Cal., of the death of J. S. Thomason, who was well known among Pacific coast nurserymen. He was 65 years of age and had been in the retail trade on this coast for over twenty years.

Charles Bachman, for many years with the Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, is on a visit to New York and various eastern points. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.The Market.

With the Easter rush a few days ahead of us, everything is being arranged in preparatory work. A few weeks of sunshine has put the stock in fine shape. Lilies came out wonderfully. The outlook several weeks ago was discouraging. All other stock is in accordance. Spiræas, azaleas, rhododendrons, ramblers and hydrangeas are about the variety of plants offered. Roses and carnations are coming in with a big cut. Lily of the valley, violets and all varieties of spring flowers are in profusion. Outdoor stock of bulbous flowers is rapidly being forced out. Trees and shrubs are putting out buds on all sides. Green is a scarce commodity, almost impossible to get locally.

Various Notes.

Wm. Martin and family have returned from an extended trip to California.

Louis Scott, representing Pacific Pottery Co., has been out calling on the trade through the northern part of the state.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 10. The regular business was preceded by boxing and wrestling matches. Several of the trade took part in the bouts and are aspirants to the semi-professional class.

A. Kakuda, representing the Yokohama Nursery Co., was a week-end caller. He reports trade satisfactory.

The usual street fakers and small stores are in evidence. They disappear when the summer comes.

George Robinson has given up the leased range of George Betz and, with his family, has left the city.

CARNATION BREEDING.Nature of Doubling in Carnations.

While it has not as yet been possible to make an especially careful study of the nature of doubling in the carnation, sufficient information has been derived from an examination of several hundred flowers to enable us to say that many factors contribute toward doubling. The simpler and more common ones are those of the multiplication of petals, by proliferation, the conversion of stamens into petals, and the development of supernumerary buds inside the flower but outside the ovary.

The presence of supernumerary or adventitious buds seems to imply a tendency of the flowers in which they occur to advert to the bullhead type of flower. It is certain that their presence in the flower is accountable for many a bursted calyx, and in such instances it may be necessary for us to revise our current notions that a bursted calyx is due to an inherent tendency in the plant to produce weak calyxes, or that it is the result of unfavorable temperatures or conditions of growth. True, it may be that the presence of supernumerary buds may indicate an inherent weakness in the plant, but have we a right to say that this weakness is solely one of an imperfect calyx? In the light of our present knowledge, it would appear that we must look for some other explanation. It is evident that whatever determines the presence of these extra buds must be due to some inherent factor in the organic hereditary constitution of the plant. In all probability these changes occur in the earliest stages of the development of the bud. Until careful cytological studies have been made of this phenomenon, our conception regarding the determining causes of the presence of adventitious buds must be a purely speculative one.

Commercial and Double.

Recent observations on the behavior of supposedly commercial and double flowering plants would seem to indicate that the number of petals per flower varies greatly throughout the season. Seedlings which apparently produce good, typical commercial flowers during the early part of the season, or until the middle of January, began to develop many blooms which to all appearance were of the bullhead type. Our attention has also been called to an apparently opposite case, in which a seedling plant, producing bullheads in the early part of the season, began to develop flowers bordering on the commercial type.

Our present knowledge would lead us to believe that there is a considerable degree of seasonal fluctuating variability in some of the seedling plants. This variability has also been noticed in the Enchantress and Mrs. Ward, and no doubt is more or less common in other full-petaled varieties.

Advantages of Single-Double Cross.

Thus far in our discussion we have simply aimed to present a report of the results which have actually been secured from the various crosses mentioned. Our present effort will be to show that the single-double cross may offer some advantages to the plant breeder which are not found in the commercial-commercial crosses. In the first place, it has been shown that the resulting seedlings of the commercial crossed with the commercial yield approximately twenty-five per cent singles, fifty per cent commercials and twenty-five per cent doubles. In other words, the possibility of securing a really desirable seedling is limited to fifty per cent of the progeny. In the single-double cross the breeder has 100 per cent from which to make his selection. The advantage, therefore, of the two crosses is as fifty to 100 in favor of the single-double combination. In addition to this, we might mention, it frequently happens that quite desirable colors occur in the singles, particularly in scarlets and crimsons. The singles are also, as a rule, free blooming, and many of them produce flowers with long, stiff stems. They are also, as a rule, more vigorous than the commercial types. Similar desirable characters are often found embodied in the bullheads, and with intelligent selection of the parent plants it should be possible to secure a reasonably large percentage of promising seedlings.

There is another factor which we have not as yet mentioned, but which seems to be clearly emphasized by our investigations, and that is with respect to the average number of seedling plants produced per cross. Our data show that the single-single combination produced 16.1 per cent plants per cross; the single-double, 22.8; the commercial-single, 6.8, and the commercial-commercial, 11.3. While it is recognized that a repetition of similar crosses might not corroborate these figures in whole, it is believed that the general results are indicative of greater vigor in the progeny of the single-double combination. Certainly, when these data are considered in connection with the fact that the single-double cross gives, theoretically at least, 100 instead of fifty plants from which to select, one is impressed with the greater desirability of employing such a cross when attempting to produce or create new varieties. We are well aware that such suggestions are directly at variance with present recognized practice, but nevertheless it is believed that the plant breeder can well afford to give it some consideration.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held March 12. President Brown occupied the chair. Mrs. A. Fletcher was elected an honorary member and S. Brackett, of Locust Valley, an active member. The exhibits of plants and cut flowers were specially good. James Duthie, of Oyster Bay, exhibited three varieties of Freesia Tubergini. The colors in this freesia are pleasing and they are sure to become favorites for conservatory and house decorations. The varieties were Dainty, La Phare and Sweet Lavender. The society's prizes for the exhibits of the evening were awarded to A. MacKenzie, P. Charbonneal and J. MacDonald. A certificate of culture was awarded to J. W. Everatt, for a basket of fine mushrooms; honorable mention to J. Ingram for narcissi, and to J. Duthie for carnations. A. Wilson, representing the plant oil firm of that name, was present and offered a substantial cash prize to be put up put up at the next fall show. It was decided to hold the next meeting April 16 at 7 p. m., and prizes are offered for twelve roses, mixed, twelve Darwin tulips and one calceolaria. J. M.

"I HAVE 150 varieties of peonies," says W. E. Fryer, of Mantorville, Minn., "but 100 of them never should have been named—and you can guess how it is with anyone who advertises 1,200 varieties."

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

H. H. LINVILLE, of Highland, Cal., is clearing two acres additional leased land for from 60,000 to 70,000 citrus trees.

L. C. RICE & SON, nurserymen of Tropico, Cal., recently purchased eighty acres of ground and are preparing it for use. They expect to plant 500,000 olive trees.

THE publicity idea has reached the nursery trade: some of the growers of fruit trees want to see a united effort by all the parties at interest to increase the consumption of fruit.

C. D. OLDERSHAW, of Bakersfield, Cal., has secured the contract for the supplying of $600 worth of nursery stock to be planted in the parkways constructed on Truxtun avenue, in that city.

W. J. PALMER, florist at Lancaster, N. Y., is successfully prosecuting a claim against the State of New York because an inspector destroyed 2,260 azaleas when he found an egg mass of the gipsy moth in one plant.

GEO. H. WHITING, the nurseryman of Yankton, S. D., recently purchased the stock of the Volin Nursery Co., owned by T. J. Douthit, and took a force of men to Volin with the intention of getting the stock ready for removal and closing out the nursery.

GRAFTING QUINCES.

Will you kindly tell us how to graft the quince? We have good success with apples and pears, but failed with quinces last year. M. S.

Portions of apple roots are best to use when grafting quinces, splicing them closely to the scion. These roots materially aid the scion in becoming established. Some growers remove them after two or three years, when the trees are of sufficient size to be set out in the orchard. Quince stock can be used when budding is done. C. W.

THE STANDING OF MEMBERS.

In all the trade organizations except the American Seed Trade Association the only requirement for membership is the payment of the fee—hand the money to the secretary and be at once admitted to the full privileges. In none except the seedsmen's organization has there been any investigation of the applicant's standing or a vote on his admission, except, perhaps, some of the trade's credit and collection associations. The New England Nurserymen's Association purposes to add to the value of membership by passing on the qualifications of those who would enter. At the recent first annual convention at Worcester the following was adopted after much discussion and reconsideration:

"The members of this association shall be persons residing in, and engaged in the growing or selling of nursery stock in New England, and shall be approved by the executive committee."

A membership committee was appointed, one for each state, to present names for the consideration of the executive committee, as follows: Chairman, Geo. C. Thurlow; Connecticut, C. R. Burr, Manchester; Maine, Herbert Jackson, Portland; New Hampshire, A. P. Horne, Manchester; Vermont, F. H. Horsford, Charlotte; Rhode Island, D. A. Clarke, Fiskeville; Massachusetts, Charles R. Fish, Worcester.

THE STARK FAMILY TROUBLES.

The announcement that W. P. Stark had asked for a receiver for the Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co., as a reporter put it, came "like a thunderbolt from a clear sky," to the people of Louisiana, Mo. In regard to the suit, E. W. Stark, president of the company, says:

"It is not true that exorbitant salaries are being paid. As a matter of fact, the three leading officials of the company are being paid just one-half of the salaries drawn by W. P. Stark, ex-treasurer, his son and son-in-law in past years.

"In 1911 W. P. Stark made demands for salaries that the company refused to pay, and his resignation was filed voluntarily. After two months' absence he returned and resumed his old relations at the invitation of the directors. the same day for the east on the company's time and expense to negotiate for a valuable new peach. Instead of so doing he entered into an agreement to get control of the peach for his own benefit instead of for the company.

"While W. P. Stark was still an officer of this company his son, with whom he is associated, started a rival company and W. P. Stark was then and still is indebted to this company. These and various other reasons compelled the majority of the stockholders to dispense with his services. Our company is enjoying exceptionally fine trade and is in a prosperous and harmonious condition; harmony having been non-existent for some time past while W. P. Stark was an officer of the company.

"This simply is a case of a disgruntled stockholder with a fancied grievance, the apparent object being to hurt this company. He doubtless thinks his new company will be the gainer by this suit by obtaining the valuable business this company has built up over the world. He is now, and has been, for many years, a director in this company and has taken an active part in the conduct of its affairs and is largely responsible for its actions and policies. All of the old employees of the company many of whom have been with it from its inception, are still connected with it, and everything is running harmoniously and smoothly at the present time.

"The business of the company and its financial condition under the present management is away ahead of what it was a year and two years ago, while W. P. Stark was connected with the company.

"J. W. Matson, the attorney for the company, says that there is absolutely no merit in this suit and that the articles published in some of the Saturday morning St. Louis papers were certainly inspired by some one whose sole desire is to do the company as much injury as possible, and not to right even a fancied wrong. The people here fully understand the motives of this suit."

IDAHO TREE GROWERS PROTEST.

Nurserymen of Idaho, under the impression that the State University is entering into competition with them on an unfair basis, have made an appeal to the school to retire from the shade tree business, or take out a license as the regular nurseries do. Announcement that the forestry department intended to distribute shade trees at a nominal price in different sections of the state provoked the protest from the nurserymen. It was written by Charles T. Hawkes, of Caldwell, president of the State Nurserymen's Association, and was addressed to Dr. Shattuck. The letter, which follows, explains the nature of the complaint:

Dear Sir: It has come to the notice of several nurserymen of the state that the university, through its forestry department, is engaging

In the nursery business in that it is selling small shade trees to the public.

Many of us are indebted to you and your department for favors in the past and we choose to believe that you do not realize that you are competing with us in your new role. The business you are doing is probably quite small and does not "hurt us" very much, but on account of the principle of the thing, we feel inclined to ask you to desist from selling anything in the nursery line, since the business might be indefinitely expanded, both in yours and other departments of the state university, and since we fellows are under considerable expense for bonds and license fees that you do not have to meet.

Will you not kindly tell us if it will not be possible for you to meet our wishes in this matter, or else take out a regular license and furnish bond as the rest of us are compelled to do?

We have no objection to your distributing a few samples of the new varieties of shade trees you have tested and found useful in this region, but we think it should be without charge to the planter, since the state university is a public institution, supported by general taxation, and we are not willing to consider black walnut and black locust new, or unknown to the public at the present time.

Thanking you for your prompt consideration of this matter, we are,

Yours very truly,

CHARLES T. HAWKES,

President State Nurserymen's Association.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With Easter at our doors, both wholesalers and retailers are ready, having made extensive preparations. The show windows of the stores never looked so gorgeous and attractive as this year. Though we recently had heavy rains and a small cyclone and the temperature at present is near the freezing point, the prospect is that dry and sunny weather will prevail during Easter. The bulk of the shopping is done on Good Friday and Saturday, and both growers and retailers hope to do the same fine business as last year. With the exception of Easter lilies, all kinds of seasonable flowering plants are plentiful and in perfect condition. Ferns and foliage plants are fine, but the demand for these is limited. Growers who sell at the public markets have been handicapped considerably on account of the inclement weather, and even some of the most optimistic have lately been complaining.

It is reported by local seedsmen that, on account of the mild winter in the north, the shipping trade in early vegetables from local truck farms has not been so extensive as in past years, and the prices obtained for the finest head lettuce have scarcely paid for the packing.

Various Notes.

The Steckler Seed Co. reports a big rush in every department of its trade. Bruce Bros. have added a seed and plant department to their large poultry business and they express themselves as highly satisfied with their new venture. R. E.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Club Meeting.

At the March meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association it was decided to hold a flower show the week of November 2 in Convention hall. The show probably will be opened on Monday and continue through the week. Arrangements for the display will be started at the April meeting of the association.

A bill in the Legislature that provides for an appropriation of $60,000 for greenhouses for experimental work in floriculture and vegetable farming, which was introduced by Senator Ramsperger and Assemblyman Jackson, came in for considerable discussion at the meeting. Before adjournment the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, The growth of floriculture and the production of flowers and vegetables under glass has been the most notable in horticulture in this state in recent years and the large capital and number of people now employed demand that the increasing number of problems which threaten the industry, and with which the individual grower cannot cope because of lack of scientific knowledge, be given consideration by the agricultural experiment station, and,

Whereas, No provision has hitherto been made to equip the agricultural college and experiment station to carry on scientific investigations relating to greenhouse crops, be it

Resolved, That the Rochester Florists' Association, at its monthly meeting, heartily indorses the efforts of the New York State Federation of Florists' Clubs to secure the passage of a bill by the legislature making suitable appropriations for providing equipment for the teaching of floriculture and vegetable gardening.

A paper was read by A. H. Secker, "Growing Sweet Peas," and C. B. Ogston, superintendent of the conservatory of Mrs. William S. Kimball, who is an authority on cut flowers, gave a talk on carnations, illustrating his remarks with specimen blooms.

It was announced that two members of the association, J. N. Keller and C. B. Ogston, had been appointed judges at the National Flower Show, to be held in New York, starting April 5.

Walter Lawrence, of the Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, attended the meeting.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—Wm. H. Hall recently erected two more houses and installed a new steam heating system.

Osage, Ia.—Walter S. Hall has added a new propagating house, and has installed a new electric lighting system and a new watering and fertilizing system.

Glasgow, Ky.—Morgan Brents, formerly of this town but for many years a resident of Seattle, Wash., returned here recently and purchased what is known as the Scott homestead, in South Glasgow, where he will erect a greenhouse and grow flowers for the trade.

New American Beauty GERANIUM

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 our new American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on it for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty Color. The individual blooms measure 2 1/4 inches across. It is semi-double, medium dwarf, of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade: 2 1/2-in. pots, 50c each, $5.00 per doz.; 3-in. pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per doz., cash. Write for circulars in natural colors and prices on large lots.

NEW CARNATION BENORA

Strong rooted cuttings ready for immediate delivery

$6 00 per 100
$50 00 per 1000

This variegated carnation, sent out by Mr. Peter Fisher last season, is the finest variegated variety, and one of the very best carnations of any color, ever sent out.

It has immediately attained a commanding position among the very choicest sorts, and will add to Mr. Fisher's already enviable list of introductions. It is indispensable.

It is a very early and free bloomer, matures quickly, making very perfect flowers of the largest size on long stems; does not split the calyx.

WE'RE AHEAD considerably when it comes to a comparison of SNAPDRAGONS

Unlike the several strains advertised as the well known
New England Silver-pink Snapdragon, we have named ours

as this favorite rose is its nearest comparison as to color.

Every grower who has tested this strain pronounces it the best yet. Will you be among the number to buy a stock of this sterling Snapdragon that knows no enemies but makes friends wherever it finds a home? 10,000 strong plants, ready April 1. Price, $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. Cash with order, please.

G. E. BUXTON,

NASHUA, N. H.

MADISON, N. J.

The members of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club had a most enjoyable time at the annual carnation night, March 12.

Cottage Gardens, of Queens, N. Y., had Matchless in fine shape, securing a certificate of merit.

Dailedouze Bros., of Flatbush, N. Y., secured a certificate for a fine vase of Enchantress Supreme.

James D. Cockcroft, of Northport, L. I., had fine Northport, which had been previously certificated.

Wm. Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Pa., showed Dimple Widener. It is a fine carnation, well grown, and was awarded a certificate of merit.

Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y., had Wm. Eccles in fine contrast with its lighter colored competitors. This previously had been given a certificate of merit.

Traendly & Schenck, of New York, were awarded a certificate of merit for a fine vase of Salmon Beauty.

Wm. H. Duckham, of Madison, had Mrs. C. W. Ward and Wodenethe in fine condition. Robert Tyson had fine Wodenethe. Percy D. Whitney had Mrs. C. W. Ward and Wodenethe, fine.

G. F. Neipp, the veteran grower of Chatham, had splendid White Wonder and Gloriosa.

Ernest Wild, gardener to Chas. W. Harkness, had some splendid specimen plants of Schizanthus Wisetonensis. The committee awarded him $5 in addition to a cultural certificate.

C. J. W. Ottolander, of the F. & F. Nurseries, read an essay on "The Rarer Trees and Shrubs," as seen by him at the Arnold Arboretum. It was edifying and entertaining.

Wm. H. Duckham and Chas. H. Totty asked everyone to come, and to exhibit if possible, at the International Flower Show. We are to have a Madison day for visiting the great show and, while most of the gardeners will go several days, everyone will join and go with the citizens of Madison who have taken this up so patriotically. E. R.

Decorah, Ia.—W. T. Symonds & Son, of the Decorah Greenhouses, have a promising looking new carnation of their own hybridizing. They are preparing to build an addition to their range.

Bessemer, Ala.—Mrs. W. D. Brown, proprietor of the Colonial Greenhouses, reports that the winter has been an unusually mild one and that verbenas were blooming outdoors in January. Trade has been good and she has been unable at times to supply the demand for cut flowers.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

My Original SILVER PINK SNAPDRAGON

is reaching every part of the globe. It is traveling upon its record and good looks, and has more admirers than all other antirrhinums combined. There may be an occasional pleasing sport, but aside from this, seedlings will have every characteristic of their illustrious parent—the FAMOUS SILVER PINK. It is a distinct type, and is best described by the original name that we gave it. Its soft, silvery shade of pink is not found in any other flower, and is at its best in full sunshine, both indoors and out. Silver Pink has an established record. Plant it and you will have the best. It is truly a high-class novelty, and we offer it at small cost.

Price of seed—my own growing—$1.00 per packet of over 500 seeds; 8 packets, $2.50, delivered. Can still supply plants for bedding at $3.00 per 100, 200 for $5.00, by express. Cash must accompany all orders.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2 1/2-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business was fairly good last week, funeral orders being reported by some as quite heavy. Violets are now arriving in quantity from some of the East Haven growers and find a ready sale at good prices. Choice roses and carnations from some of the local growers are cleaning up nicely. Azaleas and bulbous stock continue to sell well. From present indications Easter trade will be up to the usual, some of the florists having booked a number of advance orders as early as March 15.

Various Notes.

Alfred Ostermann's store was attractive last week and he reports business as satisfactory, with violets and carnations selling well. He also reports heavy sales in green carnations and shamrocks for March 17.

Wm. H. Long is receiving choice roses from his brother's place in East Haven. Trade was much better last week than the week before, with quite a lot of funeral work.

Champion & Co. report business as being good. They were showing quantities of shamrocks and green carnations, which they had a big demand for March 17.

Rowden & Mitchell, of Wallingford, are sending in choice ferns, especially Cyrtomium falcatum. They are readily picked up by the stores.

The Doolittle Floral Co. has cleared out a magnificent lot of Easter plants, probably the finest stock in town. The Easter lilies were ready on time and were booked up early. The house of azaleas was a magnificent sight. Bulbous stock also is forced in immense quantities. Business at the store downtown is reported as satisfactory.

The S. H. Moore Co. reports business as being exceptionally good, with orders for funeral work quite heavy.

Genistas in exceptionally well grown plants, most artistically arranged in Chas. Munro's store, made as attractive a window display as any in town. He had a special sale of violets March 15, which cleaned up all the stock on hand.

Max Krausse sent in well grown shamrocks, which sold well last week.
